The Milan correspondent of the Excelsior telegraphs his paper that a dispatch to the Secolo from Lugano, Switzerland, says the police of Lugano have been instructed to make preparations to protect Prince von Buelow, German Ambassador to Rome, when he passes through that city on his way home.

Military writers are presenting the argument that war for Germany and Austria on a third frontier undoubtedly will make the resistance of the central empires on their other fronts more feeble, so much so that with the advent of Italy victory over Germany is set for the middle of the Summer.

GENEVA, Switzerland, May 11.—All Italian officers and men in Switzerland up to the age of 34 were ordered yesterday to rejoin their regiments immediately.

Austrian and Bavarian forces are concentrating in the Tyrol.

Shipments of freight from Italy to Germany through Switzerland have virtually ceased. Italian passenger train service to points on the Swiss frontier is diminishing daily.

CALLS NEUTRALS HELPLESS.

Danish Governor Thinks Nothing Can Change War Methods.

No immediate effect can be achieved by a congress of neutral nations called to take steps to prevent violations of the usages of civilization in the present European war, in the opinion of L. C. Hellweg-Larsen, Governor of St. Thomas, Danish West Indies, who is at the Imperial on his way home to Denmark on leave. Governor Hellweg-Larse, a distinguished Danish scholar and ethnologist, condemns unsparingly the destruction of the Lusitania.

"It was a fearful blow to civilization," he said yesterday. "I received the news by wireless on my way up from St. Thomas. I did not dream such a thing could be possible. Generally speaking, a congress of neutral nations would help the cases of neutrals who could combine in these dangerous times to safegard the lives and interests of their subjects and citizens.

"I do not believe at the present time, however, that such a congress could impose its views as to humanitarianism upon the belligerents. Nothing can hinder the war just now from being fought as the participants ordain. It would be exceedingly difficult to accomplish any immediate result in the way of making them conform to our ideas. As the facts now reveal themselves, this seems most unlikely. But later, certainly the benefits will be positive.

"The war has affected St. Thomas a great deal," said the Governor. "The island has been the chief station of the Hamburg-American Line in the West Indies, and of course all that trade was cut off by the war. Two German steamers are now lying there. Business which is dependent upon shipping, is almost at a standstill, but we have by harbor improvements going on, and these have enabled us to give employment to many persons whom war conditions had thrown out of their regular work.

"The improvements, undertaken because of the Panama Canal and our belief that St. Thomas is bound to become a great way-station of commerce between New York and other American ports and the Canal, and between Europe and the waterway, include big wharves, fitted with electric cranes for leading and unloading vessels, and great warehouses. We are also dredging the harbor to thirty feet.

"At present, although shipping is fat below normal, many ships are using St. Thomas as a coaling station, between New York and Colon. I think I can safely say we have the best harbor in the West Indies.

"We have been very careful to preserve strict neutrality since the beginning of the war. At this time reports were spread that we were supplying the Germans with stores. There was absolutely no truth in those rumors. We have been very strict.

"This is the first time I have been in New York since I went to St. Thomas four years ago. One of the most interesting things here to me is the Museum of Natural History. I have a collection of Carib relics, which I am interested in comparing with those in the museum. It is my belief that the Caribs were connected with the Indians of Central America and Southern Mexico, and had a similar civilization, though differently developed.

"St. Thomas is not a producing colony," said Governor Hellweg-Larson. "It depends upon shipping alone. We get our ordinary supplies mostly from the United States, and have to pay more for them since the war began, but we will have to stand that. St. Croix, the neighboring Danish island, raises a good deal of sugar cane and sea island cotton."

RUSH NEW SUBMARINES.

Hamburg Constructors Reported as Finishing Three a Month.

GENEVA, Switzerland, May 11, (Via Paris.)—A Swiss engineer who arrived here today from Hamburg said that the shipyards in that city were turning out three finished submarines a month. Two of them are of the larger class and one of the smaller type used for coast defense.

SAXON $395

Saving 45 Parts at a Stroke

The riding steadiness and comfort that are yours in a Saxon are provided by the Saxon cantilever type spring suspension. Springs are of vanadium steel.

Not only does this type of springs make the Saxon exceedingly comfortable to ride in. It also saves 45 parts. Think of it—45 parts saved by one idea of design.

Saxon was first in America to use cantilever springs of vanadium steel. No less than 15 makers of higher priced cars have since adopted them.

It is the same with other Saxon features. Saxon engineers, for instance, were first to use a small bore high speed motor—a motor that is at once light, efficient, powerful and very durable. Today, makers of higher priced cars are adopting lighter, stronger, more economical motors.

Saxon at $395 is a better automobile than could be bought only a few years ago for five times the price. It is the modern car.

GERMAN SOCIALISTS AGAINST THE WAR

ANTIS' MOVEMENT GROWING

Minority May Be Turned Into Majority and Split Is Inevitable in Any Case.

William English Walling, the well-known writer on Socialism, is in letter published in The New-York Globe yesterday denies that the Socialists of Germany are united in support of the war. He says that already 1,500,000 out of a total of 4,500,00 are opposed to it, and that this minority may be turned into a majority as the conflict progresses. His letter, written from Greenwich, Conn., says:

"If all of Germany's 4,500,000 Socialists supported the Kaiser's war it would, indeed, be true that they would add 'incalculable strength' to the war lord—'more than all the Krupp guns,' as Abraham Cahan said in The Globe of May 10. And it is true that 3,000,000 of these Socialists do support the German Government and all that it now stands for. But at the Reichstag session of March 20 thirty-two of the ninety-seven Socialist members present refused to give the Kaiser their moral or financial support. One of the absent members is a volunteer in the French Army; another has offered his services to France. All of which considerably weakens the value of the support of the other two-thirds of the Socialists.

"It has been known in Germany from the beginning of the war that a considerable group opposed it. Cahan is thoroughly well informed, and it is only his justifiable indignation because of Russia's treatment of the Jews that can explain his pro-Germanism and his failure to mention such facts as these:

"That Liebknecht is not alone, but that thirty-two Socialist members of the Reichstag now oppose the Government and the war.

"That this faction includes the two leading members of the Socialist Reichstag group, Haase, its Chairman, and Edward Bernstein, the world-renowned leader of Socialist moderates.

"That not only the best-known moderate Socialist thinker in the world, but also the best-known radical Socialist thinker, and—now that Bebel is dead—the highest of all German Socialist authorities, Karl Kantsky, is also opposed to the Socialists giving any support to the Government or the war beyond what they are compelled to give. (Kantsky declared this to be his position nearly two months ago), also in the party secret caucus he opposed the voting of the war loan on Aug. 4.)

"That Vorwärts, the party's official daily, has steadily opposed the Government and the war, being supported in this course by the Socialists of eight out of the nine Reichstag districts of Greater Berlin.

"That the Socialist papers of Leipsic, Bremen, and several other large cities took the same view.

"That two-thirds of the Socialists of Stuttgart indorsed Liebknecht and condemned the pro-war Socialists.

"That a bitter struggle is being waged among the Socialists of the two groups in Hamburg, Frankfort, Saxony, Westphalia, and other industrial centres—the anti-war Socialists representing more than a third of the party in each instance, (as party votes have demonstrated.)

"The reasons of the anti-war Socialists? They agree, with Bebel (in his memoirs, published a few years ago—just before his death), that victory for the Kaiser would make Prussian militarism and absolutism more despotic than ever in Germany. They want Czarism to be beaten, but they do not want their own tyrants to lay in the dust the two great democracies which have served them as models for fifty years.

"The one great practical and immediate aim of the German Socialists for years has been to establish equal suffrage in Prussia, as in France, and a responsible Ministry in Germany as in England. Moreover, they have been republicans—and a large part of them are republicans yet.

"As the maximum possible insult to Kaiserism they remained seated and silent when the Reichstag rose as usual to cheer the Kaiser at its closing session last June. It is true this action was decided upon only by a small majority. And the two-thirds of the party now supporting the Kaiser will doubtless prove loyal monarchists for some years to come. But the third that opposes the war is democratic and republican.

"There can be no question that this third was bitter to the invasion of Belgium—as Vorwärts indicated—and as bitterly opposes all such deliberate outrages, sanctioned from Berlin, such as the murder of the passengers of the Lusitania. One of its leaders—Ledebour—a Reichstag member from Berlin, recently resigned from the Executive Committee of the party in protest against its pro-war stand. When, on March 18, he protested that the threat of the German Government to burn three villages for every German village burned was barbarism, he was attacked on the floor by a number of Socialists. But he was supported by others, and by Vorwärts and the anti-war Socialists generally.

"About the same time the Socialists in the Prussian Landtag unanimously refused to grant the Prussian Government their financial support. The anti-war movement is growing. As the German Government becomes more and more barbarous, as the world's Socialists become more and more bitter against it, as it passes to worse and worse defeats, as German women and children begin to suffer, as the German Government has made the women and children of Belgium and Northern France suffer, (I refer to starvation and not of course to brutality,) the anti-war Socialists may yet become a majority.

"Whether they do or do not, a split is almost inevitable—and, indeed, has already taken place in one of the leading States of the empire, Württemburg."

WOMEN WOULD STOP ARMS.

Mrs. Bleakley's Plea at Convention of Daughters of Revolution.

A plea to the women of the world to join hands to check the European war was made yesterday by Mrs. Clara Rogers Bleakley, President General of the Daughters of the Revolution, in her opening address at the twenty-fourth annual convention of the organization, held in the Hotel St. George, Brooklyn. The 150 delegates present from all parts of this country applauded Mrs. Bleakley's reference to President Wilson, in which she urged the women of the society to give him whole-hearted support in his efforts to guide America through these trying times "with honor and without having to resort to arms.

"It is idle to presume we can do much at this time," said Mrs. Bleakley, "toward the settlement of the greatest war in the history of the world. But we can act along all lines to check the exportation, manufacture, and sale of arms. If the women of the world would all unite and join hands, the horror of strife and bloodshed would be stopped and we would have peace."

Praise for the Czar of Russia and the King of England for favoring prohibition evoked strong approval. Mrs. Bleakley declared that woman suffrage was a certainty in this city, and urged the women to prepare to accept the responsibilities which the right to vote would bring to them.

CALL BLOCKADE FAILURE.

German Decree Regarding Local Food Supplies Withdrawn.

BERLIN, May 11, (Via Amsterdam and London.)—The Reichs-Anzeiger announces the withdrawal, from May 8, of the Federal Council's decree of January ordering towns and rural communities to provide for their respective populations meat and tinned goods, and to take steps to assure a supply.

The Vossische Zeitung says that the withdrawal of this decree proves that Great Britain's plan to starve Germany is a failure.

ALLIES AGAIN ATTACK GALLIPOLI POSITIONS

PARIS, May 11.—The following official note concerning the operations in the Dardanelles was issued tonight:

"On the evening of May 8 the Franco-British forces operating in the south of the Gallipoli Peninsula delivered a general attack, supported by the guns of the allied fleet, against the Turkish positions, which already had been penetrated the day before.

"Our troops, with conspicuous spirit and courage, carried at the point of the bayonet several lines of trenches on the heights in the neighborhood of Krithia. On May 9 they consolidated and fortified themselves on the ground conquered the previous day. The Turks have made no attempt to deliver a counter-attack."

LONDON, May 11.—The total losses of the Turks on the Gallipoli Peninsula are estimated at 45,000 men. The hospitals in Constantinople are said to be so crowded that wounded are being sent to Konieh in Asia Minor.

Turkish troops are being transported from Smyrna to the Turkish seaports of Alexandretta and Adalia, says a dispatch received today from Athens by The London Evening Star, owing to the fear that a landing is about to be made at those places by forces of the Allies.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 10, via Amsterdam and London, May 11.—The following statement was issued today by the Turkish War Office:

"On the Dardanelles front the enemy made four desperate attacks near Avi Burnu Sunday night, but was repulsed by bayonet attacks and suffered heavy losses. Three enemy battalions were annihilated. Monday afternoon the enemy constantly carried away wounded to their boats.

"In the south, near Sedd el Bahr, the enemy attacked under the protection of naval guns, but owing to our counter-attacks his assault was unsuccessful."

AUSTRALIAN SUBMARINE SUNK?

Turks Report That It Was Trying to Approach Constantinople.

LONDON, May 11.—The Admiralty tonight issued the following statement:

"A Turkish official communication coming by way of Berlin and Amsterdam says the Australian submarine AE-2 has been sunk by Turkish warships while trying to enter the Sea of Marmora, and that the crew of three officers and twenty-nine men were taken prisoners.

"No confirmation of this report so far has been received at the Admiralty."

108,760 CANADIAN TROOPS.

Number Soon Will Be Increased to 150,000—Ohio Man Killed.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 11.—Canada had 108,760 men under arms, at the front and in Canada, on May 1, according to an official announcement made today. The Government expects that the number will be increased to 150,000 by mid-Summer.

In an additional Canadian contingent casualty list, received today, the name of Private Thomas Connedy of Struthers, Ohio, appears among the killed.

MONTREAL, May 11.—Major Hamilton Gault, who raised the Princess Patricia Regiment, has again been wounded, according to cabled advices received here today by friends. Major Gault had just returned to the front, following a disabling arm wound, when he was again injured in action, this time in the arm and leg.

A Robe does not make a Judge—A Close Imitation of a SILVERTOWN Tire Tread does not make a

SILVERTOWN

The Silvertown Cord Tire embodies five unique principles, which make it superior to any tire on the market.

1—It is the Strongest Tire Made. By that is meant it has the highest breaking strain in pounds per square inch of internal pressure.

2—It is the Most Economical Tire Made for either gasoline or electric consumption. A car equipped with these tires has more power and consumes less fuel per mile.

3—It is Immune from Stone Bruising—the big cause of blowouts.

4—Moisture Getting into the Body of this Tire does not Rot the Fabric, as the cords are thoroughly impregnated with rubber which prevents the moisture from attacking the cotton.

5—It can be Easily, and what is Most Important, can be Successfully Repaired.

All these things are due to the 2-ply rubber-covered, rubber impregnated cable cord construction not found in any tire made in the United States except the Goodrich SILVERTOWN Cord.

Made and sold in the U. S. only by The B. F. Goodrich Co.—fully protected by U. S. patents.

You can always tell a Silvertown—it is Hall-Marked by TWO RED DISCS

AN ERROR SPILLS GIANTS INTO DEFEAT

The Giants almost crawled out of their slump at the Polo Grounds yesterday at the expense of Cincinnati. They had a game nearly won, when one of their own members, Art Fletcher, made a life-sized error and prevented their over-due recuperation. With the ninth inning breezily disappearing, Fletcher made a wild throw to first after getting Joe Wagner's grounder and the ball whizzed past first base, as Joe Wagner went on to second base.

Then the next two batsmen went out and Tommy Clarke, of Corona L. I., came through with a single and Von Kolnitz scored with the tieing run. The tenth inning found our old friend opportunity knocking at the Giants' door, but the flat had been vacated and the "To Rent" sign was hanging out. Three Giants wedded to the bases and only one out. That lay-out oozed with possibilities but Larry Doyle and Hans Lobert, instead of jamming one of their stranded mates home, could not hit the ball out of the reach of a rheumatic.

The eleventh inning came along in due time and what little aid Fletcher did not give to the Cincinnatis, Chief Myers made up for and perpetrated a passed ball in time to permit Von Kolnitz to score the winning run for the crippled Buck Herzog's Reds. The ill tidings are 2 to 1.

The game developed into a pitching match between Rube Benton and Ralph Stroud. Both pitched high-class ball, but Benton's support did not happen to be so shot full of holes as Stroud's was, so he won out. The Reds could not bunch hits on Stroud, as he refused to be lenient when hits were needed to push in runs. As things turned out they did not need these additional hits, because Fletcher's errors answered the purpose just as well.

In the early stages there were some slick fielding stunts. In the fourth inning, after Griffiths was safe on Fletcher's error, Joe Wagner hit a single through second. Griffiths tried to get to third, but Doyle made a fine recovery and threw the runner out at third. In the same inning Groh made a neat one-handed stop of Lobert's burner and tossed him out at first.

Up to the sixth inning the Giants had only one hit off Benton. In the sixth Murray led off with a single and Stroud sacrificed. Burns was out at first and Red went to third. Then Doyle came through with a smash to centre which scored Murray. At this point Doyle discovered that the Cincinnati team was in deep sleep, for he stole second before any one on the Reds knew about it. The first they heard about it was when some one in the grandstand told them.

The tragic ninth started when Joe Wagner, who resembles Hans Wagner only because he also wears a baseball uniform, rolled a grounder to Fletcher. "Fletch" threw it on the ground and it rolled far past Brainard at first, Wagner going to second. Wingo, batting for Olson, skied to Robertson, and Brown, batting for Mollwitz, fanned. Then Clarke introduced his single, which scored Wagner, and the wrangle was deadlocked. Another error by Fletcher made life miserable for Stroud in the tenth. He threw Leach's grounder so high to first base that Brainard had to climb ten feet in the air to get it. Soon after this Brainard pulled his foot off the bag on a play on Twombly, which added to Stroud's troubles. He fooled both of them, and pitched the Giants out of the hole.

In the Giants' half of the tenth, they choked the bases with Giants, with one out, and Doyle was at the bat. He punched an easy grounder at Wagner and Murray was forced at the plate. Lobert then ended all hope by rocketing to Wee Tom Leach.

In the eleventh inning Von Kolnitz doubled down the right field foul line. Killifer sacrificed him to third, and Clarke walked. Chief Meyers failed to get familiar enough with one of Stroud's shoots, and let the ball slip past him, and Von Kolnitz romped home with the victory.

Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse was at the game and promised that the suffragists attend next Tuesday's game. It is going to be an occasion to remember. Don't miss it, is Mrs. Whitehouse's advice. The suffragettes have promised to give each player who scores a run $5. The score:

PHILADELPHIA, May 11.—Pittsburgh's winning streak, which had reached six straight, was broken when Philadelphia won today's game, 4 to 2. YANKEES GET ONLY THREE HITS, ONE RUN

Hagerman Passes Ten Batsmen and Forces in New York's Tally.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 11.—The Indians put on their war paint today to greet Bill Donovan and his bunch of pennant chasers. Result, Indians, 3; Yankees, 1. And the visitors got that one run by grace of Hagerman's generosity, for a base on balls inserted when the bases were very much crowded, scored the lone tally.

The game was a hummer. Hagerman, though wild, was almost unhittable, and his support was perfect. Time and again runners were nipped by inches. In the eighth Pipp, who had got a triple in the sixth only to have it wasted, drove the ball to deep centre. It ought to have been a homer, but Leibold by a long sprint got under it. There were two men on at the time so it is easy to see what Leibold did for his team today.

Boone, for the Yanks, distinguished himself in the fifth after he and Peckinpaugh had rather messed up things a bit. With one out Turner had singled and Chapman sent a dinkey bounder to Keating. The pitcher tossed the ball to second for a force out, but no one was there. Jackson was easy, but Graney sent the ball between second and first with rifle shot speed for wore all the earmarks of a double. But Boone ran over, grabbed the ball with one hand and got the runner. That play cut off two runs.

Evidently the Indians decided it was time to dim one of Wild Bill Donovan's Rays, so they landed on Keating at the start. Leibold singled and Turner got a pop fly that was safe. Chapman laid down a nice sacrifice bunt, and Jackson sent a runner home by a single that leaped over Boone's head. Graney was out at first as Boone held Turner on third. Then Jackson and Turner tried to work a double steal and Turner got caught at it.

In the third Keating made the error of walking Hagerman which gave Leibold a chance to force him and steal second. Sweeney threw to centre trying hard to head off Little Nemo, and Leibold went on to third, scoring on a sizzling drive by Chapman. At this point Jackson decided it was time to show what he was good for, and drove the ball far over High's head for a triple. But these two runs ended the Indians' work in the scoring department, Boone saving the day for Keating in the fifth.

Hagerman did not give the Yanks much of a chance for seven innings, and would have had a shut-out except for his wildness in the eighth when, after Leibold had "saved his bacon" for him, he forced in Hartzell. Sweeney had to retire in the fourth as Sweeney complained of an injured finger that caused some wild heaves to bases. The score:

CHICAGO, May 11.—Washington, the first of the Eastern clubs to invade Chicago, shut out the locals 2 to 0 today. TRYOUTS FOR CAMBRIDGE.

Harvard Stadium First Choice for National A. A. U. Championship Trials.

Eastern tryouts for the national amateur track and field championships to be held in connection with the Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco in August will take place on the afternoon of June 26. The place for holding the games has not been definitely selected as yet by the Amateur Athletic Union, but a strong fight is being waged for the games by Cambridge, Mass., New York City, and Philadelphia. The prospects are that the trials will be contested in the Harvard Stadium at Cambridge, although no definite conclusion has been reached.

New York appears to be out of the running because of the lack of a suitable place to hold the games, while Philadelphia will have its fill in the intercollegiate championships. Therefore it is logical that Cambridge is the best site for the sports.

More money probably can be realized in Cambridge than in any other city in the East. Bostonians are strong for amateur athletics and give them liberal support. When the trials for the Olympic games were held there in 1912, $10,000 was realized by the Olympic Committee, and the National Championship Committee believes $5,000 can be cleared by giving the games to Boston. New York would hardly support the meet to that extent, nor would Philadelphia.

Frederick W. Rubien, Chairman of the National Championship Committee, said yesterday that all the New York clubs would be strongly represented if the trials did go to the Stadium. There was talk not more than a month ago that the Irish-American A. C. and New York A. C. would refuse to send their men to the Hub owing to the added expense they would incur, but according to Rubien these organizations have been won over, and will agree to send representative squads to any city the committee selects for the tryouts. The arrangements have practically been left to Messrs. Rubien and Weeks of this city and Messrs Babb and Lill of Boston and Pawling of Philadelphia.

The A. A. U. expects to make enough money out of the trials to help pay a good part of the expenses to San Francisco of the winners and possibly other point scorers. The exposition athletic authorities have not yet stipulated how much they will advance for the Eastern team.

Chicago probably will stage the Western tryouts and will know very likely in another week.

Montclair Academy Athletic Field.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., May 11.—Montclair Academy passed a milestone in its history yesterday. Headmaster John G. MacVicar made the announcement that the school has acquired within ten minutes' walk of the academy eight acres of land for use as an athletic field. Mr. MacVicar said: "War times find the school the largest in its history. Next year bids fair to be still larger. These numbers made a new athletic field necessary. A friend was needed who would buy such a field and meet taxes, even over a period of twenty years if necessary. This friend who has made the new field possible is Abel I. Culver of Montclair." Mr. Culver's son, Winthrop P. Culver, who has been in the academy for seven years, graduates this year with an excellent record. Plans for the field include a field house costing $8,000, batting cages, separate football and baseball fields, and tennis courts, which will be given by a friend. Last night the students went to the home of Mr. Culver and gave him a serenading.

N. Y. U. Athletic Election.

At the annual meeting of the New York University Athletic Association, of which every undergraduate in the College of Arts and the School of Applied Science at University Heights is a member, the association elected its officers for the coming year. Dr. John P. Munn, President of the association last year, as well as Professor Thomas W. Edmondson, who acted as Treasurer, were re-elected unanimously. The undergraduates elected to the remaining offices were as follows: First Vice President, Martin J. White, '16; Second Vice President, Edgar C. Waugh, '16; Corresponding Secretary, Everett C. Hagbloom, '16; Recording Secretary, H. D. Gunther, '16, and Member at Large, Alvin Lent, '16.

United Hunts Race for Ponies.

An extra race for ponies that have not won this year to carry 160 pounds, at about one-quarter of a mile, has been added for the second day of the United Hunts Racing Association meeting at Belmont Park Terminal Wednesday, May 19. The match between Ben Cabell and Web Carter has been declared off, Ben Cabell having bled in his last work. Owing to the illness of F. Ambrose Clark, who is down with typhoid fever, the race for the Broad Hollow Cup for hunters, which was to have been held on Mr. Clark's place at Westbury on Saturday, May 22, has been declared off until further notice.

New York A. C.'s Spring Games.

Fourteen handicap events and a one-mile relay race are on the program for the New York Athletic Club's annual Spring games at Travers Island on Saturday, June 5. Entry blanks for the games were issued yesterday. Entries will close with Paul Pilgrim on May 29. The events scheduled are: 100 and 200 yard dashes, quarter-mile, half-mile, and three-mile runs; one-mile walk, pole vault, running high jump, running broad jump, 120-yard high hurdles race, throwing the javelin, and 35-pound weight and putting the 16-pound shot.

Cycles to Race, Rain or Shine.

The bicycle and motor paced races at the Sheepshead Bay Velodrome, which start May 22, will be run rain or shine, the management having arranged to cover the entire track with a canvas purchased from the Barnum and Bailey circus. Many important events were called off at the Brighton track last season on account of drizzling rains, but this will be prevented by the covering of the track and grand stands from one end to the other, giving the new course complete protection from rain and fog.

Joe Fogler, who has won more money in America and Europe than any other six-day rider, was the first pedal pusher to try out the new track at the Bay. Fogler worked for two hours yesterday on the new saucer, and was highly pleased with the course.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., May 11.—New York University defeated Wesleyan, the conquerers of Williams, on Andrus Field this afternoon in a loosely played game by the score of 5 to 3. McLelland, Wesleyan's pitcher, lost the game, his error in the opening session letting in two runs and in the eighth weakened at a critical point, allowing two more to walk. Widdoes, the first man up for Wesleyan in the ninth, cracked out a three-bagger, but was left on base when Wolf fanned the first two and "Home Run" Lanning of Wesleyan flied out to the infield. PINCH HITTERS WIN GAME FOR CHIFEDS

Wardmen Leading in Ninth, Then Lose in Hard Batting Rally.

Chicago helped celebrate the anniversary of the opening of the Federal League Park in Brooklyn yesterday by piling up a cluster of hits that netted four runs in the ninth inning and defeated the Brookfeds 6 to 4 in the opening game of the series between the teams. The ninth inning started with the score 4 to 2 in favor of Magee's warriors, and although the Chicago batsmen had been touching up Don Marion frequently they had not been able to score more than twice. But in that ninth inning the Chifeds called up their last line of reserve batters and each one responded nobly with a hit.

Fischer, the first man up for Chicago in the ninth, flied out to Anderson, but Holt juggled Wickland's grounder and then the storm broke. Mann, batting for Smith, slashed a single to centre, Wickland going to third. Then Hanford, batting for Farrell, clouted another to the same place and Wickland tallied. Beck smashed the ball to centre for a double, scoring Mann and Hanford, and scored a moment later on Wilson's single to left, Wilson having been summoned to bat for Prendergast. Wilson was too anxious to get around those bags and was caught between first and second when he tried to tsretch his hit. Zeider singled, but the agony was over when Zwilling flied out to Evans.

Chicago's first run came in the third when Beck tripled to left and scored on Zeider's single. Another triple in the sixth netted the Westerners a run. Flack tripled to right and came home when Fischer singled along the first base line. Thereafter Don Marion kept the upper hand until the ninth, but in that fatal inning the mystery of Don's delivery was solved.

The Brookfeds scored one in the second. Benny Kauff was hit by a pitched ball, stole second, went to third on Farrell's error, and came home on Cooper's hit. In the sixth Anderson drew a pass and was sacrificed to second by Westerzil. Lee Magee flied out to centre, but Kauff came through with a double, scoring Anderson, and Steve Evans scored Kauff on a double to centre. Holt walked in the seventh and scored on Anderson's triple to the scoreboard. This tally gave the Brookfeds a two-run lead, but the Chicagos could not recognize defeat when it was staring them in the face, and when the reserves were rushed into the fray Magee's crew were helpless. Stovall Day a Rout for Newark.

NEWARK, May 11.—George Stovall's Kansas City team was the victor in the first game of the series here today between the two rival clubs—rivals because of the fact that Newark wanted the Kawfed outfit and got the Hoofeds instead. Kansas City won with ease by a score of 7 to 0. It was Stovall Day, and the Packers took great pride in paying homage to their leader, who was presented with a bouquet of flowers by local admirers before the game began. Rawlings's sensational all-around playing and the pitching of Chief Johnson weer the features. The score:

First Ball Pitched a Homer.

BUFFALO, May 11.—Kelley's home run in the first inning was the only tally in today's 1-to-2 victory of Pittsburgh over the Buffeds. Kelley connected with the first ball pitched. It took a sharp turn from short left over the pavilion fence. The local batsmen had momentary hope in the final inning, when hits by Dalton and Louden landed the former on third base, but Rogge held him there. Score:

Bender Wins for Terrapins.

BALTIMORE, May 11.—Baltimore took advantage of St. Louis's misplays and its pitchers' wildness this afternoon and won out, 6 to 5, after Chief Bender was touched up for four runs in the opening round. MUST USE NEW AXLES.

Rule Will Be Strictly Enforced in Indianapolis 500-Mile Race.

Rule 14 of the Indianapolis motor speedway, specifying that axles on all cars in the next Indianapolis 500-mile race must be new two days before the contest, will be enforced to the letter, says Carl G. Fisher, the speedway President.

It had been brought to President Fisher's ears that Dario Resta, star entrant in the race by virtue of his recent dual victory in the Vanderbilt and Grand Prize races, had no extra axle for his car, and said he could not get one made to suit him. Therefore he would start with his old axle or not at all.

Fisher, while firm on the point of not permitting Resta to violate a speedway rule, which, he stated, was known a year ago, suggested that a way out of the difficulty would be for Resta not to use his car in practice, but to get accustomed to the course in his old Vanderbilt and Grand Prize racer.

This scheme appealed to Resta, so that the trouble was settled in an amicable manner. Resta's 500-mile race car, incidentally, is new, having been built for the last French Grand Prix, but never used in that contest.

Bookmakers are already getting out their slates for the race, advance bets being posted not only as to who will win the race, but who will start the contest.

Odds are being laid at 10 to 1 that all European cars will qualify, in which event they are expected to rule at better than even money against the field, numbering nine out of thirty-three starters. The European cars involved are J. De Palma's Delage, R. De Palma's Mercedes, Resta's Peugeot, and two others, the Sunbeams, with Chassagne, Porporato, Grant, and Limberg, and Oldfield's Bugatti.

Maurice Daly Outpoints Klinger.

Maurice Daly easily defeated Jacob Klinger, the Austrian amateur, in an exhibition 18.2 balkline match at his Forty-ninth Street academy last night by a score of 250 to 149. Mr. Daly was in good form, and made high runs of 28, 28, and 48, running out his string in the twenty-third inning for an average of 20-23. Klinger tallied 33 and 71 points in his best periods.

DODGERS SWAMPED BY CUBS' INVASION

Nap Rucker Hit Hard and Chicago Players Win First Eastern Game by 5 to 1.

When Roger Bresnahan unleashed his Cubs at Ebbets Field yesterday afternoon Robbie's expectant boys found them full-grown grizzlies. The visitors showed their teeth and growled and the Dodgers streaked it for cover. As a result the Cubs had things all their own way. They romped around the bases care-free, batted out safeties when the fancy came, and in general disported themselves in a way that made the Brooklyns weary in mind and body. The Cubs enjoyed their welcome on their first Eastern invasion immensely. They showed the fans across the bridge that their pets were just rank pretenders and when the nine mournful innings were over pocketed the game by a score of 5 to 1 and shuffled off the field with a gleeful laugh.

It was not the loss of the game, however, which hurt the most. The fans have borne many a crushing defeat at the Brooklyn ball park without a murmur. Repetition has calloused their sensibilities in that respect, but when you tear down and shatter to a thousand bits the one idol which Brooklyn has worshipped, almost, it seems since the dawn of baseball, then you have wrought bitterness untold. Just such a thing happened yesterday and at exactly 4:48 P. M. Nap Rucker was the dethroned idol. The Cubs will tell you that Nap is still a great pitcher. He is —from the Cubs' standpoint. He passed the ball up so enticingly that the Windy City players simply could not resist smashing it for doubles, triples, and even a home run. Charlie Ebbets has a tender spot in his heart for Nap or he probably would not have lasted through eight innings of yesterday's game, in which time he gave fourteen safeties to the visitors for a total of twenty-three bases. Heine Zimmerman was the worst offender. He got a single, a double, and a triple.

Robbie's boys never did fully discover what sort of wish George Pierce put on the ball. It was something uncanny, however, to make the Dodger sluggers hit so ineffectually. For six innings only nineteen men faced the Cub moundsman. Then in the seventh for a few minutes it looked as if there was going to be a break in the Brooklyn cloud of gloom. The fans clapped and Stengel, who was out on the coaching line, acted like a wild man. Daubert led off by dropping a Texas Leaguer over short. Only one hit had been made from Pierce's delivery up to that time, and the second was so unexpected that he passed Ed Zimmerman. "Here we go," shouted Stengel, as he danced around. Wheat did go, but by the strike out route, and Cutshaw and Myers went back to the bench after futile attempts to drive the ball out of the infield. When Schultz led off with another single in the eighth hope got a new lease on life. Miller fouled out and then Hummel, batting for Rucker, sent a single to right. O'Mara walked and the bases were full. Daubert hit to Fisher and he threw out O'Mara at second, Schultz scoring Brooklyn's lone tally on the play. The rally died when Zimmerman flied out to Henie Zimmerman.

The first count for Chicago came in the second. Saier sent one of Rucker's slants hurtling over the right field fence and ambled slowly around the bases. There was no further scoring until the sixth. Then Heine Zimmerman sent out one that was good for two bases, slow fielding aiding him in stretching what should have been a single. He went to third on Saier's foul fly, and scored on a sacrifice fly by Williams. Pierce was the next to score. He doubled to left centre and came across the plate when Good lived up to his name and drove the ball just inside the right field foul line. In the eighth Heine Zimmerman tripled and scored on Williams's Texas Leaguer over short. Archer singled to right and a wild throw by Ed Zimmerman to stop him when he started down to second let Williams come through with a run. The score:

GLOVERSVILLE WANTS NO BOXING CLUB—MAY ABANDON GARDEN HORSE SHOW

BOXING NOT WANTED IN GLOVERSVILLE

State Commission Holds Up Darling Club's License Because of Town's Petition.

The manly art of fisticuffs may have been in favor among the ancient Greews, it may have flourished in the Roman amphitheatre, it may have come down with the Anglo-Saxons through Merrie England, it may hve been indulged in more or less throughout this land of the free and the home of the brave; but the gentle science of swat hit on awful snag when it tried to establish itself in Gloversville, N. Y.

In accordance with the law of this Commonwealth, certain sportive citizens of Gloversville, N. Y., want to establish a boxing club in that centre of art and culture. In fact, the movement has gone so far as to enter an application for a license with the State Athletic Commission. The club is to be called the Darling Athletic Club of Gloversville, N. Y. Surely, it is an attractive name.

Gloversville, N. Y., has a population of some 22,000 souls. In the same proportion, as it takes all kinds and sorts of people to make up a world, so it takes all kinds and sorts to make up a centre of culture like Gloversville. As soon as it was learned that there was scheme afoot to have a boxing club in Gloversville a great wave of righteousness swept over the place. What! Boxing in Gloversville? Whoever heard of such impertinence?

Gloversville immediately become excited. It has not been excited for a long time, and this opportunity was eagerly grasped. There are those in Gloversville who think that a boxing club would bring a blemish to the hamlet's fair name. There are others there who believe that Fisticuffs in the Opera House would give a lot of citizens a chance to have an evening's enjoyable sport.

The State Athletic Commission, in its sanctum in Park Row, yesterday had before it the application of the Darling A. C. Chairman Frank O'Neill, with fellow Commissioners James Price and John Bloch, were about to pursue the usual routine in matters of this sort and grant the license when, lo and behold, a great storm of Gloversville protest arose, and the commission was in a quandary.

Seldom has Chairman O'Neill and his associates entertained such distinguished company in their sanctum. In the past such celebrities as Knockout Smith, Brassy Hayes, Battling Levinsky, and Cyclone Jones have visited the place—yes, and even white hopes and fight managers who wear their hats and cigars at an angle of 45 degrees and do not pronounce their "G's." But never before such a distinguished company as that of yesterday.

In this party was Mayor M. Schermerhorn, Judge W. C. Mills, Alderman William Filmer, and City Attorney W. H. Maider, all represented by their New York counsel, Clark L. Jordan. They appeared to oppose the granting of the license for the boxing club.

They said that at least 10,000 of Gloversville population were dead set against boxing, or, in fact, fighting of any kind, national or international. They are for peace in the broadest sense of the word. They had with them long strings of petitions signed by ministers, five bank Presidents, the Superintendent of the Board of Education, and the head of the Gloversville Y. M. C. A., the janitor of the big school, and numerous other folks.

The State Athletic Commission was stunned. Heretofore its arduous duties have been to grant licenses to boxing clubs conducted by worthy people in accordance with the majesty of the law. This wave of protest was new to them. They had never before considered a license on its protest, but only on its recommendation.

So the commission did the only thing that a wise commission could do. They laid the matter on the table. It still lies there, and with it is the request that "flowers please be omitted."

There was another Gloversville citizen at the meeting, too. He was Abraham Allenberg, an attorney representing the Darling A. C. He told the commission about all the good fellows there were in Gloversville who wanted boxing, and he said that if the commission would wait until next week he would bring down a petition signed by 12,000 people who are in favor of boxing up there.

It seems that in this overwhelming Gloversville protest against the sport of our ancestors there is a "nigger in the woodpile." The Darling Theatre, where the club plans to hold its bouts, is owned by a widow, who, it seems, mortgaged the property, and the mortgage is overdue. The mortgagee is lined up with the opponents of the club, so if the license is granted, the opposers threaten to foreclose, thereby causing the widow some embarrassment.

Mr. Allenberg, for the club, delivered a speech on personal liberty which would have pleased even the late Patrick Henry. The other side, the opponents to boxing, said things about the moral righteousness of Gloversville which would make a stone weep tears. It is a question that will take a Solomon to decide.

The organizers of the club are Samuel Mirbach, President; Walter C. Johnson, Secretary and Treasurer, and Charles Berry, Vice President.

BOXING FILM HEARING.

Federal Court of Appeals to Decide Willard-Johnson Movie Case.

PHILADELPHIA, May 11.—Argument was heard in the United States Court of Appeals here today in the case involving the right to bring into this country films of the Willard-Johnson fight at Havana. The three Judges of the court held the case under advisement.

Frederick F. Freed, Collector of the Port of Newark, refused to allow the entrance of the films and was upheld by Federal Judge Thomas Haight of Jersey City. The Judge denied the application of T. Laurence Weber for an injunction to restrain the Collector from interfering with Weber in entering films through the Newark Custom House.

It was claimed that the law under which the Collector acted was unconstitutional because Congress exceeded its powers in the commerce clause.

Counsel for those interested in the films said they were not an article of commerce and therefore should be admitted.

PROTEST BOXING BILL.

Clubs Ask Governor Whitman for a Hearing on Proposed Measure.

A petition protesting agains tthe signing of the Malone Boxing bill by Governor Whitman has been prepared and circulated among the boxing clubs of the State of New York and will be presented to his Excellency tomorrow. The petition begs the Governor for a hearing for the representatives of the boxing clubs.

The principal grievance of the boxing clubs against the Malone bill, which was framed to supersede the Frawley law, is the raising of the State tax on the gross receipts from 5 to 7½ per cent. After stating that the tdditional 2½ per cent. tax would impose an impossible burden on the clubs, the petition says, in part:

The theory of taxation is that taxes are imposed as a compensation for something received by the taxpayer. What do the boxing clubs receive from the State for this additional burden? Nothing. Our business scope is not extended. We get nothing in return from the Government. Our status is the same as it was prior to the proposed emendment to Chapter 719 of the laws of 1911.

This additional revenue which the 2½ per cent. tax will give to the State cannot go to the support of the Government, as the salaries and expenses of the proposed incoming commission will eat up the tax before it reaches the State Treasury; and it is reasonable to assume that the State will discover a deficiency. The object of a tax is to raise money for public purposes, not to create no woffices.

Practically every club in the State, of which there are now fifty in operation, has signed the petition, which was drawn and circulated by the Brighton Beach Sorting Club.

MIDDLEWEIGHTS AT RINK.

Victory for Clabby Over Chip May Give Him Match with Coffey.

A victory for Jimmie Clabby over George Chip tonight, at St. Nicholas A. C., may give the Western middleweight a match with Jim Coffey at a local club. Billy Gibson, Manager of Coffey, is looking around for a suitable opponent for his protege, and as there is no heavyweight in sight, Bibson may accept a bout with Clabby for ten rounds. Clabby recently in Milwaukee offered to box Gunboat Smith, but the offer was declined. Chip arrived from New Castle, Penn., yesterday and his bout with Clab by will mark his first appearance at a New York club, and with a match with Mike Gibbons in sight he will work hard to get a decision. Both boxers have been in training for several weeks and will enter the ring in good condition. As they are hard hitters, a fast bout is assured.

An excellent semi-final has been arranged with Willie Doyle and Joe Mooney as the contestants. A six and two four round bouts will complete the bill.

Substitute Bouts at Harlem Club.

Young Goldie knocked out Bobby Moore in the fifth round of a ten-round bout at the 135th Street A. C. last night. Moore was substituted at the last minute for Johnny Burt, whom the club physician refused to allow to box. Although Moore showed flashes of speed and form he was not in condition, and Goldie had no trouble in winning. The first round was even, but in the second Goldie forced the go, and his aggressive work put Moore on the defensive. Moore opened the third in a burst of speed and twice staggered Goldie with left hooks to the jaw, but Moore was not able to continue his aggressiveness and soon Goldie was jabbing him all over the ring. Even in the fifth, just before he was sent down for the count, Moore landed some stingers on Goldie, but he did not have the stamina to keep up his punching. Goldie's weight was 133 and Moore weighed in at 130.

Jimmy Harrington was substituted for Jack Dorman in the opening ten-round bout against Artie Walsh and was defeated. Walsh had a big advantage in weight over Harrington. In the other ten-round bout Young Peterson (colored) won from Kid Johnson, (colored.)

SCHOOL LUNCH BENEFITS.

Educational, Social, and Economic Purposes Fostered by Movement.

School lunches have become established in a large number of our cities, and a defense for their institution is now unnecessary. The maintenance of such a service is no longer defended solely on the basis of the needs of the poorer classes, but is encouraged in ways to avert the criticism that the school lunch leads to pauperizing and to the neglect of maternal responsibility in the home. The benefits of a well-chosen warm lunch usually supplied at the cost of the materials and service, have impressed both teachers and parents, so that even the well-to-do commend and approve this latest innovation in the routine of the school day.

As a rule, the school lunch room provides better food than the street vender. In most places the foods are chosen by persons trained in the field of dietetics, and the variety of dietary articles offered at one cent a portion is frequently quite impressive. It includes soups, salads, sandwiches, frlits, puddings, and other dishes.

The New York School Lunch Committee, in co-operation with the Bureau of Welfare of School Children of the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, for example, has maintained a service available to over 24,000 children in seventeen public schools situated in districts in which the need of such service is pressing. The registration has run as high as 2,353. In addition to this noon warm lunch service, the committee has operated a special 3-cent warm lunch of milk and crackers at 10 A. M., for anaemic, ungraded and crippled classes. It begins to appear that the school lunch movement has engendered certain features which promise to contribute to the general welfare in a direction almost as important as that of the proper nourishment of the body.

Education and social possibilities, at first unforeseen, are being brought to notice. The children of the well-to-do parents and the children of the poor have learned to sit quietly as one family to talk pleasantly with each other, to eat their food properly; and many acts of courtesy and generosity have been encouraged. The appeal which the school lunches have made has not infrequently been manifested by mothers who have had their interest in respect to special foods and dietary procedures aroused.

"Thus," says The Journal of the American Medical Association, "the school lunch scheme has fostered educational and social as well as economic purposes."

TENNIS CHAMPION IN WINNING FORM

Miss Bjurstedt Loses Only Three Games in Three Matches—Surprise in Doubles.

Three-set matches ruled in the tennis tournament for the women's Metropolitan championship in singles yesterday on the West Side Tennis Club courts at Forest Hills. Continuing in superb form, Miss Anne Sheafe of the Longwood Cricket Club of Boston reached the round before the semi-final by defeating successively Miss Ina Kissel, 6–0, 2–6, 6–3, and Miss Clare Cassel, 6–3, 6–3, and became a dangerous contender for the title.

Miss Sheafe is only 18 years old and one of the smallest players in the tournament. She has a strong forehand stroke and shows up effectively with the backhand. In placing she is witchlike in accuracy. When she enticed her opponents to the net or forced them to the side lines Miss Sheafe smashed the ball in all directions with a speed that was surprising. The Boston player did not play quite as strong in the first match as she did in the second, but showed good all-round form in both contests.

Miss Molla Bjurstedt of Norway, the national indoor champion, defeated Miss Hilah C. French in straight sets without losing a game. The title holder is in splendid form and is the real attraction of the tournament. She slashed the ball over with astonishing speed and it was seldom returned. Miss Bjurstedt has won three matches, taking six straight sets for the loss of but three gances, scoring thirty-six against her opponents.

The defeat of Mrs. S. F. Weaver and Mrs. Rawson Wood by Miss Miriam Bladgen and Miss E. C. Lindley was the surprise of the first two rounds of the doubles championship. Mrs. Weaver and Mrs. Wood were the runners-up to Miss Marie Wagner, and Miss Clare Cassel in last year's championship and were expected to figure again in the title round. The winning team showed excellent combination work and took the match in straight sets. In the singles both Miss Bladgen and Miss Lindley were eliminated in the first round.

Miss Bjurstedt, with Miss Florence Ballin as a partner, kept up her form in the doubles, winning from Mrs. Robert Le Roy and Miss Gertrude Della Torre in the first round and defeating Miss Bessie Holden and Mrs. A. Humphries in the second. The summary:

Women's Metropolitan Lawn Tennis Championship Singles—Second Round—Miss Marion Vanderhoef defeated Miss Edna Shepard, 6—1, 6—4; Miss Anne Sheafe defeated Miss Ina Kissel, 6—0, 2—6, 6—3; Miss Hilah C. French defeated Mrs. Robert Le Roy, 7—5, 6—1.

Third Round—Mrs. R. A. Pope defeated Miss Stella Grossman, 6—0, 6—0; Miss Carona Wian defeated Mrs B. Briggs, 6—4, 4—6, 6—4; Mrs. Harper Wallach defeated Mrs. C. N. Beard, 6—3, 6—2; Miss Marie Wagner defeated Miss Marion Vanderhoef, 2—6, 6—0, 6—4; Miss Anne Sheafe defeated Miss Clare Cassel, 6—3, 6—3; Miss Molla Bjurstedt defeated Miss Hilah C. French, 6—0, 6—0; Miss Helen Simpson defeated Miss Maud Jaretski, 6—0, 6—0.

Doubles.—First Round—Miss Claire Seidenbergh and Miss Elsa Kahn defeated Miss Katherine Force and Miss Alice Kortright, 6—2, 6—2; Mrs. Frederick Schmitz and Mrs. B. Briggs defeated Miss Lucille Well and Miss C. Mordecai, 6—3, 3—7, 6—1; Mrs. T. Cassabeer and Mrs. C. N. Beard defeated Mrs. R. Pope and Miss Ina Kissel, 6—1, 7—5; Miss Molla Bjurstedt and Miss Florence Ballin defeated Mrs. Robert Le Roy and Miss Gertrude Della Torre, 5—7, 8—6; Miss Bessie Holden and Mrs. A. Humphries defeated Miss Hartley and Mrs. T. J. Wolf, 6—1, 6—1; Mrs. W. H. H. Voss and Mrs. J. W. Jenkins won from Miss Helen Bernhard and Mrs. H. Carlesbach, by default.

Second Round—Miss Simpson and Miss Shepard defeated Miss Helen Cousins and Mrs. A. R. Ranney, 6—3, 3—6, 6—4; Miss Miriam Bladgen and Miss E. C. Lindley defeated Mrs. S. Fullerton Weaver and Mrs. Rawson Wood, 6—2, 6—4; Mrs. Marshall McLean and Mrs. A. G. Miles defeated Miss Seidenbergh and Miss Kahn, 6—2, 7—5; Miss Bjurstedt and Miss Ballin defeated Miss Holden and Mrs. Humphries, 6—4, 6—3; Mrs. C. de Gersdorff and Mrs. Blanchard defeated Mrs. Voss and Mrs. Jenkins, 6—1, 1—6, 6—4; Miss Marie Wagner and Miss Clare Cassel defeated Miss A. Pagenstacher and Miss M. Taylor, 6—3, 6—1; Miss Louise Witherbee and Miss Hilah C. French defeated Miss E. V. Delafield and Miss Gignoux, 6—1, 6—2.

SURPRISES AT TENNIS.

Graves and Behr Defeated in Bronx Championship Matches.

Reversal of form again played a prominent part in the tennis tournament for the Bronx County Championship in mens' singles yesterday on the courts of the Bedford Park Lawn Tennis Club, Moholu Park, Bronx. The biggest upset was the defeat in straight sets of Louis Graves by Vanderbilt Ward. The winner has displayed unusual early season form, and caught Graves when the latter was somewhat below his form.

Another upset occurred in the match between J. H. Steinkampf and Allen Behr, in which the former came out on top by the score of 6—2, 7—5. Steinkampf was at the top of his form and played a strong back court game. The victory put Steinkampf in line for the final round with S. Howard Voskell, who is expected to fill the upper bracket in the championship round. The summaries:

Second Round.—C. G. Shafer defeated E. Fisman, 6—3, 7—5.

Third Round.—Louis Graves defeated Dr. Rosenbaum, by default; C. G. Shafer defeated Lincoln Reimer, 6—3, 6—4.

Kingsley Tennis Victory.

The Kingsley School tennis team again defeated the East Orange High School yesterday at Essex Fells, N. J., the score being 3 to 2. East Orange players triumphed in two of the singles matches, but Kingsley took the doubles, which counted two points, and another singles contest. In the doubles Tremaine and Field of Kingsley defeated Oliver and Warren of the visiting team in straight sets, 6—3, 6—3. Straight sets ruled in all the singles exhibitions. In the first match Wyman of East Orange downed Frost of Kingsley, 6—3, 6—3; in the second match Bishop of East Orange won from Field of Kingsley, 6—4, 7—5, and in the deciding contest Tremaine of Kingsley scored over Warren of East Orange, 6—3, 6—3.

Le Roy in West Side Tennis Final.

Robert Le Roy defeated Alrick H. Man, Jr., of Yale in the semi-final round of the Class A men's singles yesterday on the courts of the West Side Tennis Club at Forest Hills, L. I., and qualified for the final round in which he will play Watson M. Washburn, the Harvard crack. Three sets were required to decide the match, the Roy scoring twelve games to eleven for his opponent. Le Roy won the first set, 6—2, but fell off in his play and dropped the second set without scoring a point. He rallied in the third and captured the match with the final set at 6—3.

Amherst Loses at Tennis.

RAE TANZER INDICTED AGAIN

Rae Tanzer was indicted again yesterday by the Federal Grand Jury, this time for perjury. The evidence she gave at the trial of Franklin D. Safford is the foundation of the charge.

On evidence presented to the Grand Jury by Assistant District Attorney Roger E. Wood it is charged that Miss Tanzer swore falsely that she was in the company of James W. Osborne in New York from 2 to 11 o'clock on Nov. 29, from 6:30 to 10:30 oclock on Nov. 30, from 6 to 11 o'clock on Dec. 1, and from 4 to 11 o'clock on Dec. 4. According to the indictment, on Nov. 29 Mr. Osborne was in Providence, R. I.

MRS. STOCKTON LEADS LARGE GOLF FIELD

More than a hundred players teed up in the first one-day tournament of the season arranged by the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association yesterday at the Montclair Golf Club one of the largest fields ever known in the history of the game in this section.

Mrs. H. Reeve Stockton of Plainfield who for two successive years has shown the greatest improvement of the metropolitan women was a wholesale winner, her card of 86—2—84 leading the field for both gross and net, and in addition won the bogey handicap by finishing 1 up on the "colonel." Rules, however, prevented her from getting both gross and net, so that Miss Else Pickhardt of Englewood, who never has been successful before, took the net award.

Following the golf on the regular links, which, by the way, was in prime condition, there was a putting competition on the practice course. Twenty-seven holes were played, and the winner proved to be Mrs. L. L. Blake of Cranford who needed only 56 putts. Mrs. W. T. Cross of the home club took second prize with 57 putts.

Mrs. Stockton's golf may be imagined when it is considered that she came within three strokes of Miss Georgianna M. Bishop's course record of 83 with several sixes on her card and a 7 on the last hole through getting bunkered. The Plainfield woman is playing better golf than ever. She was out in 42 and back in 44. Her card:

Out .....6 4 5 5 4 6 5 4 3—42
In .....5 3 4 6 4 6 3 6 7—44—86

The next medal play tournament will be held at Apawamis a week from tomorrow so as to allow for time to finish the team championship matches. Summary:

Mrs. H. Reeve Stockton, Plainfield, 86, 2—84; Miss Elsa Pickhardt, Englewood, 95, 7—88; Miss Marion Hollins, Westbrook, 90, 1J—89; Mrs. N. OUIMET WINS TWICE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., May 11.—Francis Ouimet of the Woodland (Mass.) Golf Club continued his excellent playing here today in the Baltimore Country Club annual invitation tournament, winning both his morning and afternoon matches. In the first round he defeated T. W. Sasscer of the Maryland Country Club, 4 and 3, and in the afternoon he triumphed over D. Clarke Corkran, Country Club and Princeton, 4 and 3. This latter score by no means indicates the closeness of the match, for the local youth forced the national champion to play at the top of his game throughout. B. Warren Corkran, who has won the trophy on two occasions, was also victorious in his two matches, and, from present appearances, will be the one to meet the Woodland crack tomorrow afternoon in the finals for the Championship Cup. Ideal weather conditions prevailed, and quite a large gathering of local and out-of-town society folk constituted the gallery.

Vardon and Ray May Sail.

LONDON, May 11.—Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, the famous golfers, who had arranged to sail for an extended tour of the United States next Saturday with George Duncan and C. H. Mayo, by the ill-fated Lusitania, have not canceled their trip as erroneously reported, but have deferred sailing until a later date. Duncan and Mayo gave out last week that they have arranged to play several exhibition foursome games with Vardon and Ray during their tour. The former pair have been partnered for many years in foursomes with brilliant success, which has always attracted much attention, on account of their directly opposite styles. The above quartet will make a big effort to capture the American open championship at Baltusrol next month, and Vardon and Ray are quite prepared not to be again caught napping, especially as the championship will not take place on Ouimet's own course.

University Club Golf at Ardsley.

The thirty-six-hole medal play handicap of the University Club Golf Association will be held over the Ardsley Club course, at Ardsley, Wednesday, May 19. A special train has been arranged for which will leace Grand Central Station at 8:50 A. M. Prizes will be given for the best 36 holes gross, best 18 holes gross, three best net scores for 36 holes, and the best net score for 18 holes made during the afternoon round. The competition is open to any member of the University Club.

Making Progress.

"Briscom is devoting all his time to that new war balloon he thinks he has invented."

"How far has he got?"

"Why, yesterday he ripped the roof from two hen coops and a sleeping porch, crashed through a woodshed and a pergola, and landed on his neighbor's garage five doors away."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

GARDEN HORSE SHOW MAY BE ABANDONED

A. G. Vanderbilt Held Controlling Interest and Assumed Losses in Recent Years.

Horse show exhibitors are very much concerned over the reported drowning of Alfred G. Vanderbilt on the Lusitania. As it now appears reasonably certain that Mr. Vanderbilt went down with the giant Cunarder, the question has arisen as to the fate of the National Horse Show, which, with a single exception, has been held annually in November at Madison Square Garden.

Mr. Vanderbilt was President of the National Horse Show Association and held a controlling interest in it. He was also a large stockholder in the International Horse Show of London. It was Mr. Vanderbilt's love of the show horse that kept the show before the public for the past five years, during which time it has been a financial failure.

A few years ago, when the continuation of the show was threatened, Mr. Vanderbilt bought up all the stock he could secure, including that owned by the Madison Square Garden Company, and reorganized the association with the assistance of his brother, Reginald C. Vanderbilt, William H. Moore, Robert A. Fairbairn, and a few other enthusiastic show horse breeders; and was elected President. He added new features, including the spectacular jumping events, in which many European army officers competed.

There was a marked improvement in the attendance with the added attractions, but even with these the association failed to make money. This loss did not affect Mr. Vanderbilt's determination to hold the show annually, and it was only when the European war prevented the appearance of the British, French, Belgian, Italian, Dutch, and Russian officers from competing last year that the exhibition was postponed.

Mr. Vanderbilt believed that the show should be a fixture for New York, and devoted not only his money to this end, but was one of the biggest exhibitors, bringing down a big stable of heavy harness horses to compete from his Oakland Farm, near Newport, each year.

It was Mr. Vanderbilt's activities in the National Horse Show Association that kept it alive, and with his probable death it is feared that none of the wealthy exhibitors will care to assume the responsibilities which fall to the lot of the President of the association, while the executors of the estate will not have sufficient interest in the organization to burden the estate with a certain loss every year. All Mr. Vanderbilt's horses have been withdrawn from the Summer shows.

The Executive Board of the National Horse Show Association will probably hold a meeting shortly, when an announcement as to the fate of future shows may be expected. The recent death of Frederick W. Davies may influence the directors in winding up the affairs of the association.

Carpentier Now an Aviator.

LONDON, May 11.—Georges Carpentier, the famous heavyweight champion of Europe, has been one of the handy men of the French Army. After surviving a long spell in the trenches Carpentier took up the exciting adventures of a dispatch rider. His next work was as a chauffeur to an officer of the Aviation Corps, and now has fallen to the fascinations of flying himself. Georges recently obtained a pilot's certificate and is now attached to the Aviation Corps.

DEATH FOR ARMY FRAUDS.

Austria Adopts Drastic Measures Against Dishonest Contractors.

Capital punishment has been prescribed in Austria-Hungary for abuses with respect to shipments of war materials and supplies for the armies of the Dual Monarchy, according to a Budapest dispatch in the Frankfurter Zeitung of April 17 received here. Damages for the loss caused by faulty fulfillment of military contracts are recoverable in every case, under the new resolution passed by the Reichstag, but in addition the minimum penalty of six months to five years' imprisonment for failure to fill the contract in peace times is extended in war times to life imprisonment.

"If, in consequence of a crime, the defensive power of a member of the forces or a friend of the belligerent forces has been diminished so far that a human life has been lost thereby, and if the filler of the contract could have foreseen this, the death penalty must be admitted, says the dispatch. "Proportionately high penalties are to be imposed also on sub-contractors. Public officials who, in closing contracts or accepting shipments act negligently, accept presents or allow others to accept them, will be sentenced to imprisonment of from ten years to life. In cases of abuses that are proved, the contractor loses the cost price of inferior goods.

A Great Truth.

Charlotte Perkins Gilman says we must stop giving the children tin soldiers and other war toys and telling them war stories. That makes no difference, Lottie. They haven't stopped giving the little girls dollies, and look at the poodle dogs so many of them adopt when they grow up and marry.—Houston Post.

Wants All-Around Betterment.

"Have you said your prayers?" asked the mother.

"Of course," replied the child.

"And did you ask to be made a better little girl?"

"Yes. And I put in a word for you and father, too."—Washington Star.

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, MAY 12, 1915.

EVERY CITIZEN CAN HELP.

No matter what the outcome may be of the international problem which is absorbing the public attention, doubt as to necessity for an immediate strengthening of our national defenses cannot now exist in the mind of the most peacefully disposed American citizen. We are not going to plunge into war, we are going to avoid war as long as it is possible to do so with honor, but the lesson of the hour is that war cannot always be avoided by being peaceable and minding our own business. War exists in its most terrible forms, and it has been brought perilously near to us. We cannot be prepared in time of peace to take part in a war with a first class power, that is out of the question. But we can take measures to improve our coast defenses, strengthen our naval force, and increase our army to the statutory limit, so that in case of alarm we may be better prepared to set in motion all the machinery for our protection.

The immediate requirements of both the army and the navy have been clearly set forth by Secretary GARRISON, Major Gen. WOOD, Admiral DEWEY, Admiral FISKE, and others who know just what is needed. Nobody knows how soon Congress will reassemble, for nobody can see clearly into the future and discover what disasters may yet befall us, but even if the session is deferred until December the members of the House of Representatives will need all the encouragement their constituents can give them to stand out firmly for reforms and improvements in the management of the army and navy. The National Security League in its recent address dwells upon the need of certain economies in the distribution of appropriations. The abandonment of certain unnecessary army posts, which were established in the era of Indian warfare, and are retained today for purely political reasons, is imperative. The army should be concentrated in a few posts near large cities, where the expenses of its upkeep are materially reduced.

Members of Congress do not lack influence in the recess. It is not necessary to wait for the session to urge them to take the question of improving our defenses under consideration. If every citizen who recognizes this vital necessity will take steps to urge upon the Representative of his district action as prompt and effective as possible with a view to enlarging the naval program and bringing the mobile army up to the standard he will undoubtedly be instrumental in hastening the required reform.

GOVERNOR WHITMAN'S DILEMMA.

Every item of expense which Governor WHITMAN vetoes makes it more necessary for him to veto the direct tax bill. If he is to sign the tax to which he has committed himself it will be necessary for him to sign appropriations which otherwise he would veto. Last year the State could not spend two millions on roads, and there was a surplus of supplies bought which are available for this year. Yet the allowance for roads now before the Governor is four millions. If the Governor should veto that one bill he could not sign the direct tax without confessing that it was passed more to meet party necessities than the State's.

It is announced that the Governor of his own motion has vetoed a little $71,000 item, and he had not yet heard Mr. MCANENY and the other spokesmen for the city. If the Governor without assistance could make it necessary for himself to veto the direct tax it would be an accomplishment which he would be glad to refer to in later years, but he will have help which it will be difficult for him to refuse.

The Governor lays the blame of the situation on his predecessor, who, it is said, postponed bills for Governor WHITMAN's administration to pay. But taxation for a surplus is a greater offense than vetoes for a deficiency. The State has not suffered injury from taxpayers who must contribute the surplus have no liking for their share of the program, and the united taxpayer townsmen of the Governor are a force to reckon with. The Governor is to meet their representatives face to face. It will be an interesting interview, and the Governor's action afterward may be a turning point in both his career and the State's financial policy.

GRABBING PARK LAND.

The bill signed on Monday by the Governor to permit the Public Service Commission to take possession of a strip of Bronx Park for use in building the Bronx extension of the Subway is entitled "an act to amend an act to "provide for rapid transit facilities in "cities of over one million inhabi-"tants," and is as clever a piece of destructive legislation as ever was rushed through at the fag end of a wearisome session. By its terms, it seems that the Public Service Commission will be enabled, with the help of sinking fund commissioners, to take possession of any land in any public park. It provides that when any property owned by the city, including park property, may be required by rapid transit commissioners or the head of any department, it may be sold or leased to them by the commissioners of the sinking fund or such body as holds the power to sell or lease city property, "notwithstanding "any provision of law to the con-"trary." It permits an exchange for the land thus grabbed of land previously acquired by the Public Service Commission, but that is not imperative.

The Governor and the Legislature being thus generously disposed, we may expect railroad building in Central Park and Van Cortlandt at any time. This seems to be the most insolent onslaught on the parks which has yet been made.

FRANK'S LAST HOPE.

A more pathetic or a more dignified figure than LEO M. FRANK presented in the Atlanta court Monday when he was resentenced to death for a crime of which a great majority of his countrymen believe him to be innocent, and for which he was never fairly tried, has rarely come into the public vision. His calm demeanor and the simple eloquence of his formal statement before sentence was passed must have made a strong impression even among the unaccountably hostile spectators. No better exposition of his case could have been made. Justice has failed, if not in putting this man under the ban of the law, as so many entirely unprejudiced persons believe, assuredly in denying him the privilege of an impartial trial, when the violent antipathy aroused against him in the community had subsided.

All legal processes in his behalf have now been exhausted, and his only hope for life lies in a possible commutation of his sentence. It does not seem credible that the force of public opinion in Atlanta will prevent this. As FRANK says, the doubt of the trial Judge as to his guilt still remains. Not an unprejudiced person who has talked with him or has studied the flimsy evidence produced against him doubts his innocence.

MAKING RAILWAYS UNPROFITABLE.

The Pennsylvania Legislature has repealed the full crew law of that State and has sent to the Governor a bill providing that the Public Service Commission shall oversee the manning of trains. That is better than was done by the New York Legislature, which rejected amid cheers the proposal to give the Commission control over the matter without repealing the law regulating it. That was a mere juggle, pleasing nobody, and perhaps it was as well that it failed. In Pennsylvania the battle is not even yet won, as it is said that the Governor's signature is doubtful. The effort to make the railways profitable is making poor progress in several other States. Everywhere there is more sympathy for the poor workingman than for the rich railways.

That is singular, because nobody has done more for the workingman than the railways. Not only are railway wages high, but conditions of employment have been much improved. The argument for the full crew law is that cars are longer and that trains contain more cars. That leaves out of account what the railways have done to enable locomotives to haul longer and heavier trains. They have spent vast sums on all sorts of devices to make easier and safer such work as is left for trainmen to do. Passenger trains are heated by steam and lighted by electricity or gas. There are automatic couplers to make brakemen's lives safer, and air brakes to make them easier. There are signals and switches and many devices which ease the trainmen's work and make the passengers safer than anything the trainmen can do. As regards freight trains the case is even stronger. The brakemen no longer run along the tops of the cars and wind up hand brakes with brake sticks. The work is done from the locomotive cab, and there is not enough to keep the trainmen busy.

Yet it is said that the Governor of Pennsylvania is doubtful about signing the bill. He must have a doubt whether profitable railways are as much of a blessing to the country as full crews. The railways have made irretrievable investments of countless millions for the comfort and safety of travelers, shippers, and their own employés, and the wealth of the railways is made the basis of a plea for depriving them of profit. Even Missouri itself, which was thought to have set the fashion of giving the railways a chance to earn their living, has wearied of welldoing, and has fallen before the temptation of bills to lower fares, or to prevent their being raised. The same is true of several Western and Southern States, and it cannot be said that the case of the railways has yet been won.

Curious proof of this was also given yesterday. So respectable an authority as Mr. NORTON, formerly a Yale professor, testified in the Western rate advance case that the railways needed no more profits, because their credit had fallen less than that of England, France, Germany, and the United States. It is a curious combination to prove anything by. Three nations are suffering from the greatest war of all time, and the credit of the United States is measured only by bonds which have other attractions than investment yield. The bonds of these four strangely associated nations have fallen more than the bonds of the Western railways, or, as Mr. NORTON puts it, the credit of American railways has improved in comparison with the bonds of all four nations. It would seem fairer to compare like with like, that is to say, to compare the credit of the railways with the credit of themselves in earlier years, and thus deduce where the railways will bring up if they continue in the direction indicated.

The culmination of the growing time of the railways was 1907. Since then the population has gained upon the railway mileage until now there are 391 inhabitants to the railway mile, the exact proportion of 1901. The chief reason for the check to the growth of the railways is the decline of their credit, partly because of legislation. Their work has been more efficient than ever, as measured by tons or passengers transported. But their revenues are smaller because of full crew laws, hours of service laws, short train laws, orders to supply improvements without allowing increase of revenue, orders to reduce rates, and so on. If the Governor of Pennsylvania thinks that the country can have all these things at the cost of the railways without the country suffering, he will veto the measure before him. But if he has a picture of the industry before him, and judges the future from the past, he will refuse to add to the load of the overburdened industry.

THIS WAR'S FINANCE.

The magnitude of the financial problems of this war is constantly emphasized. It is the quality of the transactions which concerns the world most, and America most of all. The passage from millions to billions is matter of detail, and more than that has happened. Take, for example, the budget speech of the French Minister of Finance, published on Saturday. M. RIBOT said that Europe was buying from the United States from $140,000,000 to $160,000,000 monthly, and in order to maintain the exchanges, that is, to enable the purchases to continue to be delivered, England agreed to accept the pledge of $300,000,000 of French bonds to cover French purchases on this side of the Atlantic in consideration of France furnishing sufficient gold to serve as the basis of the business. Now it is clear that even $300,000,000 of gold is a mere drop in the bucket, a simple two months' supply.

What lies behind the transaction is something more than the support of one nation's credit with another nation's treasure, in itself a memorable occurrence. The gold will not come here in any such amounts, and the buying abroad would stop if it were to be offered us. We already are suffering from an excess of gold, and there are other things we want more from our foreign customers. It is difficult to escape the conclusion that a method is being sought for continuing trade under conditions which threaten to check it through its unbalanced condition. The way out, apparently, is the use of paper instead of gold for domestic trade, and the reservation of gold for international use. England's currency is the soundest abroad, but it is now far from being in accordance with the old principle of a pound of gold for a pound of paper. A pound of gold can support several pounds of paper. And $300,000,000 of gold will support almost unlimited millions of purchases from a country which has goods and does not want gold. The gold will be most useful, not for export to us, but for supporting British credit.

Our sales will only nominally be for gold. Really they will be for money of account, the gold serving only for the security of the transaction. It could not serve that purpose if it were in people's pockets, in circulation. It is useful because it is in banks, and accounts are settled through banks. We are witnessing on a world scale what the Federal Reserve Bank is instituting on a national scale. It is proposing a gold fund at a central point to guarantee the balance of exchanges between districts, which also within themselves guarantee local exchanges in similar manner. France is enabling England to establish a gold fund to guarantee international exchanges. In neither case will the gold be shifted to any considerable amount.

The world has passed from a gold to a credit basis, and the United States has passed from a borrowing to a lending nation. The lender fixes the prices of the paper he accepts. There no longer is a price for rentes in Paris, or for consols in London. Not for months has there been any regular business, and neither nation can float its national bonds at a price fixed either by itself or its own investors. Gold remains the standard of value, but book accounts have become the medium of international exchange. This was not possible when the largest exporting nation was also the largest borrower. The nation with the smallest national debt has been also the largest private borrower, and the owner of the largest amount of gold which it did not know how to put to banking use. We have learned how to use our gold through the Federal Reserve Bank, and the result has been that we have perceived how we have wasted that resource.

The excess of our banking reserve will enable us to sell in unlimited quantities without demanding gold in payment. We can take paper if satisfied with it, and French paper backed by England is good enough. From selling upon credit to investing in credit, that is to lending money, is but a step which it is logical to take, but which we ought not to take too soon. The Argentine loan, for instance, is said not to be like the other foreign credits recently established here. It is not an account to be drawn against for purchases of goods, but is an advance of capital for improvements. No doubt it is good business in the opinion of those who have arranged it. The ground of criticism is that it ties up capital for a long term, when all the conditions favor caution for such commitments. A gold fund of $300,000,000 can be turned over several times on business of a billion each six months, and with a profit on each transaction exceeding interest. That is the sort of credit business the United States should do at the beginning of its experience as a creditor nation. Investment business will follow naturally, but not too hastily, if prudence is consulted.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Illogical, but Easy to Understand.

A Connecticut manufacturer announces a change of business policy, due, as all changes of policy must be, to a change of mind. He has or controls, it seems, a plant that can be used for the making of munitions of war on a considerable scale, but hitherto the attraction of large profits to be thus secured has not sufficed to overcome this manufacturer's reluctance to produce wares for the slaughter of fellow human beings. The fact that his name is TRUMBULL permits the confident assumption that his scruples have been the result of a general antagonism to war, and not to the fact that in the existing circumstances he could supply arms only to the Allies.

But among those who perished with the sinking of the Lusitania was a brother of Mr. TRUMBULL, and this single death has effected the complete alteration of mental attitude and moral judgment which other deaths by the hundreds and hundreds of thousands, no small part of them also those of noncombatants, and an almost incalculable destruction of private property, were not able to bring about.

In logic, of course, either Mr. TRUMBULL should have begun long ago the making of rifle parts and shrapnel he now purposes to turn out as rapidly as he can, or else he should not do it now. Nevertheless, even though those of us who see, or think we see, quite clearly the logical inadequacy of his argument also understand it perfectly and realize, possibly with, but probably without, humiliation, that we, too, in like cases, if not in just this one, would throw logic to the winds as he has done and allow ourselves to be guided by what is called sentiment. While he viewed war in the abstract he condemned it utterly, refused to admit any justification for it, and refrained from doing anything to facilitate its continuance. Now this particular war has been "brought home to him," as the saying is, and he views it in its relations, as an alternative and not as an absolute.

And, after all, perhaps that is not as illogical as it seems. If it were—if danger followed action taken on just such motives as the one that led to Mr. TRUMBULL's change of mind, the human race would not have survived till this late day, for an enormous part of human conduct always has been thus determined, and the consequences, so far from being fatal, have not even been disastrous.

Roosevelt Luck Restored.

There have been some doubts of late—for several years, in fact—about the fidelity of Dame Fortune to her sometime favorite, Colonel ROOSEVELT, but evidently her desertion of him was a temporary withdrawal of attention, not a permanent desertion. This has just been proved in a very curious way.

While the Colonel was presenting his side in the suit for libel brought by Mr. BARNES, even the greatest of wars was obligingly brought into such a condition of deadlock, and of at least comparative monotony, that there was room left on the first page of all the newspapers for the presentation of a column or two of the Colonel's vivacious rehearsals of political history. But observe what happens when comes the turn of Mr. BARNES to give his version of those same events! The Germans sink the Lusitania, and instantly not only the first page, but half a dozen more as well, have no space for anything else, and the Roosevelt-Barnes case is moved so far along into the wilderness of paper that only members of the leisure class have the time for reading on till they reach it. And they haven't the energy for it.

The result is that a considerable part of the public has either forgotten that there ever was a Roosevelt-Barnes libel case, or else it remembers the trial as something that ended when the Colonel's testimony closed. Of course the Judge and the jurors are presumably listening to that unfortunate "other side," but what the two former friends and present enemies both really wanted to reach in this litigation was the dear public, and only one of them has been permitted to do it.

Roosevelt luck, again! Especially Rooseveltian is it because the means of suppression used enabled the Colonel to become not less audible than articulate, while nobody has thought to ask what his foe thought of what had happened.

SOUTH AMERICAN KOLONIEN

Not the Same as German Possessions, Says Herr Hehmeyer.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Reading your account of the speech delivered by Alfred Noyes, the English poet, before the Pilgrims at the White Hall Club, I was greatly perturbed by that speaker's assertion that the Germans, in utter defiance of the Monroe Doctrine, had actually marked out for future conquest a score of colonies on the South American continent. Mr. Noyes referred for proof of his assertion to an atlas published by a leading German firm of cartographers—Perthes, and he thus "convicted the Germans once more out of their own mouths."

Somewhat incredulous, I looked up that good old stand-by, Stieler's Hand Atlas, published in 1907, by the very same Perthes (this, I suppose, is the mysterious atlas which Mr. Noyes had in his possession), and sure enough, there I found, plate No. 96, second leaf, a map of South America, with explanation at the top as follows: British possessions, French possessions, Dutch possessions, and settlements inhabited by Germans (von Deutschen bewohnte Kolonien). These "kolonien" are distributed all over Chile and Brazil, especially the latter, and they are underlined in red as Mr. Noyes truly said. They also have, at least some of them, names of distressingly German sound, as, for example, Blumenau, Humboldt, Neu-Berlin and, oh, horrors! Neu Preussen (New Prussia).

The sad thing about these kolonier, or settlements, is that the respective South American Governments under whose suzerainity they are, unblushingly tolerate those Teuton names and even are so utterly supine as to permit their supplying them with first-rate statesmen, as in the case of Lauro Muller, the well-known Brazilian Minister of Foreign Affairs, who sprang from one of these "kolonien." No wonder the Pilgrims were "stirred" by Mr. Noyes's revelations. Yes, it is very serious, and what is Washington going to do about it?

F. W. HEHMEYER.

New York, May 8, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Does not Mr Alfred Noyes know that Germany already has many "colonies" in South Brazil, as she has had them in Hoboken, Cincinnati and Milwaukee? Perthes and others underline them for the German trader. When Mr. Noyes interprets the red lines of the atlas-maker as an attack on the Monroe Doctrine, he unearths a mare's nest.

South American Hostility.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The letter published in your paper of Friday's date by "A Retired Journalist" is admirable, as far as it goes, but he fails to point out the true reason of the suspicion and hate of the Americans by the various countries of South America, with the possible exception of Peru, and even that country is lukewarm. This feeling against us has, for years, been instilled into the minds of the South Americans by the people of two of the European countries now at war, and is deep rooted, as will be seen from the following, which I clipped from a paper in Arequipa, Peru, two years ago:

"Great enthusiasm has attended the organization of the Latin-American League. A great many applications for membership have already been received. It is thought that Senor Luis Ulloa, a sworn enemy of the Yankees, will be President of the league."

The object of this league is to combine the people of all the South American countries against us, and the object of the Europeans behind the movement is obvious. The Panama incident did not start this feeling—it has been going on for years—but it furnished additional fuel for the fire.

The Propagandists.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why is it that our leading newspapers in New York publish daily whole columns concerning the opinions of the pro-German propagandists in this country, as well as the articles written by these people themselves? As each new atrocity by the German Army or Navy is committed we must needs, read what Messrs. Dernburg, Ridder, von Bernstorff, &c., think of the matter. We are assured that a barbarous crime against civilization, like the torpedoing of the Lusitania, is perfectly justifiable; we are assured that we Americans are all wrong in our attitude toward such matters, "might is right," and these German gentlemen are here to see that we learn our lesson thoroughly. How long must Americans endure this sort of thing?

The Boer Women.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Since Roderick C. Jackson, in his letter headed "Ethics," is so sure that the women of the Boers were treated well in the concentration camps Kitchener provided, he has probably never seen or heard of the monument erected in Bloemfontein and unveiled on Dec. 16, 1913, with nation-wide participation. It is an obelisk of granite, bearing at its base the figures of two Boer women and an emaciated dying child. The inscription is as follows:

This monument has been erected from voluntary contributions of the Boers in memory of the 26,663 women and children who died during the war of 1900-1902 in the English concentration camps.

Substitute for War.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The writer traveled through most of Europe last year and was impressed with the fact that in practically no cities over there has the fly-swatting movement taken place. The people don't seem to understand the thing at all. In many restaurants of the better class the waiters didn't seem to understand why the writer objected to a dozen flies being on his bread and plate.

Art Museum Buys Beaux Picture.

The picture of a "Girl in White," by Cecilia Beaux, recently on exhibition at the Knoedler Galleries, has been purchased by the Metropolitan Museum from the Hearn Fund. The Knoedler Galleries will be closed on Thursday, out of respect for the art dealers and collectors who perished on the Lusitania.

ASHAMED!

Always had I been proud—
Proud of the Fatherland!
Now, with shame am I bowed—
Shame, that my great nation
Could murder—aye, murder! and in such a way!
Ach Gott! my idol with feet of clay:
Father! My Kaiser! Could you do this?
Ah worse, far worse than the Judas kiss!
Dear God! with shame am I bowed—
Shame for the Fatherland!

Always with head held high
I gloried, and argued at length.
Proud of my blood was I,
Proud of my nation's strength,
Proud of the strength of the Father-
land,
Of the iron heart of that great country!
But now I would fight with my naked hand
That cruel, cruel heart of the Father-
land!
Ach Gott! With shame am I bowed—
Shame for the Fatherland!

What mockery in that name—
That name of Fatherland!
What dreadful, unspeakable fame
For a nation no longer great,
That could stoop to the meanness of such a deed!
Kill helpless hundreds and take no heed!
Ah Germany! Country from which I came,
No more with pride can I hear thy name!
Shame for the Fatherland!

OPINION ON THE SINKING OF THE LUSITANIA.

Another Installment of Letters to the Times, Selected as Representative of an Overwhelming Number Received in the Last Three Days.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the language of The Hague Convention "Respecting Bombardments by Naval Forces in Time of War," we read, under Article 6, Chapter 11., "General Provisions": If the military situation permits, the commander of the attacking naval force, before commencing the bombardment, must do his utmost to warn the authorities." This surprising exception is made necessary by the cases mentioned in Article 2, Chapter I, which deals specifically with the destruction of "depots of arms or war material;" they may be destroyed without warning "if for military reasons immediate action is necessary, and no delay can be allowed the enemy."

"If the military situation permits!" The Lusitania victims were deliberately murdered without warning. We rush to the text of The Hague Conference to show how this savage and uncivilized act is contrary to the spirit and letter of international law. And we discover this line from the official record of the most complete international failure in the history of civilization—The Hague Conference of 1907.

The present European war has pointed out for all time the fallacy and utter futility underlying an international attempt to superimpose the humane refinements of civilization upon warfare. War must be primarily effective. In the case of the Lusitania the observations of the rules of humanity would have rendered war ineffective. Let us examine this unique "military situation" as objectively and dispassionately as possible and see what it "permits." First of all as to the purely mechanical phases. When a submarine attempts the "capture" of a vessel of approximately her own speed or slower she may, after warning the vessel to stop, follow her until she does stop. If in this case the challenged vessel attempts to escape she may legitimately be torpedoed. The Lusitania, as we know, depended upon her speed to escape submarine attacks. It is a physical impossibility for a vessel of her size, running at full speed, to stop at the order of a submarine. Even if it were possible instantly to reverse her engines, her initial velocity would still be so great that she would pass the challenging submarine even though the latter should follow at full speed. And once beyond her adversary under these circumstances, there would be nothing to prevent her ordering full speed ahead.

What courses lay open, then, to the German naval authorities? They certainly knew of the huge cargo of "war material" (largely sheet-brass and copper, as the freight record shows.) They furthermore realized that if this cargo reached England, it meant the certain destruction of an enormous number of German subjects. It was in their power to prevent this certain destruction. As regards the passengers and crew and following every law of humanity and civilization, they might have let the Lusitania pass. This would certainly not have been effective; it would not have been war. The military situation did not permit a warning; the Lusitania could not be captured, so they shot her in the back according to Article 6.

In such a crisis it is extremely difficult to maintain an objective attitude and the possibilities of hysterical and thoughtless opinions are legion. This analysis is not an attempt at hairsplitting over misquoted details of international law, but a serious effort to clarify our categories and judgments in facing the practical problems of that stupendous paradox, "civilized warfare."

The Man and the Crisis.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It was with great regret that I read in your columns this morning letters from prominent individuals advocating war measures and stating that this attitude sensed the opinion of the majority.

Some of us so fortunate as to have known the President before he entered politics realize what a blessing it is to have a clear-minded, firm, unbiased man at the head of our nation in such a crisis. We know he will do the proper thing when all the essential facts have been learned.

The impulsive statements voiced in these letters show that the writers do not realize the import and possible duration, to say nothing of the suffering, increased taxation and general injury to the prosperity of this country which a war would surely bring us. Their advice smacks of the feudal age, when the murder of one man would be considered sufficient cause to kill the whole family of the murderer, which usually resulted in the slaughter of scores on both sides and the defeat of justice.

Therefore let us deliberate calmly before we contemplate sending to destruction the flower of our youth. And for what purpose? Germany would welcome the opportunity to strengthen her boast that she is fighting the entire world. And as for aiding the Allies, our present supply of ammunition and the condition of our army and navy are not, according to experts, at all conducive to drastic action for any length of time.

Let us, therefore, rely upon those who are better versed in such matters, and to whom power has been intrusted to act according to their better judgment at the proper time.

Formidable Economic Weapons.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is not for me, as an Englishman, to suggest to Americans what course America should take with the object of bringing to its senses a nation which has shown itself to be lost to all sense of decency and to all the claims of humanity.

But I venture to make to you a suggestion which has occured to me. I have discussed the situation caused by the sinking of the Lusitania with many American friends and the attitude of all of them seems to be:

"Germany will pay no attention to any protest we may make. Oh, if only we had a big army and navy."

Now, such an attitude is not only useless, but it is based on a wrong assumption.

America has very powerful weapons, with which she can almost certainly enforce her will upon Germany.

Let her call upon Germany for an immediate apology for her action in connection with the Frye, the Gulflight and the Lusitania and for full financial reparation, with an undertaking to sink no more vessels which might be carrying neutrals, without making proper arrangements for the safety of passengers.

Let her intimate in the courteous but firm language which has characterized her previous notes that failing the full satisfaction of these demands, she will have to consider the advisability of barring all American ports to German shipping for a period of years after the conclusion of the war and also the closing of the Panama Canal to German shipping for a term of years. This would be to Germany a far more terrible threat than any resort to arms on the part of the United States, and would hit Germany in the only place where she seems to be able to feel anything.

It would not injure America and might result in doing what the Ship Purchase bill would never have done, viz., build up an American merchant marine.

I do not believe, however, that America would need to put her threat into effect, for I think Germany would at once climb down and give the satisfaction asked for.

Moreover, the realization that America held such a weapon and knew that she held it would, I believe, make Germany's attitude toward America during the remainder of the war a more reasonable and conciliatory one.

Have We a Farragut?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As nearly as I understand a recent international occurrence from official and other sources, Germany some days since threatened to use submarines to sink British transatlantic passenger ships without further notice than this threat, which she called a "warning."

On Friday, May 7, Germany carried into effect her threat, without any warning at the time, and torpedoed the British Cunard passenger liner Lusitania, which sank in something like fifteen minutes, carrying to death more than a hundred men, women and children, citizens of the United States, a friendly neutral Government.

The facts are known to all peoples throughout the world who read.

The United States officials at Washington are waiting to learn—what all others know. If Senator Stone, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, is correctly reported, his view is that Germany may be excused for the commission of this savage crime on a neutral, friendly nation on the ground that she notified us beforehand that she was going to commit the crime. This is a new and hitherto unheard-of defense. The Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in his statement of to-day offers, as it seems, several excuses that his hyphenated Missouri constituents may interpose in defense of Germany's latest crime which has shocked civilized mankind.

What official Washington will do after it has heard the news—the facts—seems to be a question it will answer after it has sensed public opinion, that is, after the public tells the President and his advisers what they should do.

One of Andrew Jackson's favorite sayings was: "That when the time for action has arrived, the time for discussion has passed."

Inasmuch as Herr. Bernstorff seems to have known that the crime was to be committed, how would it do for the first act to send him with all of his aids, spies and helpers home, and then immediately place an embargo on all commerce, directly or indirectly, from the United States to Germany?

Then, if further threats are made, or crimes committed by Germany, inasmuch as our war fleet cannot lose always, nor their men and officers live forever, send the whole fleet to the North Sea and clean out the base and rendezvous of the pirates.

Have we a Decatur or a Farragut who will say, "D—n the torpedoes;" (or mines;) "come on in with me." We will in all probability see.

Perhaps Dr. Dernburg Forgot.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In THE NEW YORK TIMES of May 9 I notice several reasons assigned by Dr. Dernburg as justification for the sinking of the Lusitania. He speaks of the fact that the master of the Lusitania swore to his manifest of cargo and in doing so charges the fact of conscience and knowledge upon the part of the deponent.

This reference is indicative of the fact that Dr. Dernburg, and perhaps the German Government, are familiar with the laws of the United States requiring masters of vessels to take affidavit before our various collectors of customs will issue clearance. I accentuate this possession of knowledge, because I am justified in charging that at the time the Kronprinz Wilhelm II., at present interned at Newport News, cleared for Bremen, both the German Government and the master of that vessel knew of the solemnity of the oath and the regulations of our Government respecting clearance. This vessel cleared for Bremen, and after being on the high seas, in a certain latitude and longitude, was supposed to have met the Karlsruhe and was armed thereby and became a sea rover. Aside from everything else this must indicate to the intelligent that the German Government and the administrative officials must be charged with knowledge that they were, in the clearance of this vessel for Bremen, transgressing American law and regulation. Perhaps Dr. Dernburg has forgotten this, or is not cognizant of it, and has fallen thereby into error.

The Courage Not to Fight.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"The beginning of strife is as when one letteth out water; therefore leave off contention before it be meddled with." The historic way of dealing with such a difficulty as now exists between the United States and Germany would be to spend the next year or so in getting ready an army and navy, and then set out to punish Germany, sacrificing a million American lives to avenge a hundred. That is an old, bad way. There is—there must be—a better way. If Germany upholds what she did to the Americans on the Lusitania, why not cease all diplomatic intercourse with her until such time as she shall acknowledge her wrong and mend her ways? She puts herself outside the pale of civilization; we withdraw our Ambassador accordingly. As for being thought cowardly, it is only a coward who is taunted into a fight. The bravest are self-restrained. They refuse to fight from principles that cowards are strangers to. There are no braver young men in the world than our American youth. But our greatest need just now may be the moral courage which refuses to be bullied into a fight.

The Limit of Killing.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Another word about the sinking of the Lusitania without any opportunity, however brief, for her passengers and crew to take to the boats.

Quite a number of persons whose first impressions are sound seem to be perplexed by the suggestion that the German commanding officer could not give the minutes of grace which international law requires because the captor vessel was a submarine and in even a brief interim some enemy vessel with teeth might come, and thus a potential prize be lost. Let us try analogy; not infrequently it is helpful to clear thinking.

Sometimes during an engagement no prisoners are taken; to an offer to surrender, accompanied with the casting down of weapons, the sole response is bullet or bayonet. In technical military nomenclature this is called "giving no quarter." It is always deplorable, but occasionally military necessity will justify it; at other times it may be excused as a natural incident of the heat engendered by a long and desperate struggle when the fog of fighting beclouds the mind. At another time, although "no quarter" may have been ordered, some fighting unit ignorant of or forgetting the order may accept individual surrenders, and immediately thereafter—the time, it may be, consumed in receiving instructions from a superior officer—the acceptance is canceled and the order carried out.

Sometimes defeated men have succeeded in constituting themselves prisoners, their surrender has been accepted, and days and weeks elapse. Then they are shot, perhaps because it is believed they are trying to escape or to convey information to their friends; perhaps they may be identified as former prisoners who were fighting in breach of their parole, as in the case of the Turks whom General Bonaparte shot, after his repulse at Acre. This is called "killing prisoners."

Again, defeated men have succeeded in constituting themselves prisoners, and while such have given no cause of offense. They have made no effort to escape, have tried to convey no information, have broken no parole, have not even been disrespectful or abusive toward their captors. Nevertheless, sometimes they have been killed. This is called "slaughtering prisoners in cold blood." It is needless to say such an act is condemned by the military code of every civilized nation.

Now, take this case. An army has 1,000 duly constituted prisoners near its front who for days have given no cause of offense. They are all wounded men who will probably, even in captivity, make recovery. Their wounds, however, are such that they are physically unable to walk, even with the assistance of a bayonet. Such being the situation, let us suppose that it becomes necessary for the army to retire quickly. The prisoners cannot walk; they cannot be carried because every able-bodied captor is needed on the firing line to cover the retreat; they cannot be otherwise transported, because every wheel is needed to carry the army's own wounded and the reserve ammunition. If the prisoners are left behind their own forces will retake them. May they be "slaughtered in cold blood" on the ground that unless this be done the captors will lose their prize?

Does Germany Want Our Neutrality?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Germany has not respected our neutrality; on the contrary, she has deliberately destroyed American lives and ships. Her evident purpose is to continue to destroy them whenever she thinks best to do so. Shall we submit, or shall we take steps to make our neutrality respected by her? There is no doubt that every American worthy of the name is now ready to declare that we shall not submit. The time has come to assert ourselves. We should demand at once of Germany an apology and full reparation for the injuries we have sustained at her hands, and should at the same time inform her that in case she refuses to comply with our demand we shall sever all diplomatic relations with her and order all German ships and crews now in our ports to depart at once from our territorial waters, as we cannot concede to her the benefits of our neutrality if she denies them to us. If war results, the fault will be hers, not ours.

Our course is clear. Let us pursue it, war or no war!

Menace of the Prussian Spirit.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Germany has at last succeeded in opening the eyes of the world to the truth that the success of her arms would be a colossal and completely irreparable world-calamity. No recovery from it would be possible. The Prussian spirit revealed in the Lusitania crime would go abroad to every corner of the world, launching and directing the mailed fist.

No problem today before mankind can be compared with the magnitude of the problem how this infinite calamity can be prevented. The destinies of the world should no longer be left to the problematical success of the Allies, for one great reverse at any point might send them all to utter defeat.

The neutral peoples, and especially the United States, are committing a crime against civilization in taking this chance. Think of it! If the cause of liberty is lost in Europe we cannot restore it, nor can we long keep it alive in America against the colossal power Prussian-Germany would acquire through her conquest of the Allies. We have a right to remain passive under one condition only; namely, that we have certain knowledge that Germany will be thoroughly defeated in this war. We know nothing of the kind. We cannot know it. And if we estimate chances and probabilities they are at least equal that Germany will win.

It is therefore the duty of the neutral nations, under the lead of the United States, to combine with the Allies to crush this Prussian military power once for all. Self-preservation requires it. And the duty of the United States so to act is imperative, whatever may be the course of the other neutral peoples. Postponement in view of present European uncertainties is almost equivalent to siding with Prussia.

Who Talks of a Free Sea?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I had occasion Friday to re-read Count Albert Apponyi's letter on "The Yoke of England's Sea Monopoly," published in THE TIMES of March 28. The distinguished Hungarian tried to convince the people of the United States that Germany was fighting our battle for the freedom of the seas. This also has been the burden of much recent German discourse. The news brought overseas this same Friday afternoon concerning the fate of the Lusitania is sufficient comment on the Count's letter. England never did—and in her case national character is a sufficient guarantee that she never would—violate the freedom of the seas as Germany has done. Yet we ought not to have been amazed at this German act. It fits in precisely with what the war has revealed to us of German psychology. What has occurred will seem perfectly proper in Germany. That is why this morning's papers speak of rejoicings in Germany. Let us not deceive ourselves. The end is not yet. Like the Germans, we also have our inwrought national traits and forms of thought, which such events as this will call into play.

Wisdom in Numbers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I suggest that the President call into conference as a board of advisers such men as William H. Taft and Theodore Roosevelt, both living ex-Presidents; Elihu Root, Joseph H. Choate, Frederic R. Coudert, Oscar S. Straus, Alton B. Parker, Edgar M. Cullen, and Charles E. Hughes, without regard to political affiliation. From a conference of such men will surely come advice now sorely needed and a clearly defined policy.

How Not to Cheer.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

New York Germans celebrated with cheers and toasts the sinking of the Lusitania, with its deathroll of hundreds of noncombatants, women and children. In our own Spanish war, when Captain Philip sank the enemy's ship and his men started to cheer, he called: "Don't cheer, boys; those poor fellows are dying."

Senator Stone's Error.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In his anxiety to exculpate the barbarians from beyond the Rhine, Senator Stone is guilty of an error which would put to shame a first-form student in rudimentary logic. His major premise is absolutely false, for by no possible stretch of imagination could the Lusitania have been deemed analagous to a fortified city, but rather to an open and undefended town, which by international law and usage of warfare, should have been immune from bombardment.

FROHMAN'S WORTH TOLD BY HAYMAN

"The Greatest Friend Authors and Actors Ever Had," Says Intimate of 37 Years.

CARED NOTHING FOR MONEY

Never Would Make a Contract with His Stars, Gave Freely to Charity, and Died Comparatively Poor.

Alf Hayman, general manager for Charles Frohman and for thirty-seven years one of his most intimate friends, yesterday gave the press an appreciation of his late associate. Mr. Hayman's sketch, which follows, is an estimate abounding in intimate touches, through his long and close association with Mr. Frohman.

"I first met C. F. in Philadelphia thirty-seven years ago. He was Treasurer of Haverly's Minstrels. I was the advance agent for Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Florence. The Colonnade Hotel, at the corner of Fifteenth and Chestnut Streets, at that time was the swell hotel of Philadelphia. In the course of a walk one day we stopped in front of the hotel and C. F. said: 'Some day I hope to have money enough to stop at the Colonnade.' He never forgot this, and whenever we went to Philadelphia together he would always insist on our walking up to the hotel, look at it, and recall the conversation.

"Authors, actors, and actresses have lost the greatest friend they ever had. He did more for them than any other manager. He was the first to pay big salaries and the first to allow 'his children,' as he loved to call them, unlimited amounts for stage gowns, and permitted them to have them made wherever they pleased.

"He was the first to inaugurate big sliding-scale royalties for authors, and had the same terms for all, claiming that if any author could write a play that could earn big money he was entitled to his share of the receipts, and the more the play earned the more the author was entitled to.

"C. F. knew absolutely nothing about the value of money, and cared nothing for it. No baser slander was ever written about a man than the articles by numerous writers who always love to write about the commercialism in the theatre (and who never take the trouble to investigate) to accuse C. F. of commercialism.

"An adverse criticism never bothered him unless it abused the author, the actor or actress. He cared absolutely nothing what might be said about him. He produced many a play he knew would fail, because he had given his word to the author he would produce it.

"No man, woman or child ever saw him angry or heard him raise his voice. I never knew him to have an enemy. I never heard him speak ill of any one.

"C. F. always was delighted when a play made a success, no matter by whom produced.

"He never would make a contract with any of his stars. If I would remonstrate he would say to me: 'No, I won't do it. I want them to be in a position so that if they ever become dissatisfied they know they are free to leave me.'

"He has paid millions of dollars to authors without the scratch of a pen and never had a dispute or a lawsuit with them or with anybody over a business transaction.

"C. F. died a comparatively poor man. He never wanted money. When upbraided on this point he would say: 'If when I die I can do so with the love and respect of all my stars, all my authors, all my associates, all my employes, and my creditors, then I will not have lived in vain.'

"His greatest delight was the morning wires he would receive each morning on his arrival at the office from his stars. He never failed to have daily communication wiht them.

"It is doubtful if any man in the theatrical business ever lived who gave away as much money to charity as C. F. When he had an application of any kind from a professional who said he or she was in want he would insist on sending them something, and he would never let any one know, not even me, who the recipient would be.

"I said to him one day, 'Do you know you are not doing right in sending all the people money who write and tell you they are in hard luck, because they may be imposing on you?' His reply was: 'There may be some that are imposing, but I know there are others in want, so I can't afford to make a mistake.'

"One of the worst penmen I think I've ever known was C. F. and another is James M. Barrie. They always corresponded in long hand. C. F. would send for me and ask me if I could make out what Barrie was writing him, and Barrie used to write me to ask if I couldn't get C. F. to use a typewriter, as no human being could read his writing."

ACTORS' FUND CONDOLES.

J. F. Mackay Pays Tribute to Charles Frohman as Leader.

At the annual meeting of the Actors' Fund of America held in the Hudson Theatre yesterday afternoon, a resolution of condolence upon the death of Charles Frohman, one of the victims of the torpedoed Lusitania, was adopted. Daniel Frohman, the late manager's brother, who had just been re-elected President of the Fund, was in the chair, and had entertained a motion for adjournment when F. F. Mackay, who has been one of the officers of the charity since its founding, took the chair.

"In the face of such a terrible catastrophe," began Mr. Mackay, "as that of last week, you should congratulate yourselves that you are members of a profession that educates, develops the intelligence, and cultivates courage. A few years ago one of our managers bravely, without flinching, faced death on a sinking ship. Again during the past week another great calamity has carried away another great manager, who, fearless and unafraid, went to his death.

"I have known Charles Frohman thirty-five years as a leader of dramatic art in the United States. Think of the courage, of the great breadth of feeling, of the intelligence, of the ripeness of intellectual force, that would enable a man to stand on the deck of a sinking ship and utter as his last words, 'Death? Why, death is the most beautiful adventure in life.'

"So I move you that this meeting adopt a resolution that the loss of Charles Frohman to the profession is not only a loss to the country and to the dramatic profession, but a loss to the dramatic art throughout the world. For you know how broad was his work, how generous was his management, and how entirely just his arrangements between man and man. I move you, therefore, that this society pass a resolution of condolence to his family, and especially to his dear brother, our President, at the loss of so great a man in our profession, a man so much respected, so much loved."

Mr. Mackay then asked those in favor of the resolution to rise and, with bowed heads, respond in the affirmative. The audience arose en masse, and as they stood for a moment with bowed heads, handkerchiefs wiped tears from many eyes, and there was the sound of muffled sobbing. Daniel Frohman sat at the back of the stage during Mr. Mackay's talk, his head bowed and his hand covering his face.

All of last year's officers were re-elected for the ensuing year. There was only one ticket, and it was elected by a unanimous vote. The officers are:

President—Daniel Frohman; First Vice President—Joseph R. Grismer; Second Vice President—F. F. Mackay; Treasurer—William Harris; Secretary—Edwin D. Miner; Trustees—Ralph Delmore, Marc Klaw, Milton Nobles, Joseph Brooks, Harrison Grey Fiske, and Harry Harwood.

The reports of the Secretary and Treasurer showed that the Fund helped 7,414 people last year at a cost of $21,-088. The total receipts were $63,000 and the expenditures $14,000 in excess of this. There was less sickness and a reduced death rate in the profession last year.

EMMA DUNN AT PALACE.

Back in Vaudeville with a Sketch Called "The Baby."

Emma Dunn, Bert Fitzgibbon, and Brice and King provide the best moments in the not notably entertaining bill at the Palace this week. The title of Miss Dunn's one-act play is "The Baby," a sufficient indication, if any were needed, thta her's is one of those mother rôles that have made her fame. It is a foundling hospital sketch by John Stokes that gives her a chance for an appealing performance.

"Watch Your Step" wound up its long run at the New Amsterdam Saturday evening and Elizabeth Brice and Charles King lost no time in returning to the vaudeville stage. Together and separately, they warble a number of numbers, including three they have been singing every week since Christmas. Fitzgibbon is up to his usual tricks, save that, now that the straw hat season is here, he has discarded his and is wavering between a high hat and a dusty derby. At each performance he lays aside his nonsense at the end and speaks a little tribute to Wilson that meets with warm response.

WOMEN WIN HORSE PRIZES.

Mrs. W. F. Hitt and Helen Buchanan Among Capital Show Victors.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Today's meeting of the Capital City Horse Show was marked by the largest attendance of the season, with a number of prominent officials present for the first time. The war situation abroad, iwth the loss of the Lusitania has made the presence of the diplomatic corps very uncertain, and led to the cancelling of many engagements.

Secretary of State and Mrs. Bryan were the guests of Medical Director and Mrs. Francis Nash this afternoon. The Secretary came to the grounds from the Cabinet meeting. Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Lane, Mrs. Houston, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, Justice and Mrs. Pitney, Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Henry Breckenridge, Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, and the Governor of the Federal Reserve Board and Mrs. Charles S. Hamlin, were among the visitors in the boxes, while the grandstand was filled with well-known patrons of the sport from Washington and the adjacent hunt clubs.

Residential society was particularly interested in many of tday's classes. The winning of the cup offered in the ladies' phaeton pairs by Judge Moore's horses, driven by Mrs. William F. Hitt, caused rounds of applause. This was the second blue Mrs. Hitt has taken. The combination ponies' class, in which the contestants were school girl daughters of well-known Washingtonians, also attracted the attention of the boxholders.

The first honor went to Miss Ruth Donaldson, with Miss Catherine Littauer second, Miss Anna Hamlin, third, and Miss Helen McLanahan, fourth.

The Eustis Cup, presented by George Pustis of New York and Washington, was won by Miss Helen Buchanan, on her well-known Katydid. Additional prizes in money, as well as the blue ribbons, were taken by Warwick and Branton from the Strontia Farm, Baltimore, and The Scout, owned by William F. Hitt. Miss Buchanan, who made several rounds of the ring with the cup in her hand, was greeted with tremendous applause.

Other winners of particular interest to the large audience included Judge Moore's tandem team driven by himself, with William A. Lieber of Bryn Mawr, second.

10,000 GIRLS DANCE IN CENTRAL PARK

KALEIDOSCOPE OF COLOR

Park Commissioner Cabot Ward Announces Two New Park Fields for Children's Playgrounds.

Ten thousand little girls danced on the green at Central Park yesterday at the biggest, best and most beautiful fete that has been given in the eight years in which the Girls' Branch of the Public Schools Athletic League has been delighting itself and the public with these celebrations.

Park Commissioner Cabot Ward not only threw open the sheep pasture of 25 acres to the children for their games—"the most delightful use to which the park can be put," he said yesterday—but he opened two new fields that have never before been given to the children. These were the South Meadow, with 11 acres, and a play spot of 8 acres at 100th Street.

These will be used for May parties this month and will then become regular playgrounds for the little people.

There were 4,000 more children than have ever before been at one of the Girls' Branch fetes and the individual schools were better represented. Public School 59, Manhattan, Miss Mary Bergen, Principal, had 900 little girls out and Public School 93, also of Manhattan, Miss Laura Charlton, Principal, had 600. The fifty-four schools that have had athletic centres this past year have given the girls a better chance for training and this made it possible for greater numbers to take part in the celebration.

Boy Scouts of America assisted Miss Elizabeth Burchenal, under whose direction the program was given, and the Field Committee. There were large numbers of the Scouts under the direction of Lorillard Spencer, Scout Commissioner, and Charles L. Pollard, Deputy, who made themselves useful all over the field. They brought one tiny maiden, who had lost herself, to the band stand where, when the fete was finished she was still without any but adopted mothers who cared for her at different times, but to whom she constantly refused to utter a word.

The prettiest feature of the whole celebration and which sent thrills of pleasure through the few visitors who were able to find places on the band stand was the last run of the little peoplt, the entire 10,000 with cheers and shouts and waving banners, a rainbow-like procession, coming from all parts of the field to the one central point, the band stand.

Yesterday squads of Boy Scouts led the girls and stopped within a few feet of the stand, where they formed a protecting ring. Last year the girls came running with such force that they threatened to envelop the stand and visitors.

There were two bands yesterday, one from Fort Hamilton and one from Fort Totten, under the direction of Corporal Einar V. Sorensen, of Fort Hamilton. They led in the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner," while Miss Burchenal, from the band stand, waved a banner and prged on the young voices.

There was never more variety in the color of the bright ribbons worn by the girls and the colors of their Maypoles. Dark blue, purple, dark green and even black, which formed the cravats of some of the girls with white hair bands, added to the chromatic effect.

The children had their old favorite dances and games and also several new ones. These were the "Skanska Quadrille," Swedish; "Nest Making" and the "Kynthavspolska," Finnish, and "Sellengers round," recently brought from England by Cecil Sharp, the leader of English folk dancing.

Invitations to be present were accepted by large numbers of the city officials and their wives and Consuls of the different countries, Rear Admiral Fletcher of the fleet accepted for his officers and Rear Admiral Usher for the officers of the Brooklyn Navy Yard. On the Field Committee for the day were Miss Catharine S. Leverich, Chairman; Miss Jessie H. Bancroft, Miss Josephine Beiderhase, Miss Elizabeth Burchenal, Miss Ruth Burchenal, Miss Emma Burchenal, Mrs. Howard Cushing, Mrs. Thomas W. Churchill, Mrs. William A. Delano, Mrs. Thomas R. French, Miss Juliana Cutting, Miss Amy C. Hutton, Mrs. Gustavus T. Kirby, Mrs. John Lapham, Miss Elizabeth Man, Mrs. George V. Mullan, Miss Emily A. O'Keefe, Miss Mary M. Newport, Miss Mabel Shaw, Mrs. J. Otis Post, Miss Mary B. White, Mrs. Herbert Lee Pratt, Miss Margaret Stimson, Miss Mary L. Willard, Mrs. Egerton L. Winthrop, Jr., Mrs. James Speyer, Miss Caroma Winn, Mrs. J. Van V. Olcott, William Caldwell and Mr. Cote.

One old friend of the school children who was present was William McAndrew, so long Principal of the Washington Irving High School.

JOSEPH DE LONG DIES AT 101

Joseph De Long, who would have celebrated his 102d birthday next October, died yesterday at his residence, 62 Devoe Street, Brooklyn, after an illness of thirty-seven days, and during which time he had taken no nourishment, only water. A few years ago, while suffering from an attack of pneumonia, Mr. De Long underwent a fasting period which lasted for forty days. Mr. De Long was born in Berks County, Penn., on Oct. 28, 1813, and came of Huguenot and Pennsylvania Dutch stock. In 1837, after his marriage to Miss Mary Sophia Lopes, he went to Williamsburg, where for almost fifty years he lived at 82 Marcy Avenue.

Mr. De Long never set any rule for living and always claimed that he attained his great age because he came of good sturdy stock, because he had regular habits, and because he did not worry. Though his sight and hearing were impaired, he took a lively interest in world affairs particularly the European war. For several years, Mr. De Long was with the shipping firm of Grinnell, Minturn & Co., and later became a warehouse owner, retiring about twenty-five years ago. For more than fifty years he was a member of the South Third Street Presbyterian Church. On the occasion of his 100th birthday his street was decorated with flags and bunting, and while the band played several generations of De Longs gathered about him to felicitate him on the arrival of the century mark. A tremendous birthday cake, with one hundred candles, was set up in the parlor.

He is survived by six children, Dr. William De Long, chief physician of the Brooklyn Fire Department, Joseph, Jr., John, Mrs. Mary L. Philson, Mrs. Kate Hatch, and Julius De Long, twenty-nine grandchildren, twenty-nine great-grandchildren, and two great-great-grandchildren.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Laces, Trimmings, and Bulbs Among the Things Considered.

Mills, Duflot & Co. were partly sustained yesterday by the Board of General Appraisers as to silk hair nets imported under the Tariff act of 1909. The Collector returned the goods at the rate of 70 per cent. ad valorem as having been made on the Lever or Gothrough machine. The contention was that the nets were not made on these machines. The board held that some of the goods were not produced on the machines in question and were therefore properly dutiable at only 60 per cent. The remainder of the nets were held dutiable as found by the Collector.

The Rosenthal-Sloan Millinery Company, St. Louis, lost in claims for lower duty on wool trimmings and embroideries imported under the act of 1909. The Surveyor classified the goods at 60 per cent. ad valorem and 50 cents per pound as wool articles embroidered. Various claims were made under different paragraphs providing for goods in chief value of something else than wool. The board held that none of the claims was applicable and affirmed the Surveyor.

Hawley & Letzerich, Galveston, went before the board with the claim that certain commissions paid to the commissionaire of the purchaser should not be included in the dutiable value of baskets. Judge Waite said that it was unquestionably true from the testimony that certain items of commission set forth in the protest would be properly non-dutiable. He pointed out, however, that it was necessary for the importers to show that the Appraiser in his advisory capacity added the items to make an amount above the wholesale market price of the goods, which advice the Collector followed in assessing duty. As nothing of this kind appeared in the testimony, the protest was overruled.

The Interstate Electric Novelty Company won in claims for lower duty on electric light bulbs without filaments imported under the Tariff act. They were taxed 60 per cent. ad valorem as manufactures of blown glass, and were claimed properly dutiable at 30 per cent.

Frank B. Ross & Co. were sustained in the claim that mineral wax or white hardening wax imported under the Tariff act was free of duty under the provision for "wax, vegetable or mineral." The Collector was reversed in his assessment of 15 per cent. as a chemical compound. Similar action was taken in protest by William A. Brown & Co. dealing with the same product.

EXPORTS CONTINUE LARGE.

Those to Britain and Her Possessions Led Last Week.

Exports at this port, though about $200,000 less than in the week before, were heavy in the week ended May 8, according to the Custom House report issued yesterday. Shipments for the week totaled $24,532,345, compared with $24,763,189 the week before and $24,312,990 in the week before that. Exports here to date now aggregate $488,263,415, compared with $360,860,372 in the corresponding period last year. In the corresponding week in 1914 the exports were set down at only $15,436,508.

England led in purchases amounting to $9,089,662, while exports to the British possessions were the highest in any single week since buying on account of the war began here on a large scale. They aggregated $3,603,485, while exports for France amounted to $3,542,634. The Netherlands took merchandise valued at $1,723,003. Italy was next with $1,482,123. Shipments to the Scandinavian countries continued to decline. Norway led with $600,330. Exports to Russia via Vladivostok had a value of $1,202,824. Argentina continued to be the chief South American buyer, with merchandise worth $540,954. Supplies for Egypt were manifested at $8,702. Exports to Cuba totaled $590,252, while trade with Mexico got down to $340.

The export movement in domestics for the week totaled $426,988, of which British Australia took $75,197. The next biggest buyer was Cuba, with $70,077. The French War Department took goods to the value of $29,416, while fair-sized shipments were made to New Zealand and Hayti. Cotton duck exports for the week aggregated $88,632, of which $67,283 went to London.

DISCUSS REFRIGERATION.

American Association Adopts Means to Advance Foreign Trade.

Manufacturers from all parts of the country are in attendance at the fifth annual convention of the American Association of Refrigeration, which began yesterday at the Astor. The annual banquet of the association took place last night, and the convention will end with a session this morning.

W. J. Rushton of Birmingham, Ala., Chairman of the Executive Committee, reported that efforts were being made by the committee to induce schools of technology and other educational institutions to install regular courses in refrigeration. Dr. F. Danenbaum, Chairman of the Committee on Trade Extensions, recommended that measures be adopted to further foreign trade in ice-making machinery and perishable foods, and that a bureau be instituted in the offices of the secretary to obtain information to be available to members seeking means to extend their trade abroad.

OATS.

The oats market was moderately active and firmer, influenced by the advance in wheat and corn and by export sales of about 200,000 bushels. The local cash market was firmer; standard quoted at 60c; No. 2 white, 60½c; No. 3 white, 59½c; No. 4 white, 58⅛@59½c; fancy clipped white, 60½@62c; ordinary clipped white, 59½@61c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The market for hog products was moderately active and firmer, with covering and buying by packers prompted by strength in grain and owing to a firmer tone to the hog position. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 9,000 head; estimated for Wednesday, 24,000. Kansas City received 11,000 and Omaha 8,200 head.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The market for cottonseed oil was firmer, in sympathy with the general advance in other commodities and on buying by local commission houses. The demand was not very aggressive, but offerings were small and final quotations were 8 to 11 points net higher. The range of prices was as follows:

COFFEE.

The coffee market, which declined on Monday as a result of the feeling of pessimism which prevailed in all the markets, rallied yesterday on the more optimistic trend of mind which prevailed generally, and values at the close of the day were 8 to 11 points higher.

In the local spot market trading was quiet and the undertone was easy. Rio 7s ex-shipment were quoted at 7⅛c, while spot 7s were still held at 7¾c, which, it was thought, might be shaded for invoice lots.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts for week, 50,485; last week, 41,448 packages. Exports to Europe for week, 1,025 packages; to other countries, 596 packages. Imports for week, 230 packages. The market held quite firm on nearly all grades of table butter up to the close on Saturday. Supplies were barely equal to the wants of the trade, but receivers pieced out the goods and made no attempt to force prices higher. So far this week there has been a material increase in the receipts, and this has caused a sharp downward turn. Values have fallen 2@2½c on fresh creamery, and at the close it is easier to buy than to sell extras at 28½c. The higher scoring lots bring 29@29½c to a moderate extent only. Lower grades range from 28c down to 22@23c for very poor, though there are not many fresh goods to be had under 26c. Old creamery does not figure much in the trade. Renovated has weakened a little toward the close, and there is a little easier feeling on ladles and packing stock, with somewhat larger supplies in sight. Creamery, extras, (92 score,) 28½c; higher scoring, 29@29½c; firsts, 27@28c; seconds, 25@26½c; thirds, 22@24c; creamery, old, common to prime, 22@26½c; State Dairy, finest, 28c; good to prime, 26½@27½c; common to fair, 22@26c; renovated, extras, 23½@24c; firsts, 22½@23c; lower grades, 20@21½c; imitation creamery, firsts, 22@22½c; ladles, current make, firsts, 21½@22c; seconds, 20@21c; lower grades, 19@19½c; packing stock, current make, No. 2, 20c; lower grades, 18@19½c.

EGGS.—Receipts for week, 169,895 cases. The arrivals have fallen off somewhat from the high point noted a week ago, but are still liberal. Qualities are running down, and the proportion of strictly fine fresh stock showing strong body and fit for the best class of trade is becoming small; for such prices have ruled quite firm and slightly in sellers' favor. But there is pressure to sell the average good and lower grades, for which values are irregular and showing a wide range. Dirties and checks in fair demand and firm; undergrades move slowly, especially checks, some of which have to be sold at very low prices. Nearby white eggs are also of somewhat irregular quality and value; it requires very fancy stock to reach top quotation; undergrades are urgently offered; most of the business ranges from 22@23c. Fresh gathered, extras, per dozen, 22½@23c; storage packed, extra firsts, 21½@22c; storage packed, firsts, 20½@21½c; regular packed, extra firsts, 21@21½c; regular packed, firsts, 19½@20½c; seconds, 18@19c; thirds and poorer, 17@17½c; storage packed, dirties, No. 1, 17½@18c; fresh gathered, dirties, No. 1, 17¼@17½c; No. 2 and poorer, 15½@17c; checks, good to choice, dry, 16@16½c; culls and inferior, 10@15c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby, hennery whites, fine to fancy, 23@23½c; ordinary to good, 22@22½c; gathered whites, as to size and quality, 21@22½c; Western, gathered whites, 21@22c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby, hennery browns, 22@23c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 20@21½c; duck eggs, State and nearby, Indian runner, 25@27c; Baltimore, per dozen, 22@24c; Western, 20@22c; Tennessee and other Southern, 19@21c.

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday..3½@4 per cent. for the best names
Monday....3½@4 " " " " "

The quotation is for six months' paper.

Shifts in Duck Exports.

Some rather noticable shifts are reported in the cotton duck export business. Factors in the trade state that the heavy rush of these goods to France and England for military purposes have now gotten down to a minimum. While business with the Allies has slackened, new fields have opened elsewhere. Perhaps the most noticeable example of this is to be seen in shipments to China. A prominent factor in the trade said yesterday that more duck has been shipped to China in the last two weeks than in any similar period in a long time. Considerable business is being done with Argentina and Brazil, and some in the trade take the optimistic view that a heavier demand will shortly come from these countries. Exports to Cuba are reported at low ebb, while the movement to Porto Rico is described as very poor.

No Interest in Serges.

There seems to be very little interest in evidence regarding serges for next Spring. Usually at this time the mills have made their prices to the jobbers and taken on business. The general apathy, as far as this staple fabric is concerned, is causing some factors no small amount of anxiety. So far no cloth has taken the place of serge, but the demand for the fabric has been very dull for some time. The mills seem content to let the situation work itself out, and are in no hurry to push out prices before there is evidence that the buyers are willing to talk business. One selling agent said that the only inquiry he has had on serges was from a clothier who wanted to know if he would sell his goods on the same basis as last year.

The Dyestuffs Shortage.

Out-of-town mill men who were in the cotton goods district yesterday conferring with representatives here emphasized the shortage in dyestuffs. In some instances the mill men said they had only enough colors for certain lines to last a few weeks, while the outlook generally was far from encouraging. There was complaint that in the allotment of dyestuffs certain handlers of colors are discriminating in favor of some mills, while turning down applications for identical colors from others. Some of the agents said they would have to have recourse to natural dyes for some of their lines. There appears to be, however, a tendency to hold off as long as possible from using the old-fashioned colors. The American manufacturers of these colors, it was said yesterday, continue to be embarrassed in getting desired supplies of crude material through lack of adequate shipping facilities.

Novelties in American Cottons.

Cotton dress goods are reported to be in a very satisfactory condition. The business being done is of fair volume in many lines. The dearth of competitive foreign goods in the market is being taken advantage of by many mills to bring out novelties and other fabrics of a sort formerly largely bought from Europe. It is predicted that these goods will find favor among buyers and consumers and there are not those lacking in the trade who are of the belief that after the war many American cottons in their line will hold their own with the competing products. Many hold that the present slow-down in fancy goods imports gives domestic designers a fine chance to display their ingenuity and artistic ability.

Appoint Committee to Co-operate.

A committee was appointed yesterday at a meeting of the Lace and Embroidery Association which will keep in touch with the work of the new commission appointed by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo to investigate further the schedule for calculating the valuation of St. Gall embroideries. The following are on the committee of the association: I. N. Landauer of the Einstein Wolff Co., Richard Muser of Muser Bros., Max Neuburger of Neuburger & Co., George Pohlmann of William Meyer & Co., and Felix Meyer of Blanck & Co. This committee, it was said, will co-operate in every possible way with the Treasury Department officials. The meeting yesterday was well attended not only by members but by those in the trade outside the organization who are interested in the matter of the St. Gall schedule.

Coal Trade Situation.

In referring to the situation as regards anthracite, the Coal Trade Journal of today will say that already restriction is reported at a few collieries in the Schuylkill region and that this will soon become more general is evidenced by the falling off in demand since the end of April. A revival is looked for toward the end of the month, however, and with the outlet for surplus tonnages afforded by the lakes it is probable that running will be carried on at pretty nearly top-notch speed until well in June. In bituminous coal, the greater activity which is now in evidence in the mining regions is not reflected in spot demand at tidewater. The market is in a fairly healthy condition, though quiet. Every week sees the trade gradually getting into a stronger position.

No Time to Help Speculation.

When times are dull in the fabric markets there is a general disposition on the part of the salesman to "talk up" certain goods in order to induce buying. As one factor pointed out, this practice does not pay in the long run, although it may result in the salesman getting an order. Just at the present time, when the garment manufacturers have been hard hit by big retail failures, the salesman has more to gain for his house by conserving the resources of his customers than by exploiting them. The ordinary way to get a manufacturer to give an order when he is not so inclined is to show him something new and tell him it is being sampled out to a very large extent. This is "talking up" a fabric and the sampling exists only in the salesman's imagination.

Gray Goods Prices Remain Firm.

While the gray goods market yesterday was quiet, it showed unmistakable strength fundamentally. Some factors in the trade said the market still reflects the uncertainty created over the Lusitania and other recent happenings of a political character. When the situation as to these is cleared up the sentiment seems to be that brisk business will be done. The belief that business will shortly become normal is predicated on the fact that there is certain need of goods which must be met. Heavy sheetings were firm yesterday with some inquiry for export account. Narrow print cloths are strong and scarce with a demand for goods of this kind. Leading commission houses quoted spot goods as follows:

39-inch, 68-72s...4⅞c	38½-inch, 60-48s..3½c

Any Excuse is Good Enough.

The average excuse given for a cancellation is something to smile over. In fact, one manufacturer when he gets an original story puts it away in what he calls his "joke book." The latest addition to his collection is probably an old tale, but since it hasn't been used recently he thinks it is worth preserving. A retailer ordered some merchandise when these particular goods were going "strong." The demand suddenly dropped out of sight before time for shipment came, and the manufacturer was asked to cancel the lot. As a reason the retailer said that the stock clerk who had taken inventory "made a mistake," and the goods were not really needed. The manufacturer, of course, did not feel that the excuse was a justifiable one, but he let the retailer have his way. "Some excuse or other is better than none," he says.

Dress Goods Demand Slow.

Dress goods buyers are not showing marked activity in covering their needs for next Fall, and the market as a whole is passing through more or less of a dull period. Sellers believe that the demand will be a late one and will come with a rush that will send prices soaring. There is practically no business being done on serges, and factors in the market are at least at a loss to explain this. Poplins are regarded as a steady enough proposition in certain quarters, and in others the mills are "shaky" on this fabric, due to cancellations received. The different points of view depend, no doubt, on the worth of cloth itself. Whipcords and gabardines are being well taken, the former in a twill sufficiently wider to distinguish it from the last named goods. After a good Spring business on chudhas, a mohair filled fabric, buyers are rather favorably disposed toward them for Fall.

Russia Buying Merino Wool.

LONDON, May 11.—There were only 8,680 bales brought forward at the wool auction sales today. Congestion at the docks and warehouses was responsible for the small offerings. The demand was good and prices were steady. Russia took many lots of Queensland scoured merinos and paid 2s 3½d for the best grades.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Rebound on Traders' Interpretation of the President's Speech.

The ground which the stock market lost on Monday it regained yesterday on half the volume of the previous day's transactions. The list had to be scanned closely to find stocks which did not participate in the advance. Monday's selling seems to have included a good deal of short selling and yesterday's advance to have been accelerated by a hasty retreat by some of those who took a bear position the previous day. The forward movement, though, was so general and so vigorous, being renewed shortly before the close after a long lull in the trading, that it was plainly indicated that trading sentiment as a whole after the depression of Monday had swung strongly in favor of renewed buying.

The motive of yesterday's rise was nowise in doubt. On all hands one heard that the President's speech at Philadelphia meant that there would be no war with Germany. Mr. Wilson did not name Germany nor the Lusitania and he himself said yesterday that his utterances at Philadelphia were to be accepted generally and not to be applied specifically to the existing situation, but Wall Street, or that part of it which was active in the stock market yesterday, chose to interpret the President's utterances as meaning that no breach with Germany will occur over the sinking of the Lusitania. In their attitude yesterday traders were plainly unmindful of the larger questions at issue in the situation to which the sinking of the Lusitania has given rise, or more strictly speaking, has served to accentuate, for it is plain that the sinking of that vessel is but one of the deeds which have created the sentiment which exists in this country today.

It is probably true that yesterday's market was a Wall Street made market to a much larger extent than that was true of the movement which during April was carrying prices forward so impetuously. The two markets at least had this in common, that they chose to put aside consideration of the uncertainties of the situation. Yet it is plain that these have been increased instead of diminished by the events of recent days. Had it appeared in yesterday's news that the representations which this country has to make to Germany would be acceded to and that all danger had passed of our being obliged to take measures of war, or measures likely to lead to war, there would have been much more solid foundation for the day's sharp rise in prices. No such conclusion, however, could fairly be drawn from the general statements made by Mr. Wilson and there was no other basis for the conclusion to which the Stock Exchange jumped yesterday.

The fact of the matter was that nothing had yet been done by our Government, and so long as Washington is silent uncertainty must exist as to the exact steps which the United States will take in the emergency which confronts the country. The market assumed rather too much, but count has to be taken of the fact that in the stock market violent movements in one direction are apt to beget violent movements in the other. Thus a partial explanation of yesterday's rise is found in the mere fact that the previous day there had been a heavy and abrupt decline. The comment was heard in the financial district that a more reserved market would more accurately have reflected the general state of sentiment, and that no doubt was a fair view.

There was some good news, but the market did not relate its advance to that. Announcement was made early in the day that the last of the $65,000,000 of Pennsylvania bonds had been covered by the public subscriptions. The sale of these in the course of three business days after they were publicly offered is a notable achievement if considered in the light of the fact that these were days of great and unusual uncertainty. The monthly statement of the American Railway Association showed a decrease of over 37,000, or more than 11 per cent., in the number of idle freight cars during April. During that month last year there was an increase of close to 90,000, or 64 per cent., a contrast which serves as a reminder that business was then in a period of decline, while it is now in a period of recovery. The weekly export preliminary figures showing an export balance of $20,555,000 confirmed the continuance of a trade movement which is adding substantially at an unusual rate to our already extraordinarily large credit balance in this year's trade.

LONDON MARKET QUIET.

Money Plentiful—Discounts Not Affected by Influx of Gold.

LONDON, May 11.—Money was plentiful today. Discounts were not affected by the influx of gold yesterday, as Treasury bills are issued daily to maintain the rates.

The stock market was quiet and steady. A few investment bargains were reported, but war loans, Japanese bonds, Colonial stocks, and mining and oil shares barely moved.

American securities moved irregularly. Canadian Pacific, Union Pacific, and United States Steel were supported in the afternoon, while the others were neglected and easy. The closing was uncertain.

U. S. Reduction Troubles.

The United States Reduction and Refining Company yesterday sent a notice to bondholders advising them against depositing their bonds with a protective committee, recently formed. The company alleges that the receivership was procured by the old management after the property of the Reduction Company had been rendered of little value by an agreement with a competing concern not to engage in business. The newly elected officers are now conducting an investigation in

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

A Fighting Bull Market.

Brokers yesterday were of the opinion that the sharp upturn in prices demonstrated conclusively that the bull market, which was interrupted so rudely by the sinking of the Lusitania, had not completed its course. Just as soon as President Wilson made his speech through which ran an assurance that the United States was not to plunge into war, prices recovered a large part of their losses. It has been an ideal market for the speculator who cries for action. A trader who is light on his feet can ride up and down with the war issues and close out every afternoon with a big balance on the right side. Looking back over a few days' transactions, it is hard to see how any one close to the market, as the traders are, could avoid making profits. As a matter of fact, the experienced broker thinks along the same lines as the man in the street, and as a rule expects a bear market to go lower or a bull movement to climb higher. It was the ticker's judgment yesterday that the Lusitania tragedy was not going to result in war for the United States, and the upward movement which had been halted took fresh breath and started in to regain lost ground.

Reserve Banks' Central Fund.

The announcement from Washington yesterday regarding the establishment on May 24 of the proposed central gold fund for the settlement of differences among the twelve regional banks set forth that the fund would consist of $12,000,000, to be made up of contributions of $1,000,000 each from the reserve banks. As a matter of fact, according to local member banks, the fund will be approximately $25,000,000, as stated in the early stories of the new plan. The other $13,000,000 will consist of payments to be made by the debtor banks of the sums owed other banks. The New York institution has had a credit to its balance of from $5,000,000 to $20,000,000 in its dealings with the other reserve banks, and it is said that, had the new fund been established when the plan was taken up for discussion, the debtor banks would have paid in enough in addition to their $1,000,000 assessment to make the central fund $25,000,000. It is expected that the movement of money from one part of the country to another will in time right itself, so that, while title to the money at Washington will shift from one creditor bank to another, it will not be necessary to ship money to settle differences. If the plan that has been discussed works out, daily settlements will in time succeed the weekly settlements soon to be inaugurated.

Municipals Recover Quickly.

The shock the security markets experienced on Monday was reflected in quotations for municipal bonds, and the improvement in sentiment was displayed in a quick turn of bid prices. New York City 4¼s, which sold before the Lusitania was sunk at 100½ were quoted 99½ bid on Monday afternoon and at 99¾ bid yesterday afternoon. They were offered at 100 both days, and holders were said to be so reluctant to make concessions that the market came practically to a standstill after Monday's break on the Stock Exchange. City 4½s were quoted at 103¾ bid, offered at 104¼ Monday after selling before the disaster at 105½. Yesterday the bid was advanced to 104¼ and the offered price to 105.

Copper Market Reflections.

The copper market presents a good illustration of the way the Lusitania's destruction affected shippers of material for the armies. Instead of receding, as might have been the case if dealers had thought commerce was to be severely curtailed by submarines, sales were reported yesterday at better than 19 cents. Direct exports of the metal have of late displayed a tendency to decline, but it is said in the trade that domestic brass manufacturers for shell making purposes is increasing and this brass is destined to go to Europe. Evidently the loss of a round amount of brass sheets on the great steamship did not carry any inference to manufacturers that the same fate was due to befall other substantial shipments.

Many Short Sellers Stand Fast.

The precipitate buying in the first quarter hour of business made it appear as though the short-interest was of a single mind. It was to get a cover over their heads. Later events indicated, though, that a sizable part of the short selling forces was not so scared as it seemed from 10 to 10:15 o'clock. Brokers reported that a steady output of short sales had been placed beginning with initial rumors of the loss of the Lusitania and continuing to the close of business yesterday, of which a large part remained uncovered. The selling that occurred in the afternoon trading yesterday was very well received and prices were stable as trading drew to a close.

London Stock Exchange.

A report from London states that 511 members of the London Stock Exchange are not renewing their membership for another year. This represents about one-tenth of the total membership. A New York Stock Exchange member, commenting on the thinning ranks in the London Exchange, expressed the view that the $200 annual dues represented a hardship to the English brokers in these times of limited business.

Few Idle Cars.

On May 1 there were 37,467 fewer idle cars on the railroad lines of the United States and Canada than on April 1. The net surplus of idle cars on May 1 was 289,627. Each month, since the beginning of the year, there has been improvement in the railroad business, as shown by the data gathered by the American Railway Association. The surplus of 289,627 for May 1, however, is still 60,748 above the figures for May 1, 1914. The decrease reported by the railroads for the current month were principally in the Eastern and Central States. The Central Southern States and the whole of Canada, on the other hand, reported a greater number of idle box cars.

MAXWELL MOTORS DIVIDEND

Yesterday's Declaration Puts Stock on a 7 Per Cent. Annual Basis.

The Maxwell Motors Company yesterday declared an initial quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent. and an additional dividend of ¾ of 1 per cent. on the first preferred stock, payable July 1 to stockholders of record June 10. This declaration put the shares on a 7 per cent. annual basis and provided for the payment of a part of dividends in arrears. As dividends have been accumulating since January, 1913, about 15 per cent. is yet to be paid.

The company has outstanding $12,279,832 in 7 per cent. cumulative first preferred, $10,127,467 in 6 per cent. noncumulative second preferred, and $12,778,057 in common stock. Earnings have been reported large this year. In the fiscal year of 1914 the balance for first preferred stock dividends was slightly more than 12 per cent.

COTTON BUOYANT ON WILSON SPEECH

Market Soars Nearly $3 a Bale and Closes Strong, with a Net Gain of $1.50.

OFFERINGS ARE VERY LIGHT

President's Peaceful Talk Is Aided by Showers in South and Decreased Acreage Report.

Cotton displayed remarkable buoyancy yesterday and made a recovery ranging from fifty-seven to fifty-nine points above the extreme depression of Monday. The close was at a net gain of thirty-one to thirty-five points.

This surprising display of strength was due largely to the pacific character of President Wilson's speech in Philadelphia Monday night. The cotton trade quite generally took this address as sounding the keynote of the President's policy in dealing with existing international complications.

The ease with which the market recovered also gave the impression that it was in a sold-out condition. The advance took place on very light trading. Offerings were limited, and cotton was hard to buy. Moreover, the fact that the weather was all that could be desired served to show that prices could advance in the face of bearish news. The detailed weather reports showed widely scattered showers ranging from an eighth of an inch to more than two inches over a large area in Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi, and the Carolinas. The precipitation in Texas was light, and beneficial rather than otherwise.

The report of the Watkins Bureau on an average date of May 1 places the indicated cotton acreage at 30,378,000 acres, a decrease of 17.8 per cent. compared with last year. At the average date at which this report was compiled approximately 60 per cent. of the crop had been planted compared with 61.4 per cent. last year. Over the greater part of the belt the season was said to be about two weeks later than normal.

The Cotton Exchange membership standing in the name of Bruce L. Rice was sold from the rostrum by Superintendent King yesterday at 12 o'clock. William Mitchell was the buyer, and the price paid was $13,000, which compares with the last regular sale at $14,000.

Southern spot markets as officially reported were unchanged, 13 to 20 points advance. The local market for spot cotton was quiet, 15 advance, 9.85 for middling upland. The range of contract prices was as follows, with a strong close:

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

The day on the Consolidated Stock Exchange opened with a rush to buy stocks. Prices showed overnight gains extending to several points in some of the leading issues. The advance, however, invited large profit taking. Some of the offerings apparently represented lines which had been bought originally for the purpose of protecting the market on the recent demoralization, following the news of the torpedoing of the Lusitania. This selling took the edge off the improvement, with prices reacting. The undertone, however, continued good, with renewed firmness showing in the late afternoon.

RESERVE BOARD GOLD FUND.

$12,000,000 to be Collected from Banks for Clearing Balances.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Details of an important step in co-ordinating the work of the Federal Reserve system was announced today in a statement that a fund of $12,000,000 in gold would be collected for clearing balances among the Federal Reserve Banks, under the direction of the Federal Reserve Board. The Federal Reserve Board was specifically authorized, in the act creating the system, to act as a clearing house for the Federal Reserve Bank, and it was pointed out in the debates in Congress that such authority might permit a long step in the direction of modifying the system in the direction of a central bank.

Under regulations issued by the Federal Reserve Board this afternoon, each Federal Reserve Bank must, not later than May 24, forward to the Treasury or the nearest sub-Treasury "for credit to the account of the gold settlement fund," $1,000,000 in gold or gold certificates, and in addition, an amount at least equal to its net indebtedness to all other Federal Reserve Banks. This deposit must be maintained at all times at the $1,000,000 mark, settlements of amounts due to the Reserve Banks to be made each Thursday.

The determination of the board to require the physical presence of the gold in Washington is indicated by a regulation as to a safe in the vaults of the Treasury to be set aside for it, with a combination known to two designated officials. The fund would be audited not less than once in three months by an official of the Federal Reserve Board and an agent designated by the banks.

Each bank will be permitted to count as part of its reserve its deposits in the clearance fund.

HEAVY BEET SUGAR GAINS.

American Company's Profits Increased by British Cane Orders.

The American Beet Sugar Company's gross sales in the year ended March 31 amounted to $8,304,423, a gain of $220,727 over the record of 1914. Expenses were reduced by $688,624, and net income in consequence of these changes was considerably better than twice the revenue of the preceding fiscal period. The total was $1,601,642, as compared with $644,104. After paying $300,000 in preferred stock dividends, and reserving $176,988 for depreciation and additions, a surplus of $1,124,654 remained, against $152,074 the year before.

"The rapid and phenomenal advance in price during August and September," says the pamphlet report, "was due primarily to England rushing into the cane markets, regardless of price, to secure a supply which customarily is taken from the Continent; the importation of Great Britain annually being about 1,200,000 tons of European beet and 400,000 tons of cane.

"The price of refined sugar (New York basis) jumped from $4.20 for 100 pounds (the average June and July basis) to the high point of $7.50 a hundred in the early days of August, and it maintained an average of $6.34 to Sept. 1, 1914. Since that time to March 1, 1915, the average price has been $5.70 per 100 pounds."

AMSTER TO GO TO COURT.

He Wants to be Party to Rock Island Receivership Suit.

A petition will be filed in the United States District Court at Chicago today on behalf of N. L. Amster, newly elected Director of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Company, asking that Mr. Amster and his associates in the Amster Protective Committee be made parties to the suit in which the railway company was placed in the hands of receivers. The original complainant in the suit was the American Steel Foundries, which had an unsecured claim of $15,818 against the railway company.

Mr. Amster and his lawyers would not discuss the case yesterday. It is understood, however, that the petition will contain a sweeping denunciation of the actions of certain Directors connected with the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, and that it will attack the validity of the receivership.

Associated with Mr. Amster in the action will be Frank W. Bauder of Fort Plain, N. Y.; Edwin S. Dickerson of Philadelphia; Nathaniel French of Davenport, Iowa; Alfred J. Kepplemann of South Orange, N. J.; Peter G. Ten Eyck of Albany; George G. Prentice of New Haven, and Warren C. Crane and Courtlandt Linkroum of this city.

If the petitioners become parties to the receivership suit, as appears from similar suits, no action affecting the Rock Island system can be undertaken by the receivers, H. U. Mudge and Colonel J. M. Dickinson, without taking into consideration the Amster Protective Committee. If application were made to the court, for instance, to issue more receivers' certificates, Mr. Amster could appear in court to voice his objection to such a project. Or if a plan for lifting the Rock Island out of receivership were presented Mr. Amster and his associates would have the right to be represented in the deliberations.

Another move against the Amster interests was seen yesterday in the formation of a committee to protect the equity of Rock Island shareholders. The new committee consists of Charles Hayden, W. Emlen Roosevelt, and W. J. Matheson, who were recently elected Directors by the dominant interests in the company, and F. L. Leland, J. S. Alexander, and A. F. van Hall, the latter representing Dutch holders. Mr. van Hall had been counted as a supporter of the Amster faction, and his acceptance of a place on the new committee is regarded as an indication that he has aligned himself with the Reid-Moore group and against Amster.

Decides for T., St. L. & W. in Bond Suit.

J. S. Bache, Chairman of the Stockholders' Protective Committee of the Toledo, St. Louis & Western, was notified yesterday that the United States District Court at Toledo had decided in the committee's favor pending motions asking for permission for the stockholders to intervene in a suit brought by the Central Trust Company to enforce payment of bonds.

United Cigar Stores Company of America

was the first stock to recover and to subsequently reach its highest price after the outbreak of the war in July, 1914.

It is bound now to set the pace in the improvement of values that will follow after the shock of the "LUSITANIA" tragedy has spent its force.

United Cigar Stores Company of America is the safest Industrial issue available to investors.

The Company was admittedly among the first to sound the note of confidence and optimism to the American business man after the war.

It is now opening hundreds of new stores in every part of the country, indicating its strong faith in the future.

United Cigar Stores Company of America is a typically American enterprise, not affected by international or political disturbances.

It buys and sells for cash only.

It is run on the plan of maximum efficiency.

It is the clearing house for the tobacco consumption in this country.

Mr. James B. Duke, our greatest authority on tobacco, said some time ago in an interview:

"War times and other periods of general depression have never resulted unfavorably for the tobacco industry."

If you buy

you are in partnership with the best business men in America.

You are sure of your principal and an attractive and steadily growing income.

The Value of a Trustee

Statistics show that the average bequest becomes dissipated in about seven years. Many times this is due to the unfortunate handling of funds by beneficiaries who know little or nothing of the principles of sound investment. This Trust Company serves as Trustee under the terms of a will or by private agreement, rendering a trained service, perfected through years of development. Its experience frequently enables it to conserve the resources of an estate to an extent far in excess of the legal fee, which is the same as for the individual trustee.

UPSETS INDIAN TREATY.

Game Laws Supersede Compact of the Big Tree.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 11.—The Court of Appeals today decided that Indians must observe the provisions of the State's game laws. Judge Hiscock wrote the opinion, which was unanimous. The case was based on an Indian treaty made 118 years go.

Walter S. Kennedy, Warren Kennedy, and Willie White, Jr., members of the Seneca tribe of Indians, sought release on a habeas corpus writ from the custody of the Sheriff of Erie County, by whom they were held on a charge of violating the game laws. They were arrested on May 31, 1914, by a Game Protector while spearing fish in Eighteen-Mile Creek, near their reservation lands in Erie County. They said they had the right to hunt and fish in the lands ceded to the State by the treaty of 1797, known as the Treaty of Big Tree, and that they were not subject to the game laws.

Under the treaty, which was negotiated by Robert Morris, the Indians ceded the lands west of the Genesee River to the State, but reserved the fishing and hunting rights forever, despite any laws which might be passed by the Legislature.

Justice Pooley at Special Term held that the Indians were not subject to the law and discharged them, but his decision was reversed by the Appellate Division. The decision today settles the question.

SUES GEN. DURYEA ESTATE.

Nurse to Son Who Killed His Father Alleges $16,800 Is Due to Him.

The estate of General Hiram Duryea, who was killed by his demented son, Chester B. Duryea, in his Brooklyn home in May of last year, was sued yesterday in the Supreme Court by Willard B. MacIntosh for $16,800. The plaintiff says he was employed by General Duryea during the period between 1900 and 1914, as his nurse, Secretary, purchasing agent and general utility man, and as nurse for the son, Chester.

He says the General promised to pay him $100 a month, buy him a home on the Great South Bay, provide him with a boat, and to pay him money enough to make him comfortable for life. MacIntosh was not mentioned in the General's will. The amount is fixed on an estimate of the probable length of the plaintiff's life and the amount necessary to enable him to live in his accustomed fashion.

Nones, a real estate dealer, of Manhattan, who was on trial on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the defunct Roseville Trust Company of Newark. Following the rendering of the verdict Clarence B. Whitman and John B. Faunce, both of New York, were placed on trial for their part in the wrecking of the trust company.

RULES AGAINST WALDO.

Court Upholds Sergeant Who Took Riot Precautions.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 11.—The action of Anthony F. Muldoon of New York City in taking a patrolman from his beat and assigning him to the pier of a steamship company to assist in regulating a line of persons buying tickets was upheld by the Court of Appeals today. Muldoon was fined thirty days' pay by Police Commissioner Waldo. The defense was that it had been reported to Muldoon that there was a crowd of men of various nationalities trying to get on the ship to return to Europe to participate in the war and that there was rioting and lives and property were endangered. The Court of Appeals wrote no opinion in affirming the order.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., May 11.—Acting under the provisions of the law enacted by the last Legislature, the Rockefeller Foundation today asked the State Board of Health for permission to carry on animal research at the proposed laboratory near Princeton. The board reserved decision.

The application was made for the foundation by Dr. Simon J. Flexner, medical director of the Rockefeller Institute, and Starr J. Murphy, its counsel. They asked for a permit of wide scope so that infected cattle might be taken to the laboratory from all sections of the State.

STOCKHOLDERS' PROTECTIVE COMMITTEE

To the Stockholders:

Believing that there is a substantial value in the stock of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Company and that the condition of the Company makes it feasible to reorganize to the great benefit of shareholders, the undersigned, at the request of a large number of shareholders, have formed a committee for the purpose of preparing and submitting a plan of reorganization.

It will be their endeavor to formulate a plan that will permit the Company to expand along sound lines in accordance with the requirements of the great territory which it aims to serve and to place the property, physically and financially, in such condition that it may rank with the most efficient railroads in similar and nearby territory.

It is not the intention of the Committee to call for a deposit of shares at the present time, but if nothing unforeseen occurs, to wait until a plan has been formulated so that stockholders when depositing may fully understand the condition of the Company's affairs and the details of the proposed plan.

The working out of such a plan is already engaging the attention of your Committee, who are giving it immediate and earnest consideration, and it is hoped that when completed it will meet the unanimous approval of the shareholders.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Morris Estate Sold at Auction for $310,465—Many Bargains Secured by Investors—Builders Buy Washington Heights Corner—An Active Bronx and Suburban Market.

Real estate bargains were plentiful in the Vesey Street Salesroom yesterday, when the realty of the late Arthur R. Morris was sold at public auction by Joseph P. Day for a total of $310,465. The improved properties brought $277,-475, and the sixty-five lots in the Borough of the Bronx $32,990.

The sale was arranged by Mr. Day and J. Clarence Davies for the executor, Henry Lewis Morris, and according to the will of the deceased the proceeds are to be distributed to various religious, charitable, and educational institutions in this city and Japan.

The properties offered were scattered in Manhattan, Bronx, Kings, and Queens, but those located in the Bronx called forth the most spirited bidding from the crowd of about six hundred investors and operators that completely filled the salesroom.

An indication of this was apparent in the heavy buying by Thomas F. Byrnes, an ex-Tax Commissioner, who secured twenty-four of the sixty-five lots in the Bronx opposite Franz Sigel Park, for $21,800, a little more than $1,000 per lot. Mr. Davies and James L. Wells appraised property four blocks below, while the United States Government was acquiring the new Post Office site, as having a value of from $7,000 to $10,000 a lot.

An interesting incident of the sale was furnished by Mr. Small, general agent of the Pennsylvania Mutual Life Insurance Company. About 1 o'clock Mr. Small bought for $675 a lot on Sheridan Avenue adjoining the northeast corner of 163d Street. Owing to this low bid the sale of lots in this particular section was suspended temporarily and other parcels offered.

Mr. Small left the salesroom and went to see the lot he bought, never having laid eyes on it before. He immediately returned to buy another lot or two, but the sale was over when he got back.

The top price of the auction was paid by Owen Tyler, a prominent horse trader of Louisville, Ky. Mr. Tyler was in town on business yesterday, and attracted by the advertisement delayed his return home to attend the auction and got what Messrs. Day and Davies believe was the best bargain. Mr. Tyler bought for $40,000 the southeast corner of 138th Street and Third Avenue, one of the important transfer points of the Bronx, and adjacent to the new subway, the sale affecting the land only.

Among the larger parcels sold were the following: 438-440 West Fifty-seventh Street, to Nathan L. Ottinger for $43,800; the Clay Contracting Company purchased nine lots on Mott Avenue aggregating $13,075; 202 Harrison Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., to Kathryn Mulgan for $3,400; 204 Harrison Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., to James Charet for $3,550; 206 Harrison Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., to Gertrude Getson for $2,750; 208 Harrison Street to Gertrude Getson for $3,500; 210 Harrison Street, to Gertrude Getson for $3,550; 212 Harrison Street, to Margaret E. Duffy for $3,400; 214 Harrison Street, to Kathryn McDonogh for $3,475; 216 Harrison Street, to Catherine Reidy for $3,275; 218 Harrison Street, to Catherine Reidy for $3,300; 311 Clinton Street, to J. K. Stuart for $3,800; 309 Clinton Street, to Margaret E. Duffy for $3,900; 307 Clinton Street, to James E. Wight for $4,200; 305 Clinton Street, to R. D. Davis for $4,025; 301 Clinton Street, to Kathryn McDonogh for $5,600; 303 Clinton Street, to Evelyn Ascher for $4,525; 10 Tompkins Place, to Peter F. Monahan, and 12 Tompkins Place, to Peter Monahan for $8,450.

"Every property of the estate was sold and all the buyers got bargains," said Messrs. Davies and Day at the conclusion of the sale. "The fact that the buyers were obtained though prices were lower than was anticipated is a concrete illustration that income-bearing property can be marketed whatever the conditions may be.

"The trying situation this country is now involved in by reason of the Lusitania tragedy doubtless cost the beneficiaries of the auction at least $25,000.

"Withal the result was satisfactory, as the estate was fully liquidated with no holdovers, and the purchasers will find as conditions improve that their bargains have more value than they now regard them."

Builder Buys Heights Corner.

The old Huggins estate property, one of the choice plots in the upper Washington Heights section, occupying the southwest corner of St. Nicholas Avenue and 157th Street, has been purchased by Irving Judis, as President of the Lehigh Building Corporation, from Francis B. Chedsey, executor of the estate of Samuel J. Huggins. The plot fronts 107 feet on St. Nicholas Avenue and 144 on 157th Street. It has been in possession of the family for over thirty years and from its elevated situation is admirably adapted for a high-class apartment improvement, which Mr. Judis intends to do at an early date. George Ranger acted as broker in the deal.

Mrs. Sage Buys in Fifth Ave. Loft.

Outside of the Morris estate sale there were a few other offerings of interest in the auction market. Mrs. Russell Sage, as plaintiff in the foreclosure action against the eleven-story loft on the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Fifteenth Street, 38.6 by 125, bought in the property for $350,000. The action was brought against William McBrien and others to recover a judgment of over $406,000, with taxes. Joseph P. Day sold the property. Another of his offerings was the three-story house at 115 East Sixty-fourth Street, 20 by 100.5, which was purchased for $36,200 by Dr. J. J. Moorehead.

Upper Manhattan Deals.

In the upper Manhattan district a large plot an 187th Street near St. Nicholas Avenue figured in an important deal for a new Bronx apartment. The plot 100 feet on the north side of 187th Street, 125 feet east of St. Nicholas Avenue, extending through to 188th Street with a total depth of 200 feet, was sold by Isidor Grayhead, being given in exchange to Joseph Reiss for the five-story new law flat on the southeast corner of Bryant Avenue and 179th Street, 45 by 100. The Manhattan lots were at once resold by Mr. Reiss to David Zipkin for apartment improvement.

Another deal in this neighborhood involved the sale of the new five-story business structure on the northeast corner of Audubon Avenue and 183d Street, 25 by 75, by the Value Realty Company to an out-of-town investor.

Investors Buy Tenement.

The Lawyers' Mortgage Company has sold to an investing client of Joseph Barbato the six-story new law house at 313 and 315 East 118th Street. It occupies a plot, 50 by 100, located between First and Second Avenues.

A client of L. and I. J. Joseph has purchased for investment 347 East Seventeenth Street a six-story tenement with stores.

Deal On East Thirty-first Street.

Mrs. Amelia S. Lansing has sold to a client of H. S. Lines 219 East Thirty-First Street, a three-story building on a lot 17 by 98.9. The buyer will make extensive alterations.

Bronx Sales.

Jacob Reich has increased his Bronx holdings by the purchase of 681 Fox Street, a twenty-family apartment house on a plot 40 by 100. Charles E. Dempsey negotiated the sale for the owner, Mrs. Emma Breckendorf.

Brooklyn.

John F. Burke sold to F. W. Jones the two-story and basement two-family house, on lot 20 by 100 feet, 348 Forty-ninth Street, to J. H. Carey, for occupancy; also the two-story and basement two-family dwelling, 570 Forty-sixth Street, on lot 20 by 100 feet, for D. P. Samon, to a buyer for improvement, and for Annie Cahill to Catharine F. Brown, for investment, the two-story two-family brick dwelling, 574 Seventy-second Street.

The two-story residence at 1,480 East Eighteenth Street, between Avenues N and O, on plot 33 by 100, has been sold by the Midwood Associates to Mrs. Mary E. Hill for occupancy. The Bulkley & Horton Company negotiated the sale.

Alexander Selkin sold for Samuel B. Steinmetz, 1313-1315 and 1317 Ruby Street, three one-family houses, brick, on a lot 20 by 100 each, to Charles Miller. In exchange Mr. Miller gives a 9-acre farm at Kenoza Lake, Sullivan County.

A $57,000 Queens Investment Deal.

The Lerner Realty Company has sold to an investing client of Edward R. Beran thirteen houses, for a total consideration of $57,900, including five two-family frame dwellings, 813, 824, 826, 831 and 838 Ocean View Avenue, Woodhaven; three stucco dwellings, at 225, 227, and 229 Jeffery Avenue, Jamaica, and five family detached dwellings at 142, 144, 146, 148, and 150 North Street, Richmond Hill.

Sales in Broadway-Flushing.

The Rickert-Finlay Realty Company has sold to George Scott of Manhattan a plot with a frontage of 80 feet on the east side of Twenty-sixth Street, corner of State Street, Broadway-Flushing, for $4,000, on which the buyer will build a home for his own occupancy.

Westchester County.

Fish & Marvin, in conjunction with Douglas Elliman & Co. have sold for Bertrand F. Bell his country estate at Scarsdale, Westchester County, known as Elm Ridge Farm, to Louis Bloomingdale of this city. The property comprises about thirty acres. Fish & Marvin also sold for the estate of Henry C. Merritt the Merritt homestead at Sagamore, Bronxville, to C. Linn Seiler, of Bronxville. The property consists of a large colonial dwelling, garage, and over one-half acre of land. It was held at $25,000.

Lower Sixth Avenue Building Leased.

Alexander J. Roux & Co., in conjunction with Bleiman & Co., have leased the entire building 118 and 122 Sixth Avenue, formerly occupied by Park & Tilford, for a term of years, to Rossig Brothers, manufacturers of artificial leaves, now at 497 West Broadway, who will occupy the building after extensive alterations are completed.

Recent Buyers.

The Henry Meyer Company is the buyer of Dr Charles Miller's estate, Queenslawn Park, in the Village of Queens. This property, which contains about 480 lots, will be improved at once by the buyers with detached frame dwellings. In exchange the buyers gave Georgian Court, a six-story elevator structure, 100 by 114 feet at 277 and 279 Gates Avenue, Brooklyn, held at $150,-000; the two four-story apartment houses at 984 to 988 Green Avenue, recently completed, 100 by 120 feet, and valued at $140,000, and the two-story garage, 100 by 120 feet on Lexington Avenue, between Reid and Patchen Avenues, recently completed at a cost of $32,000.

Judge Charles C. Nott is the buyer of the dwelling 151 East Sixty-first Street, sold recently by the estate of Hester B. Payton.

Dry Goods Men To Meet.

The annual meeting of the Wholesale Dry Goods Centre Association will be held next Tuesday at the headquarters, 317 Broadway. Charles G. Edwards, Secretary of the association, said yesterday: "Next week's meeting will find the organization in first-class condition. The principal object of the association is the maintenance in its present locality of the downtown wholesale cotton district." Secretary Edwards stated that during the year there had been practically no removals of jobbing houses uptown.

While two or three concerns engaged in the retail business are about to go northward, the large houses remain in their former locations. The determination to stay downtown is emphasized by the renewals of leases by present occupants for comparatively long periods, some being for five years.

The officers of the association are: President, Thomas W. Slocum; Treasurer, Edwin S. Schenck, and Secretary, Charles G. Edwards.

Commercial Leases.

Huberth & Huberth have rented to the Hudson Motor Car Company the stores in the Circle Building at Columbus Circle, being 1,842 and 1,844 Broadway, and connecting through to 6 West Sixty-first Street, together with basement space and space on the second floor, to be occupied for the executive offices. These stores have a frontage of 42 feet on Broadway and 31 feet on Sixty-first Street.

N. Brigham Hall & William D. Bloodgood, Inc., leased for Walter F. Kingsland of Paris to Emanuel Kramer the store and basement at 195 East Seventy-sixth Street.

Real Estate Notes.

John E. Eustis, former Public Service Commissioner, has been elected President of the Guaranteed Mortgage Company of New York. Mr. Eustis succeeds James L. Bennett, who resigned in order to devote his time to new interests in California. The Directors also voted to increase the capital and surplus of the Guaranteed Mortgage Company of New York from $350,000 to $500,000.

NATION'S NEED TOLD TO FLEET'S OFFICERS

FLETCHER RECOUNTS WORK

Sons of the Revolution Hear Praise of Enlisted Men—People's Interest in Show in Hudson Continues.

Admiral Frank F. Fletcher, the Commander in Chief of the Atlantic Fleet lying in the Hudson ready for next week's Presidential review, the officers of his staff, the fleet division commanders, Rear Admirals Mayo, Boush, McLean, and Coffman, and their staffs; Commander Yates Syrthing, Jr., the submarine flotilla commander, the Captains commanding the battleships, and many other officers of the fleet, were the luncheon guests of the Sons of the Revolution yesterday at Fraunce's Tavern, and the speakers were Admiral Fletcher, Colonel Edwin A. Glenn, U. S. A.; James M. Beck, Acting Mayor George McAneny, and Robert Olyphant, the President of the Sons of the Revolution in New York.

In offering the first toast, which was to President Wilson, Mr. Olyphant said:

"Let us stand and drink to the health of the President of the United States, and may an all-wise Providence protect and guide him in this crisis of the world."

Mr. Beck cited many times the official utterances of Washington, both as Commander in Chief of the army, and subsequently as President of the United States. He emphasized the advice given by Washington that the best way to have peace was to be prepared at all times for war. In a reference to the tension in this country, Mr. Beck called the present "this fateful hour."

Admiral Fletcher, who has never been accused of being a public speaker, and who like General Goethals much prefers to listen to others, had to make a short speech. He told of the hard work the fleet had done since Christmas, during most of which time it had been at battle practice in Southern seas, made a complimentary reference to the enlisted men of his great command, whom he described as a splendid body of young men whose average age was 21, who had been brought up in good American homes, who lived under a healthy environment, and who were receiving a training that would fit them for honorable careers in almost all the callings of civil life

Life of Sea Warriors Improved.

The Admiral referred to the change from sail to steam and from wooden vessels to armorciads, a change that had made life more comfortable and in every way improved the lot of the officers. Not once in his speech did the Commander in Chief refer to the troubles that rest upon the shoulders of President Wilson.

Mr. McAneny followed Admiral Fletcher and for the second time officially welcomed Admiral Fletcher and the men of his command to New York. He said that all New York liked the navy because the citizens realized that the navy represented the present strength of the nation.

Colonel Glenn, the Chief of Staff of the Eastern Division of the Army, said that it was all very well to say that ship for ship and man for man our navy was equal of any in the world, but this did not change the fact that whereas Germany had 800 miles of seacoast and Great Britain about 2,700 miles to defend, this country had a coast line of about 30,000 miles to look after. He also declared that the Panama Canal was a vulnerable point because it was made by man.

In the beginning of his speech, Mr. Beck referred to Washington's farewell to his officers which took place in Fraunce's Tavern, a scene, the description of which, he added, proved it one of the most impressive in history, a scene with which only one other could be compared and that was Napoleon's farewell to his Generals and men on the steps of Fontainbleau.

Washington need a World in Flames.

"When Washington again returned to New York," said Mr. Beck, "it was on an April morning to take the oath of office as the First President of the United States. Nothing in all his incomparable career was greater in its beneficent results and in its fine quality of moral heroism than his administration of that high office.

"He, too, faced the problem of a world which was in flames. Himself a man of peace, who never willingly drew the sword and who never unwillingly sheathed it when full justice had been done, he yet repeatedly and forcefully warned his countrymen that they must always be prepared to defend their interests and vindicate the honor of the nation. If he was the first in peace, he was always first in war. He was an ardent lover of peace, with a true vital reservation, that if the only choice lay between peace with dishonor and war to secure justice, he never hesitated to select the course of national honor and dignity.

"In his second inaugural address Washington said:

> The United States ought not to indulge a persuasion that, contrary to the order of human events, they will forever keep at a distance those painful appeals to arms with which the history of every other nation abounds. There is a rank due to the United States among nations which will be withheld, if not absolutely lost, by the reputation of weakness. If we desire to avoid insult, we must be able to repel it; if we desire to secure peace, one of the most powerful instruments of our rising prosperity, it must be known that we are at all times ready for war.

Quotes Washington's Golden Rule.

"While Washington was a strong believer in the policy of an adequate army and navy as the best insurance against war, yet he was too noble an idealist to ignore even greater and more potent values in civilization, and he therefore believed that the best method of preserving for this country the blessings of an honorable peace was not merely to be strong in resources, but to have the greater strength of an unsullied conscience. He gave to us the 'golden rule' of our foreign policy when he said:

> Observe good faith and justice toward all nations; cultivate peace and harmony with all. It will be worthy of a free, enlightened, and at no distant period, a great nation to give to mankind the magnanimous and too novel example of a people always guided by an exalted justice and benevolence.

"If George Washington could again revisit the glimpses of the moon and cross the threshold of this ancient edifice, and if he at this moment rose in our midst, clad in black velvet, with his sword at his side, his powdered wig covering his gray hairs, and the perpetual benediction of his benignant countenance shining upon us, I think he would share with us the pride and gratification that we all take in the navy of the United States and in the confident expectation that if the time should ever come when that navy would be obliged to vindicate by force the honor of the United States, every member, from the Admiral on the bridge to the humblest stoker in the engine room, would unite in passing along as a flaming torch to the next generation the noble and heroic traditions of the American Navy."

New York Yacht Club Gives Reception to Officers of the Fleet.

At a conference held in the fleet flagship Wyoming yesterday by Admiral Fletcher, Dock Commissioner R. A. C. Smith, and Commander Yates Stirling, Jr., commander of the submarine flotilla, it was decided to move the flotilla from West 138th Street to the recreation pier at the foot of Fiftieth Street. The change was made for the convenience of the public and as a matter of safety for those who wish to visit and inspect the submarines at close range. The vessels of the submarine flotilla are the auxiliary cruiser Prairie, which is the flotilla flagship; the mother ships Tonopah and Ozark, the tenders Fulton, MacDonough, and Worden, and the submarines D-1, D-2, D-3, E-1, E-2, G-1, G-2, G-3, K-1, K-2, K-5, and K-6.

Although the submarines continued the centre of attraction, all the warships were viewed and visited by large crowds yesterday.

The New York Yacht Club gave a reception last night to Admiral Fletcher, his staff, the division and ship commanders and their staffs, and the other officers of the fleet at the clubhouse in West Forty-fourth Street. No civilians other than members of the club were present. Among those at the reception were Commodore George F. Baker, Jr., Vice Commodore J. Pierpont Morgan, Commodore D. B. Pratt, Commodore C. Ledyard Blair, Commodore F. G. Bourne, and about 300 others. Cornelius and Harold Vanderbilt did not attend, owing to the death of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, who was among the passengers lost with the Lusitania.

After the big twelve-oared cutter race, among crews representing each of the sixteen first and second line battleships next Monday night, there will follow something in the line of public entertainment never before seen in New York. This will be when the fast launches of the various destroyers, each rigged up in "Mardi Gras" fashion, steam down the Hudson from a point about opposite 125th Street to the anchorage of the Wyoming off Eighty-second Street. Each launch will be a float, but what the floats will represent will not be made known until the night of the show, which will be viewed by President Wilson, who will be Admiral Fletcher's guest on the fleet flagship.

It was announced yesterday that there would be fireworks Saturday night on Riverside Drive from 115th to 120th Street from 8:30 until 9:30 o'clock, and music by the bands of the Twenty-third and Seventh Regiments. One of these bands will be at 116th Street and the other at 119th Street. Monday night the same two bands will furnish music in the same place. Should there be rain on Saturday night the fireworks will be displayed on Monday night.

Five hundred bluejackets will go to Paterson tonight to hear Billy Sunday preach. A special train has been arranged for the men. Mr. Sunday extended the invitation to the bluejackets several days ago.

A special mass for the men of the fleet will be celebrated in St. Patrick's at 11:30 o'clock tomorrow morning. The Rev. Father McDonald, Chaplain of the New York, will be the celebrant. Everybody will be welcome.

READY FOR MANOEUVRES.

Naval War College To Play Big Role in Coming Exercises.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., May 11.—Rear Admiral Austin M. Knight, President of the Naval War College, who is to act as official umpire of the war games with the Atlantic fleet, returned here today after a conference with Admiral Fletcher, Commander in Chief of the Atlantic fleet at New York. Members of the college staff will act in various capacities in the war games, and members of the college course will see some of the work from various ships.

The cruiser Brooklyn is expected from Boston tomorrow, taking aboard a large draft of enlisted men from the training station. Between then and the 17th inst. Admiral Knight will hoist his flag on the Brooklyn in these waters and sail away.

From time to time during the war games, which may continue until the latter part of May, various ships may slip in here, seeking reports, and in connection with finding Rear Admiral Frank E. Beatty, on board the cruiser, Chester, which is the enemy.

No one will tell at this time where the fleet will base, as the trip to San Francisco through the Panama Canal is understood to be off, for the present at least.

If matters go as hoped, there will be a larger class of officers attending the course at the Naval War College this Summer than ever before, and if the fleet bases here Admiral Fletcher will detail a number of officers to attend from time to time, as there is more cooperation between the fleet and college today than ever, which will be beneficial to the navy in many ways. Secretary Daniels is with the college strongly and has done more to advance its interests than many of his predecessors.

The new class of officers report July 1. It is probable Secretary Daniels will deliver an address before the college in June.

Summit Silk Strike Ended.

Special to The New York Times.

SUMMIT, N. J., May 11.—With handshakes between strikers and strike-breakers the strike at the Summit Silk Mill ended today when about 300 men, after being out of work for seven weeks, returned under practically the same conditions that existed when they left on March 18. They have lost in wages more than $30,000 and the weavers, over whom the trouble arose, will be continued in service by the company. The settlement of the strike was due to the efforts of an arbitration committee appointed by Mayor Francis Bergen.

EX-RECORDER EMBEZZLER.

Bloomfield, N. J., Executor Convicted of Taking $5,600 from Estate.

Former Recorder James B. McKee of Bloomfield, N. J., was convicted yesterday in Quarter Sessions Court in Newark of the embezzlement of $5,600 of the estate of Mrs. Julian A. Gleichmann of Bloomfield.

The case had been on trial for several days before Judge Martin and a jury. The defense sought to clear McKee on the ground of insanity and medical testimony was produced to support this contention.

The defendant repeatedly testified that he did not know what had become of the money which was in his care as executor of Mrs. Gleichmann's estate.

As Police Recorder, McKee collected at various times fines he had imposed and yesterday he swore that he could not tell whether he had deposited these funds to the town credit, or had pocketed the money and subsequently drawn checks against the Gleichmann estate to reimburse the town.

TRENTON RE-ELECTS BOARD.

Suffragists Active at Polls and Antis Complain to the Police.

TRENTON, N. J., May 11.—With more than two-thirds of the vote tabulated by midnight there was no doubt that this city had re-elected its Board of five Commissioners. The election was the second since the adoption of the commission form of government.

There were twenty-two candidates.

Mayor Frederick W. Donnelly is apparently leading Director of Public Safety George B. La Barre. Vice President Edward W. Lee and Commissioners William F. Burk and J. Ridgway Fell are also well ahead of the other candidates. Frank H. Hutchins, former Police Commissioner, is leading the outside candidates, but is nearly 2,000 votes behind Fell.

Suffragists had workers stationed at all of the polling places to sound the sentiment on votes for women and to solicit contributions. The special election on equal suffrage and the other constitutional amendments will be held on Oct. 18.

E. Yard Breese, President of the New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, complained to the police that the suffragists were violating the Corrupt Practices act by distributing literature and soliciting votes and money within the prohibited distances of polling places. Chief Cleary issued orders to arrest all violators. Among the suffragists at work were Miss Florence Leach of Montana, field organizer of the New Jersey Suffrage Association, and Mrs. William S. Armstrong.

NEW OCEAN CITY OFFICIALS.

Old Commissioner Charged with Extravagance and Defeated.

OCEAN CITY, N. J., May 11.—Because the voters considered their four years of power an era of extravagance, the present Commissioners were defeated for re-election at the polls today. The new Commissioners will be Joseph G. Champion, who received 421 votes; William H. Campbell, who polled 371 votes, and George O. Adams, who polled 390 votes.

Camden Theatre Burned.

CAMDEN, N. J., May 11.—Ten minutes after an audience of 600 persons had left the Broadway Theatre this afternoon a fire which started in the dressing room under the stage spread through the building, causing a total loss. Miss May Walker, who was the last act this afternoon bill, was overcome by smoke and rescued by firemen. A moving picture operator who went back in the building was also overcome by smoke. An audience of 200 in a moving picture theatre only a few doors from the burning building left in safety when the operator flashed "Good Night" on the screen.

Recorder Hurt in Auto Crash.

ORANGE, N. J., May 11.—Recorder Charles B. Gurney of Bloomfield and Marcus H. Mulford of East Orange were slightly injured today when an automobile and a milk wagon came together in East Orange. DRAFTING CHINESE TREATY.

It Will Provide for the Restoration of Kiao-Chau.

TOKIO, May 11.—The Japanese Foreign Office is drafting a treaty with China based upon the acceptance of the provisions in Japan's ultimatum, including the restoration of Kiao-Chau.

Admitting that the public is displeased with the results of the negotiations, the conservative press is urging the Japanese to exercise self-restraint with regard to China.

Advices from Peking state it is believed there Russia will demand privileges in North Manchuria similar to those granted Japan in South Manchuria.

LONDON, May 11.—Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary, was asked in the House of Commons today by Alfred W. Yeo, a Liberal member for the Poplar Division of Tower Hamlets, "if there is any understanding between Great Britain and Japan regarding the spheres of influence for their respective development work in China in respect of minerals and railways?"

The Foreign Secretary replied, briefly:

"The answer is in the negative."

WASHINGTON, May 11.—While President Wilson has not fully examined the complete meaning of China's concessions to Japan, he does not expect that any treaty rights of the United States with either country will be contravened. He told callers today that he did not care to discuss the outcome of the negotiations at present, and intimated he would make a thorough study of the concessions with a view to determining their effects.

DEFEAT HAITIAN REBELS.

Government Forces Drive Insurgents in Disorderly Retreat.

CAPE HAITIEN, May 11.—A battle occurred today on the heights near Cape Haitien between Government troops and the forces of Dr. Rosalvo Bobo, leader of the revolutionary movement against President Guillaume. The Government forces were victorious.

Dr. Bobo came into Cape Haitien on May 7, and held the city and the surrounding district until Government troops were brought up.

The rebels still occupy Cape Haitien itself, but were driven back in disorder to the gates of the city. Their guns were captured.

COMO, May 11.—The trial of Porter Charlton, who was extradited from the United States on the charge of having murdered his wife on June 9, 1910, at their villa here, will be opened early in July. This is much earlier than had been expected.

The court decided today on the date for the trial after receiving word from Professor Maggiotto, Director of the asylum at Como, that before the end of June he would be able to present his opinion as to Charlton's mental condition at the time of his wife's death.

Senile, but Competent.

The Rev. V. T. Willis informs us that though age is creeping upon him he is still a valuable man of God for tying nuptial knots, taking neither too much nor too little time for the performance. Of all the hundreds of such knots he has tied, not one of them has been severed except by death.—London (Ky) Sentinel.

A Famous Globe Trotter Remarked One Evening—

"When I dine at Churchill's I feel as if I am at 'the world's dining point of concentration,' for I meet both friends from throughout the United States as well as from the capitals of Europe. Here, nightly, is crystallized international cosmopolitanism at its height." Correct, indeed, was he in his statement.

Not only with New York's representative people does Churchill's hold a position of pre-eminent popularity but similarly with the discriminating of all cities.

Aside from its atmosphere, dining at Churchill's will reveal why it is held in such favor for dinner. One reason—its cuisine which appeals irresistibly to those who want the utmost in a la carte service, another reason—its Special Dinner, a culinary achievement, for $1.25. And, naturally, an entertainment admitted to be unequalled—

ITALIAN CABINET MAY PUT WAR UP TO PARLIAMENT

Decision to Do So Believed to Have Been Reached by Cabinet Yesterday.

WORST FEARED IN BERLIN

Vienna Orders All Austrian Ships in Italian Waters to Hurry to Home Ports.

GERMANS UNSAFE IN ITALY

ROME, May 12.—What is considered the last definite proposal of Austria concerning the territorial concessions demanded by Italy was received today by the Italian Government.

The Cabinet at once went into session to consider the communication. The meeting lasted over two hours. At its conclusion no communication was issued as to the result arrived at, but it is believed a decision was reached for the Cabinet to go before Parliament and submit the existing situation to that body.

Final decision as to whether Italy shall declare war or remain neutral rests with King Victor Emmanuel. The Italian Constitution gives to the Sovereign alone authority to "declare war, make peace, and conclude treaties.". It is not doubted, however, that he will be guided in his action by the advice of the Cabinet.

Reports are in circulation that there are differences of opinion between Premier Salandra and some of his Ministers, especially Baron Sonnino, the Foreign Minister, the Giornale d'Italia says the accord between the Ministers is perfect. Both Premier Salandra and Baron Sonnino in the Council of Ministers informed their colleagues concerning all the phases of the delicate and difficult negotiations and the obstacles that had to be overcome, and, according to the newspaper, received their full adhesion to all the resolutions which had been taken with a view to accomplishing the national program.

The two great political bodies in Italy, that in favor of war and that which believes the country should remain neutral to attain its national aspirations, have, up to the present time, refrained from any direct endeavors to interfere with the deliberations of or the conclusions to be reached by, the Cabinet, and this in spite of the very agitated discussion of these national questions which is going on from one end of the kingdom to the other.

The groups favoring war are the Democrats, the Radicals, the Republicans, the Nationalists, the Reform Socialists, and the Moderates. Those on the other side of the question are the Catholics, the Intransigeant Socialists, the Conservatives, and the supporters of ex-Premier Giolitti, who thinks adequate concessions can be obtained from Austria without war.

BERLIN, May 12, (via Amsterdam and London.—The Tageblatt says:

"The situation in Italy continues confused, and despite exertion made at a late hour by neutralists, is undeniably grave. It would be a mistake to ascribe excessive significance to former Premier Giolitti's interview with the King, as during the entire crisis the King has always declined to put himself in the foreground and depart from the rôle of a strictly constitutional monarch who is subject to the will of the Cabinet.

"All available news, moreover, makes it clear that military preparations continue incessantly. Therefore, the task of those who are still trying to avert a catastrophe is almost superhumanly great. Signor Giolitti is indeed a statesman whose ability is equal to very difficult problems, and if he intends to prevent war he will perhaps, with his knowledge of the political terrain, find effective means where any other person would fail. So today it is not necessary completely to abandon the last hope, although it is urgently necessary to give decisive warning against optimism."

GENEVA, Switzerland, May 12.—The Austrian Government has issued an order that all Austrian ships in Italian waters proceed at once to Trieste or Pola.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, May 12.—For the first time Rome has assumed a warlike aspect tonight. Officers and soldiers are greeted with applause wherever they make their appearance and the attitude of the people toward Austrians and Germans is becoming decidedly hostile.

Two Austrians and two Germans attached to the respective Embassies of their countries had to be surrounded by troops to save them from violence.

The army now is in the pink of condition. A general now in the north said today:

"The whole army at present is keyed up to attack—this is the right moment to begin. If held back too long the army will lose its fine point of fervor and it will be difficult if not impossible to arouse it again.

ROME, May 11.—Troops were called out last night to disperse a great crowd of war enthusiasts who paraded the principal streets, crying, "Down with Austria!" Down with Giolitti!" and cheering for Premier Salandra and Minister of Foreign Affairs Sonnino. Most of the persons in the throng apparently felt the greatest animosity toward former Premier Giolitti, who is

TYPHUS EPIDEMIC IN GERMAN PRISON CAMPS

Ambassador Gerard Reports Presence of Fever After Inspection of British Prisoners.

LONDON, May 12.—Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary, has received through Walter Hines Page, the American Ambassador at London, and James W. Gerard, the American Ambassador to Germany, a dispatch which says that typhus fever is present in the following German prison camps, where there are British prisoners of war: Zossen, Altdamm, Schneidermuhl, Gardelegen, Wittenberg, Zerbst, Sagan, Cassel, Langeensalza, and Chemnitz.

The cases at Zossen are said to be confined to Russian prisoners and a few of the Indian troops.

GAVE NO WARNING, OUR EMBASSY REPORTS

Statement Given Out in London Says Lusitania Sank 18 Minutes After Being Hit.

LONDON, May 12. — The following statement was issued today at the American Embassy:

"As to the sinking of the ship (Lusitania) it appears from all statements which have been secured that no warning was given. A torpedo hit amidships on the starboard side, and the ship listed because of the longitudinal character of the bukheads, the port air spaces remaining intact. Later she righted.

"The sinking was in sixty fathoms, and the Captain believes her nose touched bottom before her stern disappeared, accounting for the slight suction. It seems from reports rather dubious whether a second torpedo struck the ship.

ZEPPEINL SEEN OFF MOUTH OF THE TYNE

Attack on Newcastle or Big Ordnance Works Near There May Be Contemplated.

LONDON, May 12.—A dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Blyth says it is reported there that a Zeppelin airship was sighted eight miles from the mouth of the Tyne tonight.

A Newcastle dispatch to the same agency asserts that the Zeppelin was seen [illegible] coast early this evening. The engines were stopped, and it apparently was waiting for darkness to set in.

Three Drowned, Seventeen Saved When the Astrea Goes Down Off Coast of Italy.

TARANTO, Italy, via Paris, May 12.—The Italian steamer Astrea, bound from an English port with coal for the State Railways, sank today while nearing this port. It is believed she struck a mine.

The Astrea signalled for help, and boats sent to the rescue saved seventeen of the crew. Three were drowned.

ANTI-GERMAN RIOTS IN CONSTANTINOPLE

Many German Officers Have Been Injured By the Infuriated Populace.

GENEVA, (via Paris,) May 12. — The Journal de Genève has received a dispatch from Saloniki saying that many persons have been killed or injured in the course of riots in Constantinople. Mobs, numbering thousands, the newspaper says, pillaged the principal shops and hotels. The Sultan's guard has been called out.

According to this information, the Pera Palace Hotel, the largest and most pretentious European hotel in the city, was sacked. The police were overwhelmed.

Food prices in Constantinople have doubled and there is widespread misery among the poorer classes. The hospitals are crowded with wounded soldiers.

$500,000 TO EMPLOYEES OF MINING COMPANY

HOUGHTON, Mich., May 12.—Officials of the Calumet and Hecla Mining Company announced here today that on June 12 a bonus of over $500,000 would be distributed among the 10,000 employes of the company and its subsidiaries.

Giving business depression as a reason, the corporation on Sept. 1 last passed its dividend, put employes on three-quarters time, and reduced wages 10 per cent. Office employes, from managed to office boys, received a cut of 15 per cent.

When the copper situation began to improve the men were put back on full time and wages were advanced to the former scale. The company now announces that it will share its prosperity with employes by paying each man the money he forfeited during the eight months of depression by the reduction in pay. This bonus he will get in one check at the first pay day in June. It amounts to over $100 in cases of high-grade contract miners and foremen.

SEEK EXPLOSIVES ON GERMAN SHIPS

WASHINGTON SENT ORDERS

INSPECTION IS THOROUGH

Nothing Overlooked from Bridge to Keel — Steamers Laid Up in Brooklyn to be Examined Next.

Acting upon an emergency order received from the Treasury Department at Washington a force of seventy Customs inspectors and four Acting Deput Surveyors were sent to Hoboken yestrday aftrnoon at 2:30 o'clock in the United States Revenue cutters Hudson and Guide to search the German steamships for high explosives said to be secreted on board.

Before the expedition started the Acting Deputy Surveyors were summoned to the Custom House by Collector Dudley Field Malone, who gave them instructions to search the German and Austrian steamships in Hoboken and South Brooklyn thoroughly from bridge to keel. Acting Deputy Surveyor Edward Norwood was placed in command of the expedition on account of his experience in searching ships for opium.

One cutter landed with fifty men at Pier 2 of the Hamburg-American Line and started the search on the Vaterland, while the other cutter proceeded to Pier 2 of the North German Lloyd and boarded the George Washington.

Surveyors Halted at Piers.

At both piers the Acting Deputy Surveyors with their squads of inspectors were halted by officials of the German lines and asked by what authority they were boarding the ships. The customs officials produced permits issued to the Collector of the Port by the German Consul General, and they were allowed to proceed. Every part of the vessels was examined, including the lockers in the forcastle, where the crew kept their clothing and sea boots.

In three hours the Hamburg-American liners Vaterland, President Lincoln, Pennsylvania, Bohemia, Prinz Eitel Friedrich, and Prinz Joachim had been inspected and the North German Lloyd liners George Washington, Kaiser Wilhelm II., Friedrich der Grosse, Groesser Kurfuerst, Prinzess Irene, and Barbarossa without finding any thing of a suspicious character, it was said.

One of the Hamburg-American Line officials at the pier told a TIMES reporter that the Customs men were searching the ships for obscene photographs and cocaine. Later he admitted that they were looking for explosives, and the theory was that the steamship companies might order their commanders to blow up their ships at the piers in the event of the United States going to war with Germany.

Inspector Mueller of the North German Lloyd Company hid from the reporters and sent out word to say he was not at home. His assistants denied that their ship was being searched, although the Customs Inspectors were on board the George Washington at the time. No reporters were allowed to go on the piers.

Search in Brooklyn Next.

The search is not completed at Hoboken, and will be continued today before the emergency neutrality squad starts work at South Brooklyn where there are fourteen German and four Austrian steamships laid up. These are the Hamburg-American steamships President Grant, Hamburg, Konig Wilhelm II., Armenia, Pisa, Allemania, Harborg, Nassovia, and Prinz August Wilhelm; the North German Lloyd liner Koln and the freighters Adamsturm, Portonia, Mala, and Clara Nennig. The Austrian steamships include the Martha Washington, Himalaia, Anna, and Dora of the Austro-Americano Lone. It is expected that the search will not be completed before Saturday evening.

Acting Deputy Surveyor Norwod returned to the Barge Office with his men at 7 o'clock, wet through with the rain, and declined to give any information to the reporters regarding his expedition or the results.

Collector Malone appeared surprised that the departure of the Inspectors should have attracted the attention of the reporters, and said there was nothing significant in the neutrality squad making its monthly tour of inspection. As a matter of fact, he said, he did not know they were going, but presumed that his subordinates had issued the order in the ordinary routine of duty and it was carried out.

BUYS STEVENS PLANTS TO MAKE WAR RIFLES

New Westinghouse Enterprise Will Employ 8000 Men on Rush Orders.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 12.—L. A. Osborne of Pittsburgh, senior Vice President of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, announced tonight that negotiations were practically completed for the purchase of the plant and business of the J. Stevens Arm and Tool Company of Chicopee Falls, and the plants of the Stevens Duryea Company in Chicopee Falls and East Springfield. He was accompanied by a corps of experts, who are making arrangements for beginning the manufacture of military rifles for a belligerent power.

Mr. Osborne will be in executive charge of the work and Walter L. Clark of New York, recently Vice President of the Niles-Bement-Pond Company, will be the manager of the combined plants in charge of operations. The corporate and commercial identity of the J. Stevens Arms and Tool Company will be retained, and its usual line of rifles will be manufactured. When the war order rush is over, the usual line of Stevens-house products will be manufactured at the local plants. It is expected that employment will be furnished for 8,000 men by the new business.

MANY SAIL ON ADRIATIC DEFYING SUBMARINES

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 12.—Without apparent concern seventy-five passengers left Euston Station this morning for Liverpool, and later boarded the White Star liner Adriatic, flying the British flag, for New York. Two-thirds of them had made their reservations before the Lusitania was torpedoed and the others had been booked since last Saturday. All seemed confident that the fate of the Lusitania would not be theirs. Of the passengers, one-third were women.

At Liverpool 10 Omore passengers obarded the steamer in the second class, making altogether what the White Star officials considered a great showing.

Passengers chatted at Euston Station over the likelihood of the Adriatic being torpedoed, but not one apparently believed the German submarines would be able to get their ship.

Among the passengers was William J. Wilson½ formerly with the New York Hippodrome, and his wife. Mr. Wilson, who is an American citizen, and now stage director of the London Hippodrome, said:

"I'm sailing under the British flag because I actually believe it is just as safe as the American flag. If the Germans torpedoed a ship like the Lusitania with so many Americans aboard and deliberately drowned them, I do not think they would hesitate to sink a ship flying the American flag. As a matter of fact, I am not at all afraid that they will get us, and I shall not lose any sleep over it on the way."

Since parting from the Shuberts Mr. Wilson has been busy putting on "Push and Go," an English musical comedy, that had made a hit. Manuel Klein, who was with Mr. Wilson at the New oYrk Hippodrome, saw him off at Euston Station. Mr. Klein was brokenhearted over the loss of his brother Charles on the Lusitania. He said he hoped President Wilson would announce a sharp policy toward Germany's atrocities. Mr. Klein said he would enlist in the army if the United States should go to war with Germany.

T. C. Macaulay, the aviator, sailed on the Adriatic after two months on the battlefields of France, where he directed the handling of Curtis aeroplanes.

"The British Army demand for aeroplanes is unceasing," he said, "and 'tis to be expected that telling work will soon be done with them by the Germans."

John Borden of Chicago, a cousin of Sir Robert Borden, Premier of Canada, was another passenger returning from the Belgian battlefields. He says the utmost confidence prevails that the Allies will win before the end of the year. Mr. Borden's sister, the wife of Captain G. D. Turner of the British Army, runs a hospital in Dunkirk. She is soon to have ten portable hospitals, the first of the kind to be used in Belgium, which can be transported anywhere. "It's hard to be expected that America will get into the war over the Lusitania affair," said Mr. Borden, "but if she does it is certain that the war will be shortened appreciably."

AMERICAN LINE BIDS FOR TOURIST TRAVEL

Theh International Mercantile Marine Company announced yesterday that in response to the numerous requests from Americans who wished to travel in comfort under the protection of their own flag the Directors had decided to restore the first-class accommodation on the American liners Philadelphia, New York, St. Louis, and St. Paul, which was done away with last November.

The ships will be thoroughly renovated in turn, and the change will come into operation with the sailing of the Philadelphia from New York on June 5 and the St. Paul from Liverpool on the same date. The rate will probably be $100 minimum, but is not definitely fixed yet.

P. A. S. Franklin, the Vice President of the Mercantile Marine, when asked about the probability of building four new steamships for the American Line, said that his statement made eighteen months ago in THE NEW YORK TIMES contains his views on the subject today.

"The Directors of the Inernational Mercantile Marine are willing to construct four liners of 35,000 tons each, to have a speed of twenty-five knots, if the Federal Government will nend them themoney under thesame conditions as the Cunard had from the British Government to build the Lusitania and Mauretania," he said. "We do not need a subsidy, as we are confident that Americans are patriotic enough to follow the flag if we have the ships. So far our efforts to bring this about have been in vain."

The International Mercantile Marine officials said that under no circumstances will ammunition or other contraband of war be carried on the vessels of the American Line between New York and Liverpool.

QUOTES VANDERBILT.

"Let Us Save the Middies," Echoed by Bishop of London.

LONDON, May 12.—"There is one incident the world will remember in connection with the sinking of the Lusitania," said the Bishop of London today, while presiding at a meeting of the Waifs and Strays Society.

"When Alfred G. Vanderbilt was face to face with death, he said to his valet: 'Come and let us save the kiddies.'

PROTEST MEETINGS TODAY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, May 13.—Anti-German feeling in London has spread like fire. Germans and Austrians in the East End and Kentishtown, whether naturalized or not, were hunted yesterday by men, women, and children, attacked in the streets and in shops and in many cases severely handled.

Enormous crowds gathered whenever it became known that Germans were being chased. German restaurants and eating houses were not merely boycotted but wrecked. Owners were pursued by angry and noisy mobs, which in some cases the police were powerless to restrain, though the riotous scenes caused many arrests.

The agitation against German butchers, bakers, and barbers was renewed in the morning with fresh violence. Any German or Austrian butcher who showed his face at Smithfield was promptly chased from the market by porters. The first arrivals of German buyers were driven to Aldgate. Where Germans stopped to buy supplies at street stalls they were attacked in their carts, horses were unharnessed, and the clothes were torn from some Germans. The chase was continued to the Minories, where the Germans, hotly pursued by a crowd, entered a pork butcher's shop. The crowd insisted that every German, whether customer or employe, should be thrown out. Missiles were thrown through the windows, and the situation became so threatening that special constables were called to reinforce the police. Other shops bearing German or Austrian names were guarded.

The Smithfield men then vented their fury in other directions. Austrian barbers' shops were stormed, managers and assistants being dragged into the streets. The shops were looted and the furniture smashed, the crowd going off with razors, shaving pots and tobacco.

The Smithfield scenes were followed by even more serious outbursts of anti-German feeling in the East End. Many shops were dismantled and stones were hurled at fleeing Germans. Germans in the district about the East India Dock Road openly assumed the aggressive, banded themselves together and carried on a campaign of defiance. It is said that nearly seventy Germans and Austrian shops in that region were attacked. When the crowd appeared, some of the shopkeepers hid in cellars and others under beds, but they were dragged out of their houses and the beds, under which they had sought refuge were lowered from upper windows.

Rioting to "Tipperary."

The contents of jewelers' shops were strewn about the streets and the situation became so alarming that more police reinforcements were summonded and all aliens in the district put up their shutters.

Pianos were seized and dragged into the street by a crowd singing "Tipperary" and other popular songs. There were violent collisions between the police and the mobs and many persons were injured.

In East India Dock Road German bakeries were looted and the stocks of flour that had not been stolen were removed in carts to the police station. The baker's shop and house of a woman suspected of being a German were completely wrecked and the woman was led, half fainting, by friends to a police station, where she was kindly treated.

In several places the police were so few that they were unable to restrain looters and could do nothing to prevent shops and houses being sacked. Their chief aim was to protect hunted Germans from personal attack.

The centre of the East End rioting was Crisp Street, a popular, narrow, dingy thoroughfare, where most of the shopkeepers boarded up their premises at the first sign of disorder. Three shops in this street were wrecked. The mounted police galloped to the scene, but they were quite helpless. One store was stormed by a screeching mob of 200. After breaking the windows, men and boys entered the shop, which was deserted, and threw groceries and store fixtures into the street. The upper rooms were raided and articles of furniture were lowered from the windown and taken away in carts and handbarrows.

Several shops owned by persons not German or Austrian were attacked by mistake in the wild outbursts of indig-

Leading Points in President's Note to Germany Demanding Redress for Attacks on Americans

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The principal points in President Wilson's note to Germany are substantially as follows:

1.—The United States Government calls attention to the various incidents in the war zone proclaimed by Germany around the British Isles—the sinking of the British liner Falaba, with the loss of Leon C. Thresher, an American; the attack by German airmen on the American steamer Cushing; the torpedoing without warning of the American steamer Gulflight, flying the Stars and Stripes, and finally the torpedoing without warning of the Lusitania, with its loss of more than a thousand lives of noncombatants, among them more than one hundred Americans.

2.—These acts are declared to be indefensible under international law. The United States points out that it never admitted Germany's right to do them, and warned the Imperial Government that it would be held to a "strict accountability" for attacks on American vessels or lives. A strict accounting, therefore, is now asked from Germany.

3.—The usual financial reparation will be sought, although Germany is reminded in effect that no reparation can restore the lives of those sacrificed in the sinking of the Lusitania and other ships.

4.—Expressions of regret may comply with the legal precedents, but they are valueless, unless accompanied by a cessation of the practices endangering lives of noncombatants.

5.—The right of neutrals to travel to any point of the high seas on neutral or belligerent merchantmen is asserted.

6.—In the name of humanity and international law, the United States demands a guarantee that these rights shall be respected, and that there be no repetition of attacks on merchantmen carrying noncombatants.

7.—The giving of warnings to the American public without officially communicating them to the United States Government is commented on in connection with the German Embassy's printed advertisement before the sailing of the Lusitania, but irrespective of the failure to advise the American Government of Germany's purpose, the point is made that notice of an intention to do an unlawful act neither justified nor legalized it.

8.—The suggestion is conveyed that the German Government, of course, could not have intended to destroy innocent lives, and that consequently the German submarine commanders must have misunderstood their instructions. The American Government indicates its hope that this will be found to be true, and a cessation of the unlawful practices thereby will result.

9.—In conclusion, Germany's attention is called to the earnestness of the Government and people of the United States in this situation. It is made plain that the United States will leave nothing undone, either by diplomatic represeutation or other action, to obtain compliance by Germany with the requests that are made.

President Advisers Confident the Note Will Meet with the Nation's Full Approval.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—President Wilson's note to Germany, expressing the indignation of the American people at the destruction of American lives and vessels in the submarine warfare, and virtually demanding that this kind of warfare shall cease, was completed today and will be transmitted tomorrow to James W. Gerard, the Ambassador at Berlin, for presentation to the German Government.

It was the intention to file the note for cabling this evening and to make public its text immediately, but certain changes, not in the policy or spirit of the President's utterances, were made at the eleventh hour, and it was found to be impossible to put the note in cipher and forward it to Berlin before tomorrow.

There is nothing left unsaid by the President to make Germany realize that this Government adheres to the warning declaration in its protest of Feb. 10 against the implied application of the German war zone order to American shipping or to vessels of other nations that might carry American passengers. This declaration was that the German Government would be held to a "strict accountability" for submarine attacks that might result in the loss of American ships or the lives of American passengers.

Strict Accountability.

"Strict accountability" is made even clearer in a way to leave no doubt of its significance. Not a word shall be left unsaid or an action left undone, the President will tell Germany, to make clear the position of the United States in the event of future sacrifice of American lives. The meaning of this language is unmistakable and the keynote of the communication.

The most significant part of the note is a virtual demand that Germany's submarine warfare shall be so modoffed as to insure immunity of American ships and American lives from the danger of attack without warning, such as that which caused the sinking of the Lusitania and the death of more than 100 American men, women, and children. Reparation is asked for, but it is left to Germany as to how it shall be furnished. And in addition there is a call for a complete disavowal of the acts of which the note complains.

Ready for Any Reply.

What course the United States will pursue if Germany declines to accept the proposals of the President has not been fully determined, but some form of showing in an emphatic way the resentment of this Government will be adopted and put into execution. While there was much sentiment in the Cabinet meeting yesterday against breaking off diplomatic relations with Germany as a means of expressing the indignation of the American people—the feeling of some Cabinet members being that this action would be certain to result in war—there is a strong likelihood that this method of placing Germany before the world as an enemy to civilization will be adopted if the German Government declares its intention to give no heed to the fact that Americans are on board of the vessels of Germany's enemies which may be encountered by German submarines.

A severance of diplomatic relations does not necessarily mean war, although it is the usual preliminary to war. This Government does not wish to resort to hostilities. Even if the

DERNBURG'S CASE A PUZZLE

Men High in Government Circles Still Seeking a Way to End His Propaganda.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—From a high official of the Government, who has special facilities for knowing, it was learned this afternoon that the Administration's resentment against the propaganda of Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, formerly Colonial Minister in the German Government, had led to a study of the problems involved that might have effects not limited to Dr. Dernburg's personality. Dr. Dernburg's public comments, especially since the killing of Americans on the Lusitania, have been extremely offensive to the Administration and the laws have been searched at the Department of Justice for a statute that might apply to him.

Along with Dr. Dernburg's comments, which are construed as hardly less than threats against American ships in the war zone, the attention of the Department of Justice has been called to instances in which American papers, printed in the English language, have approved the sinking of the Lusitania, with all that it involved, and have seemed to encourage repetitions of that disaster. It is said that "some five or six" papers are in this group and it is against them that officials believe a statute has been found that might be used effectively.

The law in this connection forbids, under penalty of a $5,000 fine or five years' imprisonment or both, the mailing of obscene or indecent literature, or obscene implements. That would not apply to the offenses under consideration, but in March, 1911, the law (Section 211 of the Penal Code) was amended so that "the term 'indecent' within the intendment of this section shall include matter of a character tending to incite arson, murder, or assassination."

May Apply the Law.

"The time may come very soon," said the official, discussing the subject, "when this section, which seems to have been overlooked in certain quarters, might be found effective."

Section 211 of the Penal Code reads, in part:

"Every obscene, lewd, or lascivious, and every filthy book, pamphlet, picture, paper, letter, writing, print, or other publication of an indecent character * * is hereby declared to be nonmailable matter."

Then follows a prohibition against even receiving such matter through the mails and the penalties cited above. The section ends with the new paragraph incorporated by Congress in 1911, as follows:

"And the term 'indecent' within the intendment of this section shall include matter of a character tending to incite, arson, murder, or assassination."

This suggestion from an official source that editorials encouraging the repetition of the Lusitania horror might come within a prohibition against inciting "murder and assassination" is the strongest indication yet expressed of the stern judgment the Administration has passed upon the torpedoing of the

CHILE DEMANDS GERMAN APOLOGY

Gives the Kaiser's Government Five Days to Withdraw Offensive Note.

MAY SEVER RELATIONS

Resents Being Taken to Task for Accepting British Apology for the Dresden Affair.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 12.—German diplomacy has blundered into a situation which may provoke in South America a crisis almost as acute as, though different in kind from, that caused in the United States by the sinking of the Lusitania. Diplomatic secrecy is being strictly maintained pending the exchange of communications, but it is learned on excellent authority that these latter have taken such a tone that the severance of diplomatic relations between the two countries concerned is considered highly probable.

The incident began with Chile's acceptance of the British apology for the violation of her neutrality by the sinking of the Dresden in territorial waters. Berlin resented this acceptance and conveyed its dissatisfaction to Santiago in terms which the Chilean Government considered insulting and constituting an unwarrantable interference with the sovereign rights of the country.

Chile responded by what was practically an ultimatum, to the effect that Germany must withdraw her expressions and apologize for her flagrant breach of international amenities, or Chile would take such action as best appeared to fit the circumstances.

There is ground for believing that Germany has received an allowance of five days in which to decide upon the course she will pursue.

The Dresden, a German protected cruiser, was sunk in a harbor of the Juan Fernandez Islands belonging to Chile on March 14 last by the British cruisers Glasgow, Orama, and Kent. Germany protested to Chile and Chile protested to England that the attack had been made within Chilian waters, and while the Dresden was under a flag of truce.

Th efacts as ascertained by the Chilian Government and confirmed by the British showed that both neutral waters and the flag of true had been violated by the British squadron, in that it had warned the Dresden that if she refused to surrender she would be destroyed. "The Captain of the Dresden then gave orders to blow up the powder magazine and sink the ship."

In his apology to the Chilian Government, dated March 30 last, Sir Edward Grey said:

"His Majisty's Government do not wish to qualify the apology that they now present to the Chilian Government."

This apology was forwarded to Berlin, where it was not deemed sufficient, and Chile was urged to demand reparation, which she declined to do.

attitude of Germany should make it necessary, in the opinion of the President, to refuse to have further dealings with the German Government, the effort will be to prevent a physical clash.

There is no thought of calling Congress in extra session to grant authority for employing the land and naval forces of the United States against an enemy or to provide means of conducting a hostile conflict. The probability is that if diplomatic relations should be severed, the President would let Congress remain in recesse until the beginning of the regular legislative session in December, when the House and Senate could give consideration to the situation with the likelihood that whatever course would be taken would not be influenced by popular passion.

But these considerations are dependent on Germany's response to the President's note, and not to be determined until it has been delivered to the State Department.

Breathes Indignation.

Those who have read the President's momentous communication describe it as the protest of an outraged nation. It contains no bluster. It is dignified, but at the same time breathes a spirit of indignation expressive of the sentiment of an aroused country. It indicates a feeling of horror over the sacrifice of the lives of innocent Americans, but it is so worded that Germany must strain a point to find the president's utterances offensive. There is no sign of what in slang phrase is known as sidestepping the issue. The note is direct and to the point.

Everybody who has been privileged to read it is confident that it will meet with the hearty approval of all Americans who look upon the Lusitania tragedy as a crime against civilization, as the President holds it to be.

To the conscience of Germany is left the form which the redress asked for shall take. No threat is contained in the document, but it is made plain that American indignation has been aroused and that the American Government expects Germany to make amends for the deaths of American citizens on the high seas.

Asks a Disavowal.

Germany, it is asserted, is asked to disavow responsibility of intention to take American lives in the orders to the commander of the submarine that destroyed the Lusitania. Something in the nature of an apology is suggested, but not suggested in an offensive way. In fact, the whole spirit of the note is an appeal to Germany's sense of fairness, decency, and humanity.

No money indemnity is asked for. The note is represented as being on a higher plane than that. What the President sets forth in this connection may be said to be addressed to Germany's conscience and her sense of what is right. It is not indemnity that the President seeks so much as assurances for the future safeguarding of the lives of Americans. But it is evident from his language that he intends to convey the impression, if he does not say so directly, that there is really nothing that can fully atone for the sacrifice of those peaceful citizens who went to their deaths through the action of a German submarine.

Document to Be Proud Of.

The note was described today by one of the President's advisers as a document of which Americans would be proud. It would satisfy all Americans, it was said, except those extremists who demanded that blood be shed, and the other extremists who had no sympathy with the indignant demand that something be done to bring atonement for the Lusitania horror.

The President, in reviewing the events that form the subject of his communication, is represented as painting a dark picture of Germany for German perusal. The inference from his remarks, it was said in one quarter, was that he was trying to save Germany from herself. He tries to make it plain that Germany should think of the future and not merely of the immediate present, in carrying in her submarine warfare against merchant ships and their innocent passengers.

Throughout the note there is evident intention to avoid giving offense. This is known to have been the President's purpose, for the whole spirit of the policy undertaken by this Government is to permit Germany to have the chance of responding in a similar vein. If she should not do so and should show anger and resentment, this Government will feel that such a course means solely that Germany wants war with the United States or is in such a temper that she is reckless of consequences that would be avoided if she made the concessions as to the application of her submarine warefare policy that this Government asks.

Not Seeking a War.

Certainly, from what was said in official circles today, the President has no desire for war. Cabinet members, or some of them, do not believe that war is in sight. They believe, or profess to believe, that Germany can construe the President's purpose aa being directed toward righting a great wrong in a proper and dignified way, and can view his conclusions without a lowering of German self-respect. It cannot be too strongly repeated that the whole spirit of the communication is an appeal to German conscience.

The note is not a mere moral essay. It meets Germany on argumentative grounds, international law being cited to show that the attack on the Lusitania without warning and the consequent loss o American lives has no standing among civilized nations. International law, rulings, and precedents are quoted to apply to the cases of the attacks on the Guiflight and the Cushing, and the death of the American citizen, Leon C. Thrasher, through the loss of the British passenger steamer Falaba, which fell a victim of Germany's submarine policy.

The portions of the note dealing with the requirements of international law were gone over by Counselor Lansing of the State Department, who called on other compenent officials to assist him. Such changes as Mr. Lansing deemed necessary, it was said, would not in any way modify the spirit and purpose of the document, which must be considered as the President's very own.

Taft Writes to Wilson.

Grave as the situation believed to be, two things have served to cheer President Wilson and lessen the depression that he and his advisers feel when they contemplate the possibility of war. One of these was a letter received by the President today from ex-President Taft, in which confidence was expressed in the President's ability to handle the trying situation in the proper way.

While the White House declined to give out the text of Mr. Taft's letter, it was said there that he had made several suggestions which, while they differed in detail from ideas for meeting any contingency that were in the President's mind, were in general accord with his views. The President replied to Mr. Taft's letter, thanking him warmly.

The other circumstance that was construed as modifying the seriousness of the situation was found in the terms of the circular statement which the German Government issued with regard to submarine attacks on neutral vessels. This circular, received by the State Department yesterday from Ambassador Gerard and made public last night, indicated that Germany intended to take precautions to avoid danger to neutral merchant ships from the activities of German submarines.

Roosevelt's Criticism.

So convinced are thase close to the President that the note to Germany will meet with the approval of the American people and will satisfy the requirements of an indignant public sentiment that one of them declared today that Colonel Roosevelt would regret that he had written the critical statement that he issued in Syracuse last night.

"It will make Roosevelt look like thirty cents," said this official. There is no indication that the War Department or the Navy Department is making any preparations for a possible hostile energy. The only sign that the situation may likely lead to a clash is found in the abandonment of the proposed voyage of the Atlantic fleet to the Pacific. But it is well understood that the program for the voyage was virtually abandoned some time ago and that this abandonment was due more to the possibilities of the European situation than to the presence of slides in the Panama Canal.

In yesterday's discussion at the Cabinet meeting of the situation produced by Germany's sinking of the Lusitania the argument kept going back to the warning to Germany of Feb. 10, in which the term "strict accountability" was used. President Wilson had prepared his views of the subject of dealing with the situation, and these were all based on the February communication. The President had written these views in shorthand, and had covered six sheets not notesize paper with his very neat stenographic characters.

While some members of the Cabinet advanced arguments indicating a belief that it would be futile for the United States to take any drastic stand against Germany, it became apparent as the discussion progressed that the Government could not consistently abandon the practical denunciation of Germany's submarine warfare laid down in the note of Feb. 10, or fail to reassert that "strict accountability" meant exactly what it appeared to be.

Much of the discussion seems to have been academic. Certain suggestions were made apparently with the intention of giving opportunity for consideration of every possible phase of the serious situation which confronted the United States. The suggestion that it might be futile for this country to enter into a state of war with the German nation was based on the view that there might be no call for the services of an American army and the American navy in hostile operations against the German land and naval forces. But this idea does not appear to have made any impression. The more general opinion at the meeting was that if Germany chose to regard the demand of the United States as a cause of war it would then be time to consider what measures should be adopted to meet the state of affairs presented.

Think Germany May Yield.

Some international lawyers and diplomats who have followed Germany's course closely since beginning the submarine warfare were of the opinion that a compliance by Germany with the terms of the American note would not be surprising, and even that such a course would not be a departure from previous expressions.

Germany has maintained, it was contended, that the submarine activity was begun only because England would not permit foodstuffs and conditional contraband destined to civilians to reach Germany and because the neutrals by their protests had been powerless to effect an adherence to the rules of international law by the Allies in questions of contraband.

Should Germany announce her intention to abandon submarine warfare, it was believed by some diplomats, she would not necessarily make a stipulation, but would state her expectation that the United States as the great neutral would obtain equal guarantees from the Allies on questions of contraband.

PARIS AMERICANS PROTEST.

Cable President Wilson That Lusitania Sinking Was Savagery.

PARIS, May 12.—More than 100 Americans in Paris have signed the following cablegram, which was forwarded to President Wilson:

"We, the undersigned, having observed strict neutrality though living amid the horrors of war, now feel that in justice to our conditions and in order to preserve our self-respect we must voice an indignant and energetic protest against the sinking of the Lusitania, an act pre-eminent in its savagery, and which places the responsible Government outside civilized humanity."

Among the signers were Dr. Edmund L. Gros, chief surgeon of the American Ambulance Corps in France; A. Platt Andrew, formerly Assistant Secretary of the United States Treasury; Norman Hutchinson, American Consul General to Rumania and Serbia; Lawrence V. Benet, former President of the American Chamber of Commerce in Paris; Captain Arthur W. Kipling of the American Ambulance Corps; F. Lorillard Ronalds, George Blumenthal, Williamm E. Iselin, and Dr. Winchester Dubouchet.

RIDDER SEES PEACE GLEAM.

Lusitania Incident May End War, The Staatzs-Zeitung Vaguely Hints.

Answering the question "Was It Policy?" with respect to the sinking of the Lusitania by a German submarine, The New York Staats-Zeitung in its evening edition yesterday pointed out that already, as a result of that sinking, the International Mercantile Marine had declared that none of its passenger ships will carry war material, and that the Cunard Line had cancelled the sailings of the Mauretania, "which in its big hold could have concealed 'hardware,' (euphemistic word for shells.")

"We have also other answers for the question, 'Was it Policy?'" continues the paper. "England's reply to the German assertion that the tragic fate of the Lusitania was to be blamed in the first place upon the warfare of the Britons, is by no means so violent as was to nave been expected. On the contrary. It intimates, somewhat dimly at first, it is true, that there may have been a 'misunderstanding,' and it seems almost to be an overture toward negotiations: 'You give up your submarine warfare, and we'll give up trying to starve out German (which, please note, is impossible anyway) and to cut off Germany from raw materials for industrial purposes.'

"If that were attained—peace itself would not be far off. If once England and Germany came to negotiations, the end, too, would be in sight. And the sinking of the Lusitania, tragic as the fate of the Americans may have been and lamentable as it may appear, would have served the great work of peace. We do not wish to be optimistic, but something in the words and notes of Germany and England made public today points to the fact that perhaps they may again be upon the ground of unimpassioned expression of views."

FEARS CLOUDING OF ISSUE.

London Standard Says Lusitania Liss Is Wholly Due to Germany.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 12.—The Standard, commenting on the possible course of the United States in regard to the Lusitania, says:

"Though President Wilson's attitude toward Germany is no concern of ours, it is important to us that the issue should not be obscured to our detriment, and there is a noticeable tendency in America to obscure it.

"For the loss of American lives as well as of British lives and property Germany, and Germany alone, is answerable. We must repudiate the most minute fraction of responsibility for this calamity or for any of its consequences.

"Yet there is in America a growing disposition, carefully fostered by the German agents, to blame both the Cunard Company and the British Admiralty, and if the legend is allowed to gain full currency we may find American indignation swiftly switched off Germany and on to ourselves.

"It may be suggested with all deference that it would be a graceful act if the President made it quite clear that he does not share the views of a section of his countrymen. Otherwise the effect of such criticism may be extremely harmful.

"It is not pleasant for the people in this country with their nerves overwrought by one horror and another to be told that their smug complacency has been fatal to over a hundred trusting Americans. Natural though it may be that American grief and irritation, debarred from effective expression in the right quarter, should seek another vent, it is quite unreasonable that England should act the part of Germany's whipping boy, and it may be hoped that there will be no further suggestion that the Lusitania was blown up through carelessness or ineptitude. Even if it should be found that inadequate precautions had been taken, that fact that does not in the least shift the burden of responsibility."

JAPAN SENDS SYMPATHY.

Newspapers Declare for Removal of "German Menace."

TOKIO, May 12.—The Japanese Government has sent to Great Britain and the United States messages of sympathy upon the loss of life in the Lusitania disaster.

The press of the country bitterly arraigns Germany for the sinking of the passenger ship. The Asahi Shimbun characterizes it as a "massacre of innocents," certain to excite the "righteous indignation" of Americans.

Other papers declare that the time has come to "remove forever the German menace."

CALCUTTA, India, May 12.—American residents of Calcutta adopted a resolution today expressing the opinion that the destruction of the Lusitania was "an act to be considered with horror and indigation by every honorable person," and adding:

BOASTS OF SINKING LINER.

German Writes It Will Win More Respect Than Land Victories.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, May 13.—An editorial in The Daily News says:

"Editorial comment in the German press on the sinking of the Lusitania has been singularly scanty. Unauthorized comment, however, has been plentiful and this is the sort of thing which appears, for instance, in the Berlin Lokal Anzieger from the pen of a Herr Erich von Salymann:

"'The Lusitania is no more. Only those who have traveled by sea can appreciate the extraordinary impression which this news will make all over the world. It will now become clear to other nations tht England's world dominion is gone forever. The mistress of the seas, who oppressed small nations with most brutal ruthlessness and to whom modern North America kowtows, has received a well-aimed smack in the face, a veritable knockout of the boxing ring.

"'The fact that it was we Germans who destroyed this ship must make us proud of ourselves. The Lusitania case will obtainfor us more respect than a hundred battles won on land.'"

DR. DERNBURG VANISHES.

Secretary and Valet Insist He Is Out of Town, but Won't Say Where.

The exact whereabouts of Dr. Bernhard Dernburg yesterday came near being in the same class with some of the unsolved mysteries that have been puzzling New York of late. All the information gathered from those in the confidence of the doctor was that he was "out of town." At a late hour last night, the same report was given out at the Ritz-Carlton.

It was rumored during the day that the unofficial representative of Germany was spending some time at the country residence of a German-American banker in Westchester County, but this could not be verified. Anyhow, it was definitely established that at one time yesterday morning he was seen in the lobby of the hotel.

His Secretary said during the morning that he was out of town, but that she expected he would return at 6:30 o'clock. A little after that hour, Dr. Dernburg's valet said over the telephone that the doctor was out of town, and this was the report he gave at intervals during the evening.

No information was obtainable as to just when Dr. Dernburg went out of town. When questioned on those points the valet's voice sounded a trifle peyish over the telephone, and he disclaimed all further knowledge regarding the doctor's movements.

However, there is reason to believe that Dr. Dernburg, if he went to the country on Tuesday, was back in town yesterday, and that his valet was not correctly informed as to his whereabouts last night.

AMERICA'S OFFER FAILED

England Rejected von Jagow Terms —No Promise to Stop Sinking British Merchantmen.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The statement issued in London last night and printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES this morning, representing the official British view of Germany's justification for torpedoing the Lusitania, which Berlin transmitted to the State Department at Washington, attracted wide attention in Washington today.

By some it was suggested that this British statement looked like an opening from England for an explicit offer from Germany which England might accept, especially that part of England's reply where she says that it was not understood by England that Germany had offered to drop submarine warfare on merchant ships if England would permit food cargoes to reach Germany.

But the impression gained from high sources here today and tonight was that it would now be impossible to bring about an understanding between the German and British Governments along the lines that were proposed by the United States in its identical notes of Feb. 20 to Germany and England, proposing a modus vivendi, or basis of agreement, on certain points as to the conduct of the war at sea.

The German Government's justification of the Lusitania disaster, blaming England for the loss of noncombatant lives on the great liner, has been presented to the State Department by Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador. The British reply to it, taking the form of the statement issued in London last night, has not been communicated to the United States Government from the British Government.

No Official Knowledge.

The only knowledge this Government has of the statement was what it gained from its publication in this morning's papers and this could not be regarded as official cognizance.

The German justification message, as delivered by Count von Bernstorff, states on behalf of Germany that "in spite of the German offer to stop the submarine war in case the starvation plan were given up England did not do so and the German Government was prepared to abandon the sinking of British merchant vessels by submarines.

But so far as can be ascertained from officials in Washington, the German Government has not made this statement but Sir Edward Grey the basis for a more explicit offer from Germany to drop its submarine warfare on merchant ships if England would permit food cargoes to reach Germany, and the United States Government has been asked to transmit no such offer from Germany to England. On the other hand, England has not asked that any offer be transmitted to Germany as a basis for an undertaking.

STAND ON GERMAN FLAG.

South African People Also Publicly Burn Kaiser's Ensign.

LONDON, May 12.—A Reuter dispatch from Johannesburg says:

"Anti-German feeling is running high as the result of the Lusitania tragedy. Extraordinary scenes are being enacted in front of the Town Hall, where crowds of citizens wait patiently for an opportunity to sign petitions to the Mayor requesting him to call a mass meeting to voice protests against Germany's action.

"A large German flag is spread on the ground where the petitioners stand while writing their names. Another German flag was publicly burned in front of the town hall. Placards have been displayed urging a boycott of Germans and a Stock Exchange committee has adopted a resolution asking members of Teutonic birth to avoid the Exchange during the war.

"The Mayor has consented to comply with the request that he call a mass meeting."

APPROVES WILSON'S POLICY.

Tenant's Union Urges Him to Disregard "Hireling Press."

Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States:

The Tenant's Union at its meeting tonight approves of your wise pacific attitude in the present crisis, and will follow your leadership with implicit confidence in any emergency. The union respectfully suggests an embargo on all munitions of war, and would especially prohibit the use of American travelers as shields for the safety of transportations of supplies to friendly warring nations.

We implore the President of our country to resist the blandishments of the international parasitism expressed in a hireling press, and conjure him to continue to regard with charity the conduct of brethren insane with anger and war.

The telegram was signed by Cornelius Donovan, President, and Alexander Law, Secretary.

GERMANS ASK INTERNMENT.

Liverpool Residents Seek Safety After 200 Shops Have Been Looted.

LIVERPOOL, May 12.—Two hundred German establishments in Liverpool have been attacked by rioters. The damage resulting is estimated at $200,000.

Germans to the number of 150 gathered today and asked for internment. They were removed under a military escort to Hawick, Northumberland. All public houses in the Liverpool district were closed at 6 o'clock this evening.

IDENTITIES ARE CLEARED UP.

Rumor That Lindon W. Bates, Jr., Was Saved Discredited.

At the Cunard office yesterday the clerks devoted their time chiefly to clearing up the confusion that existed in names and initials in the previous cablegrams.

A message was received by a commercial agency in the forenoon stating that Lindon W. Bates, Jr., had been saved, but no confirmation was received at the Cunard office. Lindon W. Bates, Sr., did not credit the rumor.

The first message received from Queenstown said that the steamer Flying Fish had arrived with seventeen additional bodies. The only one identified as reported here was that of Percy Secombe, who with his sister, Miss Elizabeth, were saloon passengers. He was the son of a retired Captain of the Cunard Line.

The agents of the Cunard Line announced that the offices at 22 State Street would be closed today from 12 to 1 P. M. The funeral services for the American dead will be held in Liverpool at that hour, English time, they said.

Another cablegram stated that the bodies of the identified American dead would be sent to this country free of charge, but did not mention by what vessel.

The Cunard received a letter yesterday infroming them that Mrs. Amelia MacDona, who is one of the missing first cabin passengers, was one of the first actresses who appeared under the management of Charles Frohman. She lived in Scarsdale and was a start in the early '70s unde the name of Amelia Herbert.

A. H. Adams, the London representative of the United States Rubber Company, instead of being saved, as previously reported, is among the lost of the Lusitania's passengers. The mistake was due to his being confused with Allan H. Adams in the second cabin, who was saved.

Just before closing the offices, at 7:30 P. M., a message was received that the injured man in the hospital at Queenstown, reported as Henry A. Myers, had proved to be Herman A. Myers.

Information was telephoned to the office that Mrs. Michael G. Byrne of 444 West Fiftieth Street had received a cablegram from relatives in England stating that her husband had been saved.

LONDON MOBS DEFY THE POLICE

nation. In the case of a Russian jeweler, whose two shops in Limehouse were smashed, the victim sought police protection and enlightened the mob by hanging the flags of the Allies out of his windows and chalking on his shutters: "We are Russians."

Spreads to North London.

The flame of German hate spread to North London and the mounted police were called to quell a riot in Kentishtown. The anger took the form of stone-throwing as on the previous night and thousands of stones found their targets in the shops and houses of Germans.

The mob came upon a baker's cart filled with loaves. They smashed the cart to pieces and took the bread. The police hurried to the scene only to find that they had been lured from the baker's shop which they had been guarding by this feint. When they returned they saw that all te windows in four German baker shops in the neighborhood broken. The shops had been emptied by children, who ate buns and cakes in the street and dragged the shop fittings with them.

German shops in popular High Street were also raided. A German pork butcher ha dtwelve live pigs stolen from his shop and his sausage mcahine was smashed with coa lhammers.

Germans were violently molested in many parts of London and others received warnings to keep away from their usual haunts. The London Corn Exchange posted notice that the presence on the exchange of "persons of enemy origin is not desired at the present time," and the Central Market Meat Carriers' Association resolved that, "In view of recent barbarous actions by the German authorities all members are agreed that no work will be done except with those butchers who are British born or who belong to countries that are our allies or neutral."

King George Much Concerned.

King George is much concerned as to the measures to be taken to prevent further rioting. He consulted the Commissioner of Police yesterday as to the provisions made for serious eventualities. The metropolitan constabulary, 30,000 men in all, were paraded for duty last evening at the police station to which they are attached, and the Specials Commissioner has 46,000 men ready for emergencies, including 300 mounted men. All these men were confined to barracks at various military centres in London last evening and Sir Francis Lloyd, commanding the London district, was in hourly touch with the Commissioner of Police.

The Ritz Palace Hotel, the dispatch says, was full of German officers, who were maltreated by the infuriated populace. Many of them were injured.

"The Turks," the dispatch continues, "have lost in killed and wounded during the last four days in the Dardanelles nearly 30,000 men, not counting those in Smyrna, which was bombarded yesterday. A large number of Turkish prisoners are being transported from Benedos to Cairo.

THREE NEW YORKERS MOBBED

Mistaken for Spies While Photographing Ruined Shops.

LONDON, May 12.—Three New Yorkers, Captain Louis Sorcho, his assistant, Louis Liebmann, and Frank Winch, a newspaper man, while photographing shops wrecked by mobs today, were surrounded by a band of rioters who mistok them for Germans.

According to Captain Sorcho's account the party had two cameras and had received permission from the police to take photographs. Several women shouted: "They are German-American spies! Kill them! Remember the Lusitania!"

They got away on a street car, but Sorcho received a stunning blow from a woman in the melee.

One German was thrown into a horse trough with the reminder that his compatriots had been spending their time drowning women and children. He was only saved from a similar fate by the intervention of the police.

There were several instances of German butchers trying to escape in their carts. They went racing through the streets at a mad gallop, but in most casts they were run down and their vehicles smashed.

A number of Russian Jewsesses went this morning to the police stations in the East End and pleading for protection, explaining that they were being mistaken for Germans.

Reports are reaching the police that private houses belongong to wealthy Germans in the fashionable West End have been threatened by incendiaries.

Large placards in the windows of almost all business houses and markets bear the words: "No business transacted with Germans."

None of the persons attacked is reported to have been seriously injured, but many were beaten and had their clothes torn. Some shops have been set on fire by the rioters.

A spontaneous movement has developed in the London market to boycott subjects of enemy countries and small dealers who appeared for supplies today were refused and a number of them were driven away.

The police forces of both London and Liverpool have been depleted by enlistments in the army and special constables have been called out to help the regulars. These constables, however, are mostly citizens without experience in police work and the mobs often have got the better of them. A number of police have been injured.

Many of the disturbers were in the police courts today and received sentences ranging from four months imprisonment, imposed on one Liverpool woman, to a 4 shillings fine.

The protest of the German citizens of Bradford against the course of the German Government in the torpedoing of the Lusitania, is the first united public denunciation by naturalized Teutons. This protest expressed "horror and indignation at the German outrages."

Letters from individual Germans are appearing in the newspapers, but the prominent people among the German residents have not as yet made any move.

SOLDIERS OUT TO QUELL MOB.

Southend People Show Anger Over Recent Zeppelin Raid.

SOUTHEND, England, May 12.—The people of Southend tonight showed their anger over the recent Zeppelin raid and the sinking of the Lusitania by a big demonstration throughout the borough.

A meeting was first held outside the Technical School to protest against German residents, of whom there are a large number, being permitted to be at large in the town. A great crowd then visited and wrecked some of the German premises.

The police were powerless against the mob, and the General commanding the district ordered out the soldiers, who patrolled the streets. Quiet was restored when the military appeared.

DEMAND INTERNMENT OF ALL ENEMY ALIENS

All British Classes Appeal to Cabinet to Act—Great Protest Meetings Called.

LONDON, May 12.—The anti-German feeling is in nowise confined to the lower classes of the population. There has been a general demand by the newspapers for the internment of all subjects of enemy countries, and agitation by several members of Parliament induced the Premier to summon a special Cabinet meeting today to consider the matter.

Lord Charles Beresford and William Joynson-Hicks had presented separate petitions in the House of Commons asking that the House decree the internment of all male alien enemies of military age and the removal of other alien enemies to places thirty miles or more from the coast. The petitions which bore about 500,000 signatures, called attention to the great number of alien enemies at large in England and said:

"The danger of espionage is apparent. Our men in the army and navy are giving their lives in defense of us and the kingdom. Your petitioners feel that it is unfair to the British people that so many alien enemies should remain at large in our midst."

Premier's Statement.

After the Cabinet meeting Premier Asquit hmade a statement in the House of Commons foreshadowing that the Government will carry out the popular demand for placing these aliens in concentration camps.

Premier Asquith said the Cabinet was quite alive to the fact that "the progressive violation of the rules of civil-enemy, culminating in the sinking of the Lusitania, and the feelings thus aroused had made it necessary to look beyond merely military considerations. The Government, therefore, was carefully considering the practicability of the segregation and internment of alien enemies on a more comprehensive scale. The Premier added he hoped to make a more definite statement tomorrow.

"It would be difficult to find a parallel for the feeling of righteous indignation aroused in all classes in this country," the Premier said. "One result of this unhappily is that innocent and unoffending persons are in danger of being made to pay the penalty for the crimes of others.

"From the military point of view the steps already taken in the matter of internment have otherwise proved adequate for the purposes in view, namely, to provide for the safety of the country and to prevent illicit communication between alien enemies here and their Governments abroad. Everything hitherto done in the way of internment had been done on the responsibility of the War Office, the Admiralty, and the police registration and supervision is fully enforced in the case of all alien enemies not interned."

Mansion House Meeting Today.

Two important demonstrations will be held in London tomorrow to advocate measures for the contrl f alien residents. One will be a meeting at the Mansin House, with the Lord Mayor in the chair. Lord Charles Beresford and Sir Henry Dalziel will be among the speakers.

The other meeting will be held at Tower Hill, the historic site of many previous gatherings when popular movements were afoot. A procession headed by the stock brokers will form in front of the Royal Exchange and proceed to Tower Hill, where the following resolution will be put:

"Thousands of citizens of London gathered together at a mass meeting to unanimously protest against any kith and kin of German mutilators, poisoners, and murderers of men, women, and children being any longer allowed to be at large in the British islands, and, fearing riots, fires, the spread of disease germs, and poisoned water, hereby unanimously demanded that the Government take immediate steps to intern or deport all alien enemies, male or female, whatever their nationality, naturalized or otherwise."

A delegation will take the petition to the Prime Minister, Mr. Asquith.

Fear Aid in Zeppelin Raids.

It is estimated that there are 60,000 persons of German or Austrian birth outside the internment camps in England, of whom 20,000 are in London. The majority are engaged in humble occupations, as small shopkeepers, barbers, waiters, and workingmen.

Some of the newspapers have been asserting that in the event of Zeppelins raiding London and starting fires, as was done at South End, these aliens would assist the raid by helping to light fires throughout the city. Some of the papers have also called attention to the wealthy financiers of German birth as the most dangerous potential enemies because of their facilities for furnishing information to the enemy.

There has also been a demand that the German Emperor, the German Crown Prince, the Emperor of Austria, and Prince Henry of Prussia be in like manner deprived of their honors as Knights of the Garter, and particularly that the banners of the German Emperor and the Crown Prince, which hang in the Knights' stalls in St. George's Chapel at Windsor, be removed. This is a matter over which the King alone has jurisdiction.

Lusitania. It was explained that no proceedings were under contemplation as yet, but the mere fact that this harshly worded statute is officially believed to apply to the case suggests that a view seriously entertained by the Government fixes to the German policy the name of murder and assassination.

It is apparent from conversations with officials that more satisfaction would be experienced if the law applied directly to Dr. Dernburg rather than to a few publications supporting his views. But the law relates wholly to the postal administration, and nothing that Dr. Dernburg could say would, apparently, bring him within the reach of Federal statutes except possibly in connection with his deportation as an undesirable alien unless he should mail, or attempt to mail, copies of his offensive addresses.

It was explained today that the Federal Government had tried through the Alien and Sedition act in the early part of the last century to hold persons to strict accountability for the "spoken word," but that effort ended in what is regarded as a final and complete failure.

It was pointed out that the mailing of a newspaper carrying even a report of speeches like those of Dr. Dernburg might, by a strained interpretation of the law, be held to violate the provision. But it was made clear that no such strict interpretation would be followed by the Government. As a matter of fact, officials feel that the publicity Dr. Dernburg has sought and received, particularly since the sinking of the Lusitania, has only added to the country's horror at the deaths inflicted upon noncombatant men.

Cooking His Own Goose.

"I don't think we need anything against Dr. Dernburg," said the official, explaining the limits of the statute. "Dr. Dernburg is cooking his own goose as fast as he can."

While nothing was said as to the identity of the newspapers that had attracted the Government's interest, it is believed that one is published in St. Louis, one in Milwaukee, and another possibly at Atlantic Highlands, N. J.

One difficulty in the way of curtailing Dr. Dernburg's activities is that the Government does not desire to take action against him at this time, because such action might tend to embitter sentiment in Germany against the United States. It is the desire of this Government that the issue involved in the Lusitania case shall not be confused by the injection of any other incident, and for that reason mainly there is not likely to be any procedure against the former German colonial Minister until the international atmosphere has cleared, if it does clear.

Because he has no official status in the United States, the Administration hesitates to ask the German Government to take measures against Dr. Dernburg, or even to suggest informally to the German Ambassador that he express to Berlin the feeling of indignation that has been caused in this country by Dr. Dernburg's justification of the destruction of the Lusitania, with the loss of so many American men, women, and children.

But it is plain that any inquiries by the German Government or its Ambassador in Washington as to the manner in which Dr. Dernburg's activities as a propagandist are regarded by this Government would be appreciated.

THE SPY EVIL IN AMERICA.

St. Paul Pioneer Press Thinks the Disaster Was Aided Here.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 12.—The Pioneer Press says today: "It appears that the Lusitania horror could not have been perpetrated as it was without collusion in this country. At least persons in New York had knowledge of it, and presumably gave aid and counsel in its execution.

"This is a situation which may well claim the concern of the United States Government. We object to permitting the war to be carried on in this country. We most certainly object to the slaughter of our innocent citizens under any conditions. Whatever the implications and precedents of the badly frazzled international law, the United States has every moral right, at least, to assume charge of all spies or others abetting the business of taking American life."

The Minneapolis Tribune publishes the following editorial:

"When we get so far past the event of last Friday off the Irish Coast that the cries of the men, the women, and the little children, who went down with the Lusitania no longer ring in our ears, we shall begin to realize that the most lasting and most serious consequence of that unspeakable crime will be the implacable hatred which such acts engender.

"Nor is the feeling of hatred restricted to the one against whom the inhuman blow is struck. It is sure to be felt almost as strongly among those from whom the cowardly assault comes. The rage which has been bred in Great Britain by the sinking of the Lusitania is scarcely less dangerous than the feeling which exults in Germany over this 'success' of the Kaiser's submarines. Both are a committal to the passion of anger and hatred engendered between two great nations which it may take generations to overcome."

100 BODIES SEEN; 21 MORE LANDED

Patrol Boats and Tugs Search for Lusitania Victims with New Hope of Success.

WINBORNE AIDS THE WORK

QUEENSTOWN, May 12.—Lord Wimborne, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, issued an order in Dublin tonight that hereafter any bodies of persons drowned on board the Lusitania found along the Irish coast should be brought direct to Queenstown without the formality of an inquest. In small towns where they might happen to be landed this order, it is believed here, should greatly expedite the identification of many bodies which it is expected will yet be found.

A fishing boat reported tonight having sighted no less than 100 bodies floating ten miles south of Glandore, which is about twenty miles from where the Lusitania sank, on the southwest coast of County Cork—a fact which upsets the contention that the current, wind and tides had so scattered the bodies of victims as to make the recovery of any considerable number of them questionable.

The news of the sighting of these bodies was conveyed to Webb Ware, secretary of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, who has been most viligent in his search for Mr. Vanderbilt's body and in urging that no effort be spared to find the dead before it was too late.

Rain fell nearly all day in Queenstown, making more dismal the work of identifying the bodies in the morgue and placing them in coffins. Among the twenty-one bodies landed here today there were no prominent Americans.

Petchell Stackhouse, brother of Lieutenant Commander J. Foster Stackhouse, arrived here today to try and find the body of the explorer, who was one of the victims of the Lusitania disaster.

A Lusitania lifeboat bearing the bodies of three women and two boys, which has been adrift since last Friday, was reported ashore today near Baltimore, on the south Irish coast.

The bodies of nine men and eight women, comprising those brought ashore at Baltimore and other Irish coast points, arrived here this morning aboard a tug. The only body of a first-class passenger, which was promptly identified, was that of Percy Secombe of Peterborough, Ontario, son of the late Captain C. W. Secombe of the Cunard Line. His sister, Miss Elizabeth Secombe, still is missing.

Slow progress is being made in the work of identification as few relatives of passengers are now here, and the authorities are relying only upon papers and trinkets found on the bodies. The names, James Harrison and A. P. Norris were found on papers in the pockets of two of the men, while that of K. Hickson was found on the body of one woman. On the body of Mr. Harrison was found a card of the Y. M. C. A. of Bridgeport, Conn. Three of the dead were members of the Lusitania's crew.

Final efforts are being made on a large scale to recover the Lusitania's dead. Not only are the tugs Flying Fox and Stormcock cruising about the scene of the disaster, but a group of Admiralty patrol boats is scouting a wide area.

Beach patrols also are on the lookout from Queenstown to the Southern tip of Ireland. One patrol boat has been designated to bring in any bodies which may be recovered, leaving all the others to continue the search.

The body found bearing the name K. Hickson is believed to Miss Kathryn Hickson of this city, who was lost with her sister, Mrs. Kennedy.

The identified bodies are of forty-five men and twenty-seven women and children. Twenty-two bodies of members of the crew have been identified also.

Instructions were immediately cabled for the shipment of the body, together with that of Mr. Plamondon, the wealthy manufacturer, on an American vessel next Saturday.

TRUCE TO RECOVER BODIES.

Nautical Gazette Suggests Neutral Zone Around Lusitania.

The Nautical Gazette in its issue of today suggests that President Wilson obtain the consent of Germany to the establishment of a neutral zone for a time over the area of the Lusitania disaster so that a careful search for bodies may be made. The Nautical Gazette continues:

"The Nautical Gazette makes this suggestion and appeal in the interest of humanity and feels that if properly brought to the attention of the German Admiralty will meet with a ready response.

"Until the search has been ended the water zone between Kinsale and Cape Clear could thus, by mutual consent, be rendered neutral, that the floating bodies of the Lusitania's dead be restored to the bereaved families, relatives and friends and—afforded decent Christian burial."

SPEAKERS DIFFER ON DEFENSE POLICY

Diametrically opposed views on the policy of this country in the present crisis were expressed yesterday afternoon by Hudson Maxim at the weekly forum of the Aldine Club and of the Rev. Dr. William P. Merrill of the Brick Presbyterian Church at the meeting of the American League to Limit Armaments. Dr. Merrill insisted that the country would be best served by spending more money o nthe Diplomatic and Consular Service, while Mr. Maxim advocated a bigger and better army and navy.

"If we were as big a military power as we are a money power," Mr. Maxim said, "we would be able to prevent unfair methods by belligerents and prevent a system of submarine retaliation that endangers the lives of all neutrals crossing the seas. Uncle Sam and Miss Columbia would not then be whining in protest against violations of the rules of war and we would be able to prevent passenger vessels from being sent to the bottom with American citizens.

"The pacificists are the greatest enemies of America. When they prevent the making of guns and battleships they strengthen the arm of our enemies. They try to make us believe that German militarism is the cruelest thing in the world, while, as a matter of fact, American pacificism is the more evil institution. German militarism is the greatest economic institution in the world, and the poignant lesson of this war is that we should reverse the pacificist policy of milk and water for blood and iron.

"This country should now arm itself and prepare to act potently and not pacifically the part of the big brother of the nations."

Dr. Merrill, who is a member of the Executive Committee of the American League to Limit Armaments and Chairman of the American Group of the World Alliance of Churches for the Promotion of International Friendship, first proposed that the United States should finance a council of neutral nations for the purpose of dealing with the conditions growing out of the war, and with such incidents as the Lusitania disaster.

"Germany's assertion that brute force is superior to all moral and human considerations," he said, "demands that we should put an extreme emphasis on such considerations and that we should emphasize them more strongly than at other times. Force itself never settles a problem rightly; force can never do the work of conscience and reason—at best it can only be a tool for their use.

"The efforts of the pacificists were never more necessary than now; the great need is that they should realize that this is a time for constructive policies rather than mere words. We must be peacemakers. Let us advocate the spending of money on the improvement of our diplomatic and consular service in order to bring about better relations with the other nations and show them through our representatives what America is at its best. Let us call a conference of neutral nations to deliberate and consult so long as the war shall last. By spending money on such objects as these we would do more to establish righteousness and peace than by any amount of military and naval expenditure."

Going to the War Zone.

Steamships leaving New York today for the war zone are: Tonawanda, (British,) for Manchester; Siamese Prince, (British,) for St. Nazaire; Llama, (British,) for Copenhagen; Hellig Olav, (Danish,) for Copenhagen.

RUSH TO THE NAVY LEAGUE

Officer Predicts Submersible Battleships and Says Cities Must Be Banished from Sea Coast.

The National Security League, the head offices of which are at 31 Pine Street, announced last night that yesterday had been one of its busiest days, due to the unduly large number of citizens who called to join the league and to offer their services as valunteer workers in its behalf. The applicants, it was added, represented every walk of life and of New York City. The league alrtady feels assured, it was said, that a program for better national preparedness for war will be approved by the next Congress.

Among the contributions for carrying on the league's work, acknowledged yesterday was one of $250 from Cornelius Vanderbilt, whose brother, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, was among those lost on the Lusitania.

Other donations were:

G. K. Bell	$25	W. P. Clyde	$250
J. C. Lord	25	J. G. White	125
H. L. Satterlee	25	J. D. Crimmins	25
J. B. Lungar	200	A. C. James	250
H. P. Sloan	25	M. L. Schiff	250
S. C. Borg	100	N. F. Brady	1,000

Officials of the Navy League of the United States said last night that the action of the league's Executive Committee in petitioning President Wilson to call an extra session of Congress to authorize a bond issue of $500,000,000 for the increase of the naval defense of the nation had met with wide approval. All day long, it was added, telegrams were coming in from all parts of the country to the offices of the Navy League in the Waldorf-Astoria, the senders expressing their approval of the proposition. Scores of prominent New Yorkers also called to express their sympathy with the movement.

More than five hundred new members for the New York City branch of the League were enrolled yesterday, and this before the membership committee to canvas the city for new members was completed. Tomorrow 4,000 members of the League will visit the Fleet, and there will be a reception on each ship visited. The annual banquet of the League will be held tomorrow evening, the speakers including Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt, Dr. Lyman Abbott. Admiral Fletcher is also expected to be present and make a short speech.

Ralph B. Strassburger, a retired officer of the navy, who is the Chairman of the New York Membership Committee, said yesterday that if the submarine continued to be improved cities would have to be built thirty or more miles inland to be safe from attack from the sea.

"It is only a question of the time required to perfect minor mechanical details," said Mr. Strassburger, "that stands in the way of the construction of submersible fighting ships as big as the biggest dreadnoughts, carrying heavy armor and the most powerful guns that can be built. Against a few such ships the most powerful surface navy would be helpless.

"If the fleet of submersibles were strong enough it could do batle on the surface. If it were over-matched, at a given signal the Captain of each ship could press a button which would cause water-tight hatches to rise up and cover his guns and turrets. Then the submersibles could sink beneath the surface and elude the surface craft.

"Against such craft it would be impossible to protect seacoast cities. No matter how strong the guarding force might be, submersibles could always slip through the cordon at night, train their guns on a city and reduce it to ruins before they could be driven off.

"The natural defense against the submersible will be the aeroplane or the dirigible balloon, which at a considerable altitude can see objects fifty or even a hundred or more feet below the surface of the water. When an air craft in the future discovers a submersible she will hunt it as a kingfisher hunts a game fish, waiting for it to rise near enough to the surface so that she can drop a charge of explosive over it, trusting to the shock of the explosion to cave in the plates of the underwater craft.

"I believe that naval warfare of the future will consist of night raids on coast cities by submarines and day scouting, fighting and bomb-droping by aircraft. At any rate, the development of the submersible will render out of the question the transportation of troops over long distances at sea and will render this country safer than ever against foreign aggression, that is if we keep in the lead of other nations in building submersibles, dreadnoughts, cruisers and air scouts, and keep our navy where it ought to be, at the head of all the navies of the world."

A cablegram was received yesterday at the offices of the General Motors Export Company at 11 Broadway, from London, stating that Uno Merriheina, a representative, who was on the Lusitania, on his way to South Africa, had been saved.

The Saxonia's passengers did not know of the disaster until the pilot boarded the ship off the Ambrose Channel Lightship on Tuesday evening. Some passengers believed that they had seen the periscope of a German submarine off the Head of Kinsale on Sunday, May 2, but the Captain and officers said there was no foundation for the statement.

SAYS HUNGARIANS ARE TIRED OF WAR

PEOPLE FEAR AN EPIDEMIC

And Say When That Comes Fighting Will Stop—Found Conditions in Germany Much Better.

Julius Braun, a music teacher, who lives at 208 East Thirteenth Street, and who returned from Europe Tuesday on the Noordam after a trip on which he started in April, told yesterday the story of conditions in Hungary due to the war, as he had observed them, during a visit he made there for the purpose of bringing back to this country his stepson, an 11-year-old boy who had been at school in Hungary. Mr. Braun is an American citizen of Hungarian extraction.

He said that conditions in Hungary had been entirely misrepresented here by the newspapers printed in foreign languages, just as the actual facts of the war were misrepresented to natice Hungarians by the Government-influenced newspapers of their country. Far from being contented and hopeful, as they are represented here, says Mr. Braun, they are actually thoroughly sick of the war. He makes the picture that he draws blacker by saying that it is feared disease will break out on a wholesale scale as soon as the warm weather arrives and when this happens, he says, he can see no other outcome than that the Hungarians will lose their fighting strength.

"I went from Bendheim, on the frontier of Germany, through that country to Vienna, thence to Budapest, and then to Zsolna, a very important railroad centre, which lies about 3½ miles from the fighting line in the Carpathians," said Mr. Braun. "I made stops by the way, so that I can say I had a good opportunity to see conditions and observe sentiment through Hungary, if not through Germany and Austria.

"The conditions could not very well be worse. The pleasant state of things that is claimed by the foreign papers of the United States does not exist, and the people who read those papers are deceived.

"The Hungarian people are utterly tired of the war and think of nothing but when it will be over. In the first place, every able-bodied man has been ordered out. Men as old as 52 years are seen going to the stations to report for duty accompanied by five and six children and a weeping wife. The people who are left behind, knowing how they will come back, if back at all, are the ones who breed discontent.

Only Wounded Men on Streets.

"In Budapest you see no men on the streets except those who are wounded. A day on the great railroad station of Zsolna is a sight to make your soul sick. I saw fifty or sixty trainloads of wounded soldiers go through in one day. Scores of men whose legs had been amputated at the knees because they had been frozen in the snows of the Carpathians, were carried from one train to another.

"In Zsolna I saw one of the most depressing sights of my life. They buried the dead in the middle of the night so that the people would not know what was going on. The first night I watched there were eighteen men buried, and I am told by townspeople that the buried averaged from forty to fifty a night. There are 130 barracks in the town. Many Russian prisoners are concentrated here, but the wounded outnumber everything else.

"It is the same in Budapest. Here all the schools, the public buildings and all available office buildings have been converted into hospitals. To make way for the wounded in the schools, the regular sessions have been discontinued, and now the children come together at 2 o'clock and are gathered in the board rooms, the teachers' rooms, &c., and get what instruction they can be given in about two hours.

"The constant presence of wounded soldiers on the streets has a most depressing effect on the civilians. I have seen people weeping on the streets and I have heard them talking against the war. The food situation also has a bad effect on the population. Meat has almost doubled in price. Milk is scarce. My own sister has had to go down on her knees to get some for her children.

"In Vienna you had to have your bread ticket, which entitled you to seventy grams of bread or fifty grams of flour. I could not get any bread in Vienna at all. The bread ticket rule first applied to Vienna and then was carried to the smaller towns. Budapest has been notified it will come under the rule on May 15. This bread is indigestible and unpalatable.

"There are signs everywhere warning the people not to throw away scraps of bread but to save everything. They are told by these signs not to peel the skins off potatoes, but to eat them also, and similar measures of food economy are everywhere insisted upon.

Newspaper Reports Misleading.

"With these conditions of life facing them and the constantly depressing sight of terribly wounded soldiers, it is no wonder the people are beginning to hate the war. The newspaper rports, supervised by th authoritis, are constantly striving to keep them encouraged bw reports of great victories and the taking of innumerable Russian prisoners. These things have some effect on the ignorant, but the thoughtful people see through thm.

"In the beginning Hungary was for the war. They were told it could not last more than six months, and believed it. When the Germans were so near Paris they thought it was all over. But the reaction has come. They say now it is a war without a purpose. Austria-Hungary will get nothing out of it, they say. They think if the war is successful Germany will get something, perhaps, but Hungary nothing.

"And the latest fear is the fear of pestilence. They realize that with the enormous numbers of wounded and sick soldiers about, disease may spread to the entire population. They fear that with the coming of warm weather this will hapuen, and they do not see how it can be avoided. If it does come it will stop the fighting. That will be the last blow."

Mr. Braun said the first word those on board the Noordam had of the Lusitania disaster was when they received newspapers at Quarantine. He said even the German sympathizers on board were awe-stricken, and did not want to believe that Germany had done such a thing.

He said that conditions in Germany, as he had seen them, were much better than in Hungary. In Germany, he said, the public order was more pronounced and daily affairs were carried on in a more satisfactory manner. He said the train service, for instance, was practically normal, although the only trains that made a pretence of running on time in Austria-Hungary were those that traveled between Vienna and Budapest.

WORLD COURT URGED FOR LASTING PEACE

SUPREME BENCH AS MODEL

Taft Outlines Plan for a Council of Signatory Powers—Parker and Others Heard.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 12.—With the opening here this afternoon of the World CourtC ongress, a movement was launched formally which its advocates assert is the greatest advance yet taken toward lasting peace among the world powers.

Prominent men from all over the country were present giving assurance, Mayor Newton B. Baker said in his welcoming address, that the movement "is not visionary, not impractical." The persons attending included William H. Taft, Alton B. Parker, Henry Clews, Henry Lane Wilson, William Dudley Foulke, Dr. Harry A. Garfield, Professor Jeremiah W. Jenks, Professor Samuel T. Dutton, Thomas Raeburn White, Dr. John Wesley Hill, and Dr. Albert Shaw. John Mitchell and General Ballington Booth are expected later.

If preliminary plans are carried out the congress will take no steps that would gain for it the name of "peace congress." The Lusitania incident will be ignored, and means for ending the war will not be discussed. Plans for the development of an international court will receive the sole attention of the speakers.

For International Court.

The Congress advocates an international court of justice founded on an agreement to which all the great powers would be signatory. All signatory nations would submit their disputes to the court. One not so doing would be subjected to the combined pressure of the others. Each speaker at the opening session dwelt on the stable character of the congress's plan.

"This body is not so foolish as to conceive that war will be made impossible by such a court," said John Hays Hammond, Chariman, in an address opening the deliberations. "What we hope to do is to minimize the possibilities of war."

"A movement like this," said Mr. Taft, "loses force by making claims of what it will accomplish. But we are trying to be practical. We are not rainbow chasers and we are not offering a millenium."

The ex-President, Mr. Parker, and Bainbridge Colby of New York were the speakers at the night session, their addresses relating to the general topic of "The United States Supreme Court, the Prototype of a World Court." Mr. Parker was presiding officer.

Taft Explains Plan.

A league of peace and an arbitral court should include all the great nations, Mr. Taft explained, with an agreement that should any signatory power begin war against another member without first submitting its grievance to the court, all the other signatories would be bound to join in a "forcible defense of the member thus prematurely attacked."

That this idea of an international tribunal is practical and feasible, Mr. Taft said, is shown by the successful operation of the constitutional courts of arbitration in this country which have settled controversies between the States and the so-called General Arbitration Treaties, negotiated by Philander C. Knox, while Secretary of State, with France and England to submit justifiable disputes to arbitration. Mr. Taft explained at length the methods employed in adjusting interstate differences, asserting that the procedure is analagous to that of the international court which he proposes.

"I am aware that membership in this league would involve on the part of the United States an obligation to take part in European and Asiatic wars," he said, "and that in this respect it would be a departure from the traditional policy of the United States in avoiding entangling alliances with European or Asiatic countries. But I conceive that the interest of the United States in the close relations it has of a business and social character with the other countries of the world, much closer now than ever before, would justify it, if such a league could be formed, running the risk that there might be of such a war in making more probable the securing of the inestimable boon of peace of the world that now seems so far away.

"Controversies between independent nations suggest themselves which are not capable of judicial solution and yet are quite capable of leading to war," he continued. "Thus, suppose C nation, in the exercise of its conceded powers, admits to its shores and, indeed, to its citizenship the citizens or subjects of A nation and excludes those of B nation from both. The discrimination is certainly within the international right of C nation, but it may lead to acrimony and war. This is not a justiciable question or one that could be settled by a court.

Disputes that Are Justiciable.

"The so-called general arbitration treaties negotiated by Secretary Knox with France and England used the word 'justifiable' to describe the kind of questions which the parties bound themselves to submit to arbitration. They defined this to include all issues that could be decided on principles of law or equity. The issue whether a question arising was justiciable and arbitrable was to be left to the decision of a preliminary investigating commission. The term justiciable and, indeed, the whole scheme of these treaties were suggested by the provision for settling controversies between States in the Federal Constitution and the construction of it by the Supreme Court.

"The controversies between States, decision of which was not determined by rules furnished by the Constitution or by Congressional regulation, were strictly analogous to questions arising between independent nations and were to be divided into justiciable and non-justiciable questions by the same line of distinction.

"The treaties were not ratified; but their approval by England and France and by the Executive of this country constitute a valuable suggestive precedent for the framing of the constitution and jurisdiction of an arbitral court to be one of the main features of a league of peace between the great nations of the world.

"Now, is it idle to treat such a league as possible? Well, let us take England and Canada. For a hundred years we have been at peace. For that century we have a frontier between us and Canada 4,000 miles long which is entirely undefended by forts or navies. We have had issue after issue between the two peoples that because of their nature might have led to war. But we have settled them by negotiation or, when that has failed, by arbitration, until now it is not too much to say that the 'habit' of arbitration between us is so fixed that a treaty to secure such a settlement in future issues would not make it more certain than it is. I concede that conditions have been favorable for the creating of such a customary practice. The two peoples have the same language and literature, the same law and civil liberty, and the same origin and history. Each has a wide domain, in the settlement and development of which their energies and ambitions have been absorbed.

Two Settlements Cited.

"The jealousies and encroachments of neighbors in the thickly populated regions of Europe have not been present to stir up strife. And yet we ought not to minimize the beneficent significance of this century of peace by ignoring the fact that many of the issues which we have settled peaceably seemed at the time to be difficult of settlement and likely to lead to war. The Alabama claims issue and the Oregon boundary dispute were two of this kind.

"It is interesting to note that we now have two permanent arbitral English-American commissions settling questions. Having thus reached what is practically the institution of a league and arbitral court with England and Canada for the preservation of peace between us, may we not hope to enlarge its scope and membership and give its benefits to the world?

"Will not the exhaustion in which all the belligerents, whether victors or vanquished, find themselves after this awful sacrifice of life and wealth, make them wish to make the recurrence of such a war less probable? Will they not be in a mood to entertain any reasonable plan for the settlement of international disputes by peaceable means? Now can we not devise such a plan? I think we can.

"To constitute an effective league of peace we do not need all the nations. Such an agreement between eight or nine of the great powers of Europe, Asia, and America, would furnish a useful restraint upon possible war. The successful establishment of a peace league between the great powers would draw into it very quickly the less powerful nations.

"What should be the fundamental plan of the league?

"In the first place it ought to provide for the formation of a court to which would be given jurisdiction by the consent of all the members of the league to consider and decide justiciable questions between them or any of them which have not yielded to negotiations according to the principles of international law and equity so that the court should be vested with power, upon the application of any member of the league, to decide the issue as to whether the question arising is justiciable.

"Second.—A commission of conciliation for the consideration and recommendation of a solution of all non-justiciable questions that may arise between the members of the league should be created, and this commission should have power to hear evidence, investigate the causes of difference, and mediate between the parties and then make its recommendations for a settlement.

Conferences on Law.

"Third.—Conferences should be held from time to time to agree upon principles of international law, not already established, as their necessity shall suggest themselves. When the conclusions of the commission shall have been submitted to the various parties to the league for a reasonable time, say a year, without calling forth objection, it shall be deemed that they acquiesce in the principles thus declared.

"Fourth.—The members of the league shall agree that if any member of the league shall begin war against any other member of the league, without first having submitted the question, if found justiciable, to the arbitral court provided in the fundamental compact, or without having submitted the question, if found non-justiciable, to the commission of conciliation for its examination, consideration, and recommendation, then the remaining members of the league agree to join in the forcible defense of the member thus prematurely attacked.

"The first feature involves the principle of the general arbitration treaties with England and France, to which England and France agreed, and which I submitted to the Senate, and which the Senate rejected or so mutilated as to destroy their vital principle. I think it is of the utmost importance that it should be embraced in any effective League of Peace. The successful operation of the Supreme Court as a tribunal between independent States in deciding justiciable questions not in the control of Congress, or under the legislative regulation of either State, furnishes a precedent and justification for this that I hope I have made clear. Moreover, the inveterate practice of arbitration which has now grown to be an established custom for the disposition of controversial questions between Canada and the United States, is another confirmation of the practical character of such a court.

"We must recognize, however, that the questions within the jurisdiction of such a court would certainly not include all the questions that might lead to war, and, therefore, we should provide some other instrumentality for helping the solution of those questions which are justiciable. This might well be a Commission of Conciliation, a commission to investigate the facts, to consider the arguments on both sides, to mediate between the parties, to see if some compromise cannot be effected, and finally to formulate and recommend a settlement. This may involve time, but the delay, instead of being an objection, is really one of the valuable incidents providing for the performance of such a function by a commission.

Seal Fisheries Case.

"We have an example of such a Commission of Conciliation in the controversy between the United States and Great Britain over the seal fisheries. The case on its merits as a judicial question was decided against the United States, but the world importance of not destroying the Pribiloff seal herd by pelagic sealing was recognized, and a compromise was formulated by the arbitral tribunal, which was ultimately embodied in a treaty between England, Russia, Japan, and the United States. Similar recommendations were made by the Court of Arbitration which considered the issues arising between the United States and Great Britain in respect to the Newfoundland fisheries.

"Periodical conferences should be held between the members of the league for the declaration of principles of international law. This is really a provision for something in the nature of legislative action by the nations concerned in respect to international law. The principles of international law are based upon custom between nations established by actual practice, by their recognition in treaties and by the consensus of great law writers. Undoubtedly the function of an arbitral court established as proposed in the first of the above suggestions would lead to a good deal of valuable judge-made international law. But that would not cover the whole field. Something in the nature of legislation on the subject would be a valuable supplement to existing international law. It would be one of the very admirable results of such a League of Peace that the scope of international law could be enlarged in this way.

"Mr. Justice Holmes, in the case of Missouri versus Illinois, to which I have already referred, points out that the Supreme Court, in passing on questions between States, and in laying down the principles of international law that ought to govern in controversies between them should not and cannot make itself a Legislature. But in the League of Peace there is no limit to the power of international conferences of the members in such a quasi-legislative course, except the limit of the wise and the practical.

Penalty of Broken Pledge.

"The fourth suggestion is one that brings in the idea of force. In the league proposed all members are to agree that if any one member violates its obligation, and begins war against any other member, without submitting its cause for war to the arbitral court, if it is a justiciable question, or to the Commission of Conciliation if it is otherwise, all the members of the league should unite to defend the member attacked against a war waged in breach of plighted faith.

"It is to be observed that this does not involve the members of the league in an obligation to enforce the judgment of the court or the recommendation of the Commission of Conciliation. It only furnishes the instrumentality of force to prevent attack without submission. It is believed it is more practical than to attempt to enforce judgments after the hearing. One reason is that the failure to submit to one of the two tribunals the threatening cause of war for the consideration of one or the other is a fact easily ascertained, and concerning which there can be no dispute, and it is a palpable violation of the obligation of the member.

"It is wiser not to attempt too much. The required submission and the delay incident thereto will in most cases lead to acquiescence in the judgment of the court or in the recommendation of the Commission of Conciliation. The threat of force against plainly unjust war, for that is what is involved in the provision, will have a most salutary deterrent effect. I am aware that membership in this league would involve on the part of the United States an obligation to take part in European and Asiatic wars, it may be, and that in this respect it would be a departure from the traditional policy of the United States in avoiding entangling alliances with European or Asiatic countries.

"But I conceive that the interest of the United States in the close relations it has of a business and social character with the other countries of the world—much closer now than ever before—would justify it, if such a league could be formed, in running the risk that there might be of such a war in making more probable the securing of the inestimable boon of peace of the world that now seems so far away."

Ex-Judge Parker's Speech.

Ex-Judge Parker Parker urged the people of the United States to make known at once their will as to the proposition of this Government joining a league of the world's great nations, immediately after the present war, looking to the avoidance of future armed conflicts. He said President Wilson, who would be charged with an official action to this end, ought to be clearly advised of the sentiment of the American people on this point.

"This subject has received exhaustive consideration both at home and abroad," he said. "The consensus seems to be that in order to make the league fully effective each nation should be bound to submit non-justiciable disputes arising between the signatories and not settled by negotiation to a Council of Conciliation for hearing, consideration and recommendations before any declaration or act of war, the council to make and publish a report of each dispute submitted to it together with its recommendations and the reasons therefor.

"Moreover, it is proposed that the signatory powers forming such a league shall jointly use their military forces to prevent any one of their number from going to war against another of the signatories before the questions arising shall be submitted either to the judicial tribunal or the Council of Conciliation.

"The question for the people of the United States to decide—and, therefore, for this Congress to consider—is whether it is desirable for the United States to join such a league."

Mr. Colby argued that while there was nothing new in the idea of creating an international court to adjust the disputes between nations, the generations that talked about it dismissed it as visionary.

"Why cannot the people of the United States invite the nations not at war to join them in the establishment of an international court?" he asked. "There may not be many or immediate responses. If we have one we have made progress. We have made beginnings. We have laid a foundation. We have something upon which time can build.

"Two nations can agree. Let us be one of those glorious two. Others can be admitted, and others will soon clamor for admisison. We can agree to submit, to abide, and by a junction of our strength to enforce the decrees of such a court. Will any voice be raised in the wide world when the present conflict is over, to say that the attempt is not noble, thta the beginning is not timely, tht the experiment is ont one of the hope augury. Suppose it is a little beginning, a modest beginning? That is sometimes the finest beginning."

Hammond Condemns Platitude.

Mr. Hammond said in his opening address:

"I believe it is our duty to impress the horrors of war upon the youth of the present day, and upon coming generations, that their conception of war be undeceived as to its heroism and glory, but, rather, that their minds be saturated with the folly, the cruelty and the waste.

"We pacifists, if we are to dominate the situation and to supplant the institutions of war by those of peace must be prepared to submit a practical plan for the maintenance of peace and not be longer content with pacifists' platitudes.

"The creation of a world court is undoubtedly prerequisite to the limitation or reduction of armaments; and huge armaments, while not a direct cause of war, undoubtedly do tend to develop that spirit of militarism which is provocative of war. Moreover, huge armaments greatly increase the efficiency of organized slaughter and thereby immeasurably aggravate the ravages of war when hostilities begin.

"America, because of her conspicuous advocacy of peace, her irreproachable neutrality, her commanding position in finance, industry and commerce, her freedom from political alliances, her cosmopolitan population—is pre-eminently to take the lead. It is our supreme duty, our golden opportunity.

"The part America as a neutral will play in the final settlement of the war will be important. If the United States, as the mutual friend of the warring nations, is able to point the way to an effective international court of justice, there is every reason to believe the belligerents will be willing to accept it.

"The object of this congress is, first, to arouse the American public to a consciousness of the possibilities in such a tribunal and, second, to develop an insistant demand for it. The time is ripe."

Mr. Taft had not been on the program to make an address at the afternoon session, but lelded, as did Mr. Parker, to demands from the audience for an informal speech.

Henry Clews and Henry Lane Wilson will be among the principal speakers tomorrow.

Disease is failure to live properly

Every thought—every movement—every nerve thrill—every heart beat—even the secretive and mysterious activities of the skin, blood, stomach, liver and heart are the result of the food we eat.

The purpose of food is to rebuild the constantly wasting body, and to prolong life, energy and efficiency. The inability to properly digest simple food results in headache, biliousness, nerve and stomach disorders and general indications of weakened vitality.

The waste from imperfectly digested and non-assimilated food creates poisons in the intestines, which are absorbed by the blood and gradually reach all the vital organs, resulting in serious deterioration of the human system. The elimination of these poisons by

ALLIED OFFENSIVE MAKES NEW GAINS

French Take Triple Trenches Near Carency and Several Streets in Neuville.

4,000 GRMAN PRISONERS

Captured in Fighting Since Sunday—Germans' Line of Local Communications Threatened.

GERMAN SUCCESS AT LOOS

LONDON, May 12.—Today's French and British official reports give ground for the belief that the latest allied offensive is making serious inroads upon the German positions to the north of Arras and the southwest of Lille. Continued gains of ground are recorded near Corency, where the capture of three rows of trenches by the French is said to threaten the last line of communication between the German troops still in possession of the village and the main body.

On the other hand, the French admit the loss of some trenches near Loos which they took in yesterday's fighting.

The German official report, while admitting that the French have successfully resisted attempts to deprive them of their recent gains near Carency, says that other French efforts to push home the allied offensive have failed and that the British have lost "an important hill" east of Ypres.

The progress of the Allies in Northern France has given rise to the hope here that one of the really momentous phases of the war is in process of a solution which would be regarded as favorable from the British point of view. Berlin recognizes the importance of the new turn of events. German newspapers emphasize in large headlines the beginning of the new Angle-French offensive.

(Night report)—The fighting to the north of Arras continus with extreme violence. In the course of last night the enemy, reinforced, delivered several counter-attacks, which, however, were without result.

In that directed against Neuville-St. Vaast our opponents suffered particularly heavy losses. We found in the cemetery alone more than 200 bodies of Germans, and we took about 100 prisoners.

A second attack, between Carency and Ablain, was likewise repulsed. A third, from the direction of Ablain, was also completely checked.

French Take More Carency Trenches.

This morning we made progress in the wood to the east of Carency, taking 125 prisoners. The progress continued in the afternoon. We have, besides, taken three successive lines of trenches bordering the wood to the north of aCrency, after which we penetrated the wood, thus threatening very closely the last line of communication which remains open to the defenders of that position.

Finally, we have taken a new part of the village, capturing there 400 prisoners.

In the afternoon we attacked that section of Neuville-St. Vaast, which the enemy still holds, and fighting in the streets gave to us the mastery of several groups of houses. Our progress here continues.

The total number of prisoners made by us since Sunday had reached this evening 4,000.

On the rest of the front we brought to a sudden halt by our fire three German attacks—near Berry-au-Bac, Beauséjour, and Marie Thérèse Bagatellel.

Germans Recapture Loos Positions.

(Afternoon Report.)

In the sector to the north of Arras we have maintained our gains, excepting in front of Loos, where a night counter-attack resulted in taking from us a part of the terrain we captured in the daytime.

On the rest of the front yesterday saw artillery engagements.

This official communication, giving a report of Field Marshal Sir John French, dated May 12, was issued tonight:

East of Ypres last evening we repulsed another German attack south of the Menin road. This was the third costly failure experienced by the Germans at this place yesterday.

Elsewhere along the front there is no change in the situation.

Germans Occupy a Hill Near Ypres.

Berlin continues to report progress near Ypres and the repulse of French attacks in the Lorette hills, while conceding the fact that the gains made by the French between Carency and Neuville St. Vaast, in the first days of the assault on the German lines in that region, have been maintained. The official report follows:

Aviators of the enemy yesterday dropped bombs on Bruges without doing any damage from a military point of view.

Dunkirk was bombarded by our artillery.

East of Dixmude we shot down a British flying machine.

Trenches taken by the French in the course of the past few days between Carency and Neuville, north of Arras, are still in their possession. Otherwise all the attempts of the enemy made yesterday to break through our lines were in vain. His attacks were confined chiefly to our positions to the east and southeast of Vermelles, in the Lorette Hills, and at the villages of Ablain and Carency, as well as to our positions to the east and southeast of Arras.

Other advances broke down with very heavy losses to the enemy.

An attempt by our opponents to take Hartmannsweilerkopf again resulted in failure. It is a fact that after vigorous preparations by artillery French Alpine Chasseurs penetrated into the blockhouse situated on top of the hill, but they were immediately thrown out again.

GERMANS FAILED AT YPRES.

Movement Was a Counter Attack, Eyewitness Says—Immense Losses.

LONDON, May 12.—The official British eye-witness, under date of May 11, gives an account of the German attempts on Saturday and Sunday to break the British lines around Ypres and of the beginning of the Anglo-French offensive north of Arras. He says:

"The calm that prevailed Thursday and Friday proved to be only the lull before the storm. Early Saturday morning it became apparent that the Germans were preparing an attack in strength against our line running east and northeast from Ypres, for they were concentrating under cover of a violent artillery fire, and at about 10 o'clock the battle began in earnest.

"At that hour the Germans attacked our line from the Ypres-Poelcappelle road to within a short distance of the Menin highroad, it being evidently their intention while engaging us closely on the whole of this sector to break our front in the vicinity of the Ypres-Roulers Railway, to the north and to the south of which their strongest and most determined assaults were delivered.

British Driven Back.

"Under this pressure our front was penetrated at some points around Frezenburg, and at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon we made a counter-attack between the Zonnebeke Road and the railway in order to recover the lost ground. Our offensive was conducted most gallantly, but was checked before long by the fire of machine guns.

"Meanwhile, the enemy launched another attack through the woods south of the Menin Road, and at the same time threatened our left to the north of Ypres, with fresh masses. Most desperate fighting ensued, the German infantry coming on again and again and gradually forcing our troops back, though only for a short distance, in spite of repeated counter attacks.

"During the night the fighting continued to rage with ever increasing fury. It is impossible to say at exactly what hour our line was broken at different points, but it is certain that at one time the enemy's infantry poured through along the Poel-Cappelle Road, and even got as far as Wieltje at 9 P. M.

"There was also a considerable gap in our front about Frezenberg, where hostile detachments had penetrated. At both points counter-attacks were organized without delay. To the east of the Salient, the Germans first were driven back to Frezenberg, but there they made a firm stand, and under pressure of fresh reinforcements we fell back again toward verlorenhoek.

"Northeast of the Salient a counter-attack carried out by us about 1A. M., was more successful. Our troops swtpt the enemy out of Wieltje at the bayonet's point, leaving the village strewn with German dead and, pushing on, regained most of the ground to the north of that point. And so the fight surged to and fro throughout the night. All round the scene of the conflict the sky was lit up, by the flashes of the guns and the light of blazing villages and farms, while against this background of smoke and flame, looking out in the murky light over the crumbling ruins of the old town, rost the battered wreck of the cathedral town and the spires of Cloth Hall.

New British Line Attacked.

"When Sunday dawned there came a short respite, and the firing for a time died down. The comparative lull enabled us to reorganize and consolidate our position on the new line we had taken up and to obtain some rest after the fatigue and strain of the night. It did not last long, however, and in the afternoon the climax of the battle was reached, for, under the cover of intense artillery fire, the Germans launched no less than five separate assaults against the east of the salient.

"To the north and northeast their attacks were not at first pressed so hard as on the south of theMenin Road, where the fighting was especially fierce. In the latter direction masses of infantry were hurled on with absolute desperation and were beaten off with corresponding slaughter.

500 Germans Wiped Out.

"At one point, north of the town, 500 of the enemy advanced from the wood, and it is affirmed by those present that not a single man of them escaped.

"On the eastern face, at 6:30 P. M., an endeavor was made to storm the grounds of the Château Hooge, a little north of the Menin road, but the force attempting it broke and fell back under the hail of shrapnel poured upon them by our guns. It was on this side, where they had to face the concentrated fire of guns, Maxims and rifles again and again in their efforts to break their way through, that the Germans incurred their heaviest losses, and the ground was literally heaped with dead.

"They evidently, for the time being at least, were unable to renew their efforts, and as night came on the fury of their offensive gradually slackened, the hours of darkness passing in quiteness.

"During the day our troops saw some of the enemy busily employed in stripping the British dead in our abandoned trenches, east of the Hooge Chaâteau, and several Germans afterward were noticed dressed in khaki.

"Pure Killing" by the English.

"So far as the Ypres region is concerned, this for us was a most successful day. Our line, which on the northeast of the Salient, had, after the previous day's fighting, been reconstituted a short distance behind the original front, remained intact. Our losses were comparatively slight, and, owing to the targets presented by the enemy, the action resolved itself on our part into pure killing.

"The reason for this very determined effort to crush our left on the part of the Germans is not far to seek. It is probable that for some days previously they had been in possession of information which led them to suppose that we intended to apply pressure on the right of our line, and that their great attack upon Ypres on the 7th, 8th, and 9th was undertaken with a view to diverting us from our purpose.

"In this the Germans were true to their principles, for they rightly hold that the best manner of meeting an expected hostile offensive is to forestall it by attacking in some other quarter. In this instance their leaders acted with the utmost determination and energy and their soldiers fought with the greatest courage.

"The failure of their effort was due to the splendid endurance of our troops, who held the line around the salient under a fire which again and again blotted out whole lengths of the defenses and killed the defenders by scores. Time after time along those parts of the front selected for assault were parapets destroyed, and time after time did the thinning band of survivors build them up again and await the next onset as steadily as before.

High Tribute to British Valor.

"Here in May, in defense of the same historic town, have our incomparable infantry repeated the great deeds their comrades performed half a year ago and beaten back most desperate onslaughts of hostile hordes backed by terrific artillery support.

"The services rendered by our troops in this quarter cannot at present be estimated, for their full significance will only be realized in the light of future events. But, so far, their devotion has indirectly contributed in no small measure to the striking success already achieved by our allies.

"Farther south, in the meantime, on Sunday another struggle had been in progress on that portion of the front covered by the right of our line and the left of the French, for when the firing around Ypres was temporarily subsiding during the early hours of the morning, another and even more tremendous cannonade was suddenly started by the artillery of the Allies some twenty miles to the south.

"The morning was calm, bright, and clear, and opposite our right, as the sun rose, the scene in front of our line was the most peaceful imaginable. Away to the righ were Guinchy, with its brick feilds, and the ruins of Givenchy. To the north of them lay low ground, where, hidden by trees and hedgerows, ran the opposing line taht were about to become the scene of the conflict, and beyond, in the distance, rose the long ridge of Aubers, the villages crowning it standing out clear cut against the sky.

"At 5 o'clock the bombardment began, slowly at first and then growing in volume until the whole air quivered with the rush of the larger shells, and the earth shook with the concussion of guns. In a few minutes the whole distant landscape disapepared in smoke and dust, which ung for a while in the still air and then drifted slowly across the line of battle.

Fromelles Trenches Lost to Germans.

Shortly before 6 o'clock our infantry advanced along our front between the Bois Grenier and Festubert. On the left, north of Fromelles, we stormed the German first line trenches. Hand-ton-hand fighting went on for some time with bayonet, rifle, and hand grenade, but we continued to hold on to this position throughout theday and caused the enemy heavy loss, for not only were many Germans killed in the bombardment, but their repeated efforts to drive us from the captured positions proved most costly.

"On the right, to the north of Festubert, our advance met with considerable opposition and was not pressed.

"Meanwhile, the French, after a prolonged bombardment, had taken the German position north of Arras on a front of nearly five miles, and had pushed forward from two to three miles, capturing 2,000 prisoners and six guns. This remarkable success was gained by our Allies in the course of a few hours.

British Losses Heavy.

"As may b supposed from the nature of the fighting which has been in progress, our losses have been heavy. On other parts of the front our action was confined to that of the artillery, but this proved most effective later, all the communications of the enemy being subjected to so heavy and accurate a fire that in some quarters all movement by daylight within range of our lines was rendered impracticable. At one place opposite our centre a convoy of ammunition was hit by a shell, which knocked out six motor lorries and caused two to blow up. Opposite our centre we fired two mines, which did considerable damage to the enemy's defenses.

"During the day also our aeroplanes attacked several points of importance. One of our airmen, who was sent to bomb the canal bridge near Don, was wounded on his way there, but continued and fulfilled his mission. Near Wytschaete, one of our aviators pursued a German aeroplane and fired a whole belt from his machine gun at it. The Taube suddenly swerved, righted itself for a second, and then descended from a height of several thousand feet straight to the ground.

"On the other hand, a British machine unfortunately was brought down over Lille by the enemy's anti-craft guns, but it is hoped that the aviator escaped."

In regard to the German allegation that the British used gas in their attacks on Hill 60, the eye-witness says: "No asphyxiating gases have been employed by us at any time, nor have they yet been brought into play by us."

The eye-witness also denies the German reports that German prisoners have been forced to go up in British aeroplanes.

TO OUST WAR HORSE DEPOT.

Empire City Track Owners Say Tenant Is a Nuisance.

Justice Donnelly of the Supreme Court yesterday named James A. Farrell, a referee, to take testimony in an action begun by the Empire City Racing Association to eject from its grounds in Westchester County the National Fair and Exposition Association, on the ground that it has permitted the herding of horses there suffering from contagious diseases. The horses were collected there preliminary to their shipment to Europe.

The application for the appointment of a referee was made by Abraham A. Greenhoot, who said that 100 horses have already died there of various diseases, and that keeping the horses on the grounds was a menace to the people of Yonkers.

The Justice also signed an order directing Dr. Harry D. Gill of 337 East Fifty-seventh Street, a veterinary surgeon, to testify before the referee. Dr. Gill is connected with the State Agricultural Department. Affidavits were submitted to the effect that he had declared that many of the horses were afflicted with influenza, distemper, and other diseases dangerous to man and beast.

Robert M. Williams, General Manager of the National Fair and Exposition Association, which has a lease of the grounds, said that no horses were shipped to Europe that were not in apparently good condition.

An additional complaint is to the effect that if any of the horses have any contagious diseases the effect upon the race horses at the next meet will be disastrous.

MORE POWDER FOR ALLIES.

T. A. Gillespie Company to Build Big Mill Near Metuchen, N. J.

METUCHEN, N. J., May 12.—The T. A. Gillespie Company of New York will start work next Monday on a large powder mill near the Charles S. Edgar property in Fairville township. Engineeers are surveying the land for plans for the building.

The company has contracts, it is said, for furnishing ammunition and other war materials for the Allies.

The Gillespie plant is on the opposite side of the Raritan River to the Lewis E. Nixon Metuchen Gun Cotton Plant now under construction. The E. I. Du Pont De Nemours Smokeless Powder plant is also in close proximity to the Nixon and Gillespie plants.

It is said that 4,000 men will be employed in the three plants which are booming Metuchen, Fairville, Bonhamtown and Carlin.

GERMAN FIRM SUES ON GRAIN

Behrendt & Bodenheimer of Hamburg, Germany, through Guggenheimer, Untermyer & Marshall, began suit in the Supreme Court yesterday against the Armour Grain Company of Chicago for $200,174, which they say they lost through the failure of the defendants to supply them with Winter wheat which they contracted for.

According to the complaint, the first contract was made on May 7, 1914, and was for 24,000 bushels to be shipped in August to some port to be designated later. Other contracts were made for various quantities ranging from 16,000 bushels to 40,000, to be shipped at various times in each month up to and including October. The deliveries were to be made at Hamburg and Rotterdam unless otherwise directed. Some 500,000 bushels were to be shipped. The amount sued for is the profit the plaintiffs say they would have earned if the contract had been adhered to by the defendants.

JANE ADDAMS IS HOPEFUL.

Wants Country to Avoid War Over the Lusitania.

LONDON, May 12.—The women of London today gave a reception in honor of Jane Addams, one of the American delegates to the recent International Conference of Women at The Hague. Many Pacifists and suffragettes attended.

When she was asked what effect the sinking of the Lusitania would have on the peace movement inaugurated by women Miss Addams said: "I cannot talk about it. Public feeling is, of course, highly inflamed, but I sincerely hope there will be no war."

Miss Addams leaves here on Saturday for Holland, and if permitted will go thence to Germany.

TURKISH MINE KILLS GREEKS

PARIS, May 12.—A Havas dispatch from Athens says:

"A floating mine which exploded at Amyssios, near Moudros (on the island of Lemnos) killed five persons, according to an official despatch from Lemnos. In view of the large number of mines which have been carried by currents from the Dardanelles into the Aegean Sea the Greek authorities have issued a warning to navigators."

To Help French Orphans.

A concert will be given at the Woman's Cosmopolitan Club, 133 West Fortieth Street, next Thursday, May 20, to raise funds for the maintenance of children of killed and disabled French officers. Mrs. F. Berkeley Smith has given her home at Sallenelles, Normandy, France, to house at least 50 children.

RUSSIANS DRIVE AT GERMAN RIGHT

STILL RETREAT IN WEST

But Say Rush of Great Austro-German Force Is Spent and Cost 100,000 Men.

LONDON, Thursday, May 13.—While continuing to retreat before the north wing of the overwhelming Austro-German Army which drove them back in its onrush from Cracow, the Russians say the drive has spent itself and has cost their foes upward of 100,000 men. On the other hand, both Vienna and Berlin say it continues nn full swing, and Vienna reports the occupation of Brzozow, Dynow, Sunck, and Lisko.

Their advance has brought the Austro-Germans nearly within striking distance of Przemysl, and military observers believe that unless the Russians can make a stand on the River San the fortress of Przemysl, the fall of which caused such a great impression not many weeks ago, will soon again be in the hands of its original owners.

Russhian headquarters reports fierce fighting in the central Carpathians and in Southern Galicia, where the Russians have started a drive on their own account against the German right, advancing on a forty-mile front and sweeping all before them.

PETROGRD, May 12.—The War Office communication issued tonight, says:

In the Shavli region our troops on Tuesday continued to press successfully on the heels of the retreating Germans, who have been driven back from the town of Shavli toward the southwest.

On the left bank of the Niemen and on the front of the Narew there is an almost general lull.

On the left bank of the Vistula, south of the Sokhatchoff, our infantry command having crossed the Bzura Tuesday night, captured, after a bayonet fight, a group of German trenches and took several dozens of prisoners and an officer. German attempts to attack our reconstruction of troops south of Skierniwice and Nava were repulsed.

In western Galicia on Monday our troops to the north in the direction of Lutowiska continued falling back to positions previously chosen and the enemy's offensive was checked by our counter-attack.

In the direction of the Uzsok Pass and the Stryi River the Austrian attacks were repulsed with great losses to the enemy. Near Rojanka the enemy exploded a mine close to our trenches and followed this up with an attack on our positions in that vicinity. They succeeded in occupying part of the crater made by the explosion, but our men in a furious onslaught dislodged the Auetrians, who fled in disorder, leaving several hundred dead. We also captured many prisoners.

Germans Left 5,000 Dead.

In the region of the Javornik we completed our success by an energetic offensive. During the last few days the enemy at this point has suffered heavy losses, leaving 5,000 dead on the mountain slope.

In the trans-Dneister region on the Czernowicz-Obertyn front for a distance of over sixty versts (forty miles) our troops have taken the offensive and progressed with great success, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy and frustrating his numerous attempts to stop us by counter-attacks.

We captured numerous prisoners—over 5,000 on the 10th alone—and six guns, eight machine guns, and a large quantity of booty also fell into our hands. The enemy, falling back, hastily evacuated the whole left bank of the Dneister and was ejected from the town of Zaleszczyki, twenty-six miles northwest of Czernowitz.

Russian military authorities asserted today that there was no possibility of a further Austro-German advance in West Galicia, with its consequent menace to the security of the Russian positions in the Carpathians.

In semi-official comment today upon this situation it was said the success of the Austro-German forces was due to their overpowering numbers. They advanced along a line of about thirty miles, stretching northward from Neu Sandao, and pushed on to points as far east as Stryzszow and Brzozow, the latter being within less than thirty miles of Przemysl. It is said here that the Russian forces have now been reegrouped in such a way as effectually to oppose this movement.

Began Drive with 312,000 Men.

In meeting the Austro-German onslaught the Russian Generals were able to bring up only about one-fifth of their forces ranged along the 900-mile front. The Germans and Austrians, however, are reported here to have concentrated thirteen divisions (about 312,000 men) along a sixteen-mile front in the district of Krosno, just northeast of Dukla, and they have continually rushed in fresh reserves.

Notwithstanding their numerical inferiority the Russians were able to retire in good order to more favorable positions. They destroyed the roads as they went and brought off their guns, ammunition, and other stores. Their losses are described here as comparatively small.

The view presented by military men here is that the Austro-German movement did not constitute a notable success, inasmuch as its object is supposed to have been the destruction of the Russian army in the Carpathians and dislodgment of the Russians from their strong positions in the Central Carpathians. The German plan of action apparently was to strike several successive blows before the Russians had time to bring up reinforcements. A series of furious infantry attacks followed the preparatory artillery actions.

Military experts estiate that the Teutonis allies in their operations on the short front over which they occurred utilized three-quarters of the entire Austrian forces and one-ninth of the entire German forces. About one-ahlf of these forces probably were second line troops. Four corps are said to have been brought up from the Serbian front, and twenteith infantry and nine cavalry divisions from the western front.

Tremendous German Losses.

GENEVA, Switzerland, May 12.—A dispatch from Cracow tb the Journal De Geneve says that the losses of the Austrians and Germans since the first of May amount to 165,000 officers and men. Losses of the Russians in prisoners are placed at 50,000.

The dispatch says the Russians are holding firmly the principal stragetic positions and that both sides are receiving heavy reinforcements.

SAY PURSUIT CONTINUES.

Germans Claim Further Victories Over Russians in the South.

BERLIN, May 12, (via London.)—The following report was issued today by the German General Staff:

Thebattle at Shavli, in Courland, is tsill raging without any result having been reached.

On the Bzura a Russian battalion which made an attempt to cross the river was annihilated.

In the southeastern theatre of the war:

Our pursuit between the Carpathian Mountains and the Vistula River is still in full swing, and further heavy damage has been inflicted upon the enemy along this entire front. For example, a battalion of the Fourth Foot Guards Regiment alone took fourteen officers, including a Colonel, and 4,500 men prisoners, and at the same time captured four cannon¼ one machine gun company witah horses, and one baggage column.

Forces of the Teutonic allies have nok and Dinow. Further to the northwest they have reached the region of Rzeszowmielso.

Troops fighting in the Carpathians on both sides of the Stryi yesterday drove the enemy out of his positions.

Kaiser Rewards Falkenhayn.

AMSTERDAM, via London, May 12.—A dispatch received here from Berlin says Emperor William has sent the following communication to Field Marshal von Falkenhayn, Chief of Staff:

With a sharp, clear glance, accurately gauging the situation, you discovered the point where the Russian Army was most vulnerable, and with the plans made in consequence achieved a great success.

The present glorious victory gives me a fresh opportunity to declare my thanks and those of the Fatherland for your devoted work in my service and that of the Fatherland, performed in a quiet and unselfish manner.

Among those who made it possible for the German Army to show a bold front to the world and her enemies and achieve a great success over them you stand, as Chief of the General Staff, in the front rank. As a token of my gratitude I confer on you the Order of the Black Eagle.

Austrians Say Defeat Grows.

VIENNA, May 12, (via London.)—The following official statement was issued from general headquarters tonight:

The defeat of the Russian Third and Eighth Armies is increasing daily. The Russian troops with their trains are fleeing in disorder in the direction of Jaroslau, Przemysl, and Chyrow.

Strong enemy forces fleeing from the region of Sanok and Lisko eastward are being attacked from the south by our columns, which advanced by way of Balligrod and Polena.

In further pursuit, our victorious troops have crossed the lower Wisloka and captured Brzozow. Dynow, Sanok, and Lisko are in our hands.

Owing to the extraordinary success hitherto attained in West and Central Galicia, the Russian Carpathian front, east of Uzsok Pass, is now also beginning to waver. The Austro-German troops are attacking along the entire front in this section. The enemy in the region near Turka and in the Orawa and Opor valleys is in retreat.

North of the Vistula our troops have advanced across the Nida. In Southeast Galicia a strong Russian force has advanced across the Dniester in the direction of Horodenka. We had evacuated Zale Szcyky. The fighting continues.

regarded as the leader of the peace party. An attempt was made to storm his residence, but it was frustrated by soldiers. The crowd jeered as it passed the German Ecclesiastical College.

Demonstrations similar to that in the capital are occurring in the larger towns throughout the country. Clashes with those who favor neutrality have been prevented several times by the intervention of troops and the police.

Every precautions has been taken by the authorities of Rome to protect the Austrian and German diplomats accredited both to the Quirinal and Vatican.

GENEVA, May 12.—Germans arriving in Switzerland from Italy say it is no longer safe to speak German on the streets of Milan or Turin. They say that several Germans have been handled roughly by crowds. Two are reported to have been nearly lynched at Brescia.

BASEL, Switzerland, May 12.—The Swiss Government is today sending more troops to points on the southern frontier of the republic, especially to Lugano, because of recent anti-German demonstrations. It is estimated that 10,000 Germans from Italy are in and near Lugano. Local agitators have marched in procession in front of the Lugano hotels, particularly those occupied by Germans, calling out to them insulting phrases. The Lugano police apparently are finding difficulty in dealing with the crowds.

LONDON, Thursday, May 13.—The Evening News published last night a dispatch from its correspondent at Lugano, Switzerland, who says that scenes of indescribable panic are occurring on the border. Several thousand Italians are waiting for trains to take them back to Italy. At Udine, in northeastern Italy, the Mayor of the city is providing temporary accommodations for the increased population.

Italian steamers, the correspondent continues, are bringing from Zara, in Dalmatia, hundreds of Austro-Italians who are fearful of reprisals at the hands of the Austrians.

POPE DEEPLY DEPRESSED.

May Sever Relations with Central Empires if Italy Goes to War.

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain, via Paris, May 12.—Pope Benedict is greatly depressed by the trend of events in Italy and believes the intervention of that country in the war is only a question of days, according to apparently authentic information received here.

The Pontiff is reported to be greatly concerned regarding the possible effect war would have on the relations between the Quirinal and the Vatican. He has decided, it is said here, notonly to invite the German, Austrian, and Bavarian Ambassadors accredited to the Vatican to leave Rome, but to withdraw the Papal Nuncios from the courts of countries which would be hostile to Italy.

THREE REASONS FOR WAR.

Semi-Official Paper of Rome Tells Why Italy Desires Intervention.

The Idea Nazionale, a paper of Rome which for the last nine months has consistently exploited the propaganda of intervention on the side of the Entente Powers, and is known to be the mouthpiece of certain members of the Government, who can thus set their private views before the public without betraying their "official" positions, on May 10 set forth in three groups "the reasons which justify our participation in the conflagration—le ragioni che giustificano la nostra partecipazione alla conflagrazione."

According to a translation of the original text transmitted by cable to The Progresso Italo-Americano, the article in The Idea reads as follows:

"Italy desires war!

"1. In order to obtain Trent, Trieste, and Dalmatia. The country desires it. A nation which has the opportunity to free its land ought to do so as a matter of imperative necessity. If the Government and the institutions will not make war, they render themselves guilty of high treason toward the country.

"2. We desire war in order to conquer for ourselves a good strategic frontier in the north and east in place of the threatening frontier which we now have. When a nation can assure the protection of its domain it ought to do so, otherwise it will amount to less in its future. It is a necessary duty. There is no other alternative but this—either complete the work or betray what has already been done.

"3. We desire war because in the adriatic, the Balkan Peninsula, the Mediterranean, and Asia, Itly should have all the interests which are possible for her to have today and without which her political, economic, and moral power would diminish in proportion to the augmentation of that of others. This is the testimony of the Hon. Salandra. If we should avoid war we want less than his words most sacredly proclaimed to the nation in parliament. If we would be a great power we must accept certain obligations: one of them is war in order to keep us a great power. If we do not want to be a great power an ylonger, we deliberately and vilely betray ourselves.

"Here are the three reasons for going to war—tangible, material, and comprehensive."

WHY ITALY DELAYS JOINING THE WAR

Negotiations with Allies Made Extremely Delicate by Russia's Claims for Serbia.

WANTED ENTIRE DALMATIA

Vital Importance to Italy of Obtaining, While the Chance Offers, Control of the Adriatic.

ROME, April 25.—The negotiations with the Germanic empires have failed, as they were destined to fail from the beginning. I have it from a source that can be entirely relied upon that the attitude of the Salandra Cabinet throughout was most dignified and cautious; they consented to listen to and weigh any offers that Austria might cause to be made them; beyond that they would say nothing to Prince von Bülow—until the end, when the offers were rejected with the remark that they fell too far short of Italy's necessities to be worth discussing, since any treatment of the question at all would have to start upon the assumed cession of at least Istria and the Trentino. Von Bülow stays on at Rome, still hoping to move them from that position, and striving to gain as much time as possible, at any rate. This quite suits Salandra, as he does not wish to break outright with Austria before he shall have succeeded in coming to definite terms with the Triple Entente.

His attitude with the latter is also dignified; he replied to one of their recent repeated urgings to join them that if Italy did so, in order to liberate her people still under the Austrian yoke, it could only be after an explicit agreement by France, England, Russia, and Serbia that guaranteed Italy's possession of the Southern Tyrol, Istria, and Dalmatia, and the neutralization of such port or ports south of Dalmatia as should be allotted to Serbia, (not to mention here the Bay of Valona, the slice of Turkey, &c.,) making clear the vital necessity to Italy, if Austria fails, of permitting henceforth no other nation to construct war harbors on the eastern coast. This I have from the same reliable informant, a highly placed personage whose names I cannot use. He added that Serbia, and Russia backing her, had not only objected vigorously, but insisted on claiming for Slavdom the whole of Dalmatia, with right of fortification also.

Starting with such extremes in the two views, it can be understood why the negotiations are rightly characterized as most delicate, and why they have been and are dragging out so long; also why Italy has been so determinedly acting as the champion of Albania and keeping Serbia out of that country. France and England, of course, are acting as the peace keepers and trying hard to bring the two parties together. They may succeed in regard to Dalmatia, by the usual method of agreeing to divide it; but the dangerous difficulty lies in the question of neutralizing Serbia's ports, on which neither side is willing to give way.

Meanwhile the Russian press has been fanning the fires of Slav passion, claiming angrily for Serbia the right of a free people to fortify its harbors and to develop its marine, and insisting that the possession of Istria and Dalmatia both must be settled by a plébiscite or adjudged to the race which is there in the majority; to which the Italian journals as wrathfully retort by repeating the reasons for the justice of their claims. "From the military viewpoint," cries the Giornale d'Italia, "Italy cannot give way. In the Adriatic, if Austria disappears, there cannot be one fortress, nor one cannon, nor one submarine, nor one torpedo boat that is not Italian. Otherwise the present very difficult situation will be perpetuated, and with time inevitably be aggravated." In spite of all this, however, I believe that France and England will succeed in bringing the two sides to an agree-ment upon which Italy will join the Allies.

The Giornale d'Italia—whose views, though it is not an admitted mouth-piece of the present Government of Italy, on account of the intimate friendship uniting its editor with Prime Minister Salandra, may be assumed to reflect fairly the latter's opinions—a few days ago admonished the public that the third and final stage had been reached in Italy's preparation for her part in the world-conflict; that the first stage had been the preparation material, now practically completed by the country's full arming; the second had been the preparation moral, by which the minds of all citizens had been informed as to the causes of the great war and the part in it which Italy must play, while their spirits had been raised to confront every contingency with courage; and the third stage, now reached, was the preparation diplomatic, through whose successful operation alone could the nation be assured of obtaining the desired results of their armed intervention.

It behooved every citizen, therefore—continued the inspired journal—to cease now from all forms of agitation, which were no longer advisable since the country was fully ready for the fray, and to maintain that national quietness which was necessary for the Government's proper handling of the very delicate diplomatic situation. For this same reason the Cabinet had, several days before, forbidden henceforth all gatherings and speech-makings on political questions, of any sort.

The people have obeyed with a remarkable unanimity. With the exception of a few attempts here and there to hold interventionist meetings, they have turned very soberly to settling their private affairs and preparing to take their part in the reorganization of the national life which war will render necessary. Every city, every village, has been laboring strenuously in the past week to prepare for each woman, each child over 12 years of age, and each man over 45, his or her allotted place of labor in the new social organism that shall supplant the old, when the fatal hour strikes and all able-bodied men go under arms.

Crisis Understood by the People.

The contrast is most extraordinary, of the resolute quietness with which this great and ominous work is being accomplished, compared with the long preceding period of excitements and agitations. But it is due not merely to a sudden realization of the horrors of the war closing upon us; with that intuition which is so prominent a characteristic of the Italians, they have one and all divined that the negotiations now being conducted at Rome with the Powers of the Triple Entente, upon which the future of the nation will depend, are so very delicate indeed that not a voice should be raised to disturb the chances of success.

It is the dominion of the Adriatic that is at stake: the question that concerns Italy's progress as a nation, and as a great power, far more than that of the mere recovery of the provinces of Trent and Trieste. And if Americans are to do Italians any kind of justice, and thus stop the unwarranted criticisms which have been coming more frequently across the water to wound Italian susceptibilities, they must make an effort to comprehend better the depths of this serious matter.

The control of the Adriatic depends upon the possession of Istria and Dalmatia. A glance at the map will reveal that the whole Western coast of that sea is without indentations and off-lying islands—those of the Venetian lagoons being worthless for proper harborage on account of the shallow water behind them; and the three harbors only which this peculiar formation of the land allows to the Italian Kingdom—Venice, Ancona, and Brindisi—are at once too shallow, too small, and incapable of being properly fortified for defense, on account of opening too directly upon the sea.

On the other hand, the whole eastern coast is not only one long succession of deep bays and inlets, guarded by mountainous flanks and promontories, but is further protected, clear down to Albania, by the extraordinary off-lying chain of the Dalmatian Islands, whose narrow, tortuous channels are easily fortified to impregnability. Whoever, therefore, possesses this coast has at his command a plenty of capacious, unassailable harbors, from which secure refuge he can dominate completely the opposite indefensible shore. The Austrians have made of Pola and Cattaro two such impregnable war ports, while Zebenico and several other places would be likewise fortified at comparatively small cost.

Forced Into Triple Alliance.

It was precisely this unassailable position of Austria on the Adriatic, together with Italy's indefensible position, and her beautiful cities of Venice, Rimini, Pesaro, Ancona, Bari, &c., lying completely exposed to the fire of Austrian guns, that made quite necessary, until the present day, Italy's participation in the Triple Alliance. As one of King Humbert's Prime Ministers put it—who was secretely no friend of the Germanic empires, and yet felt compelled to renew the pact—"In such a situation as is that of the Adriatic, with the Balkan question added, Italy has only the option of fighting or allying herself with the power on the opposite shore."

The Alliance served well the purpose of the wise Italian statesmen in keeping peace between the two realms in spite of constant spinous questions, and in controlling Austria's ambitions in the Balkans; but now that it is broken at last by the empire's own acts, and the latter is evidently about to fall to pieces and leave the possession of the eastern coast to other hands, Italy is determined that this time the eternal menace of that impregnable shore shall be ended. It is to her a vital point of safety, of life, of progress. And since both Istria and Dalmatia were always Italian, until wrenched away by Austria a century ago, and are still Italian in language, culture, and basic ethnological stock, Italy claims them back again, and for that will fight.

Historically, this claim is certainly unattachable. Civilized and thoroughly Latinized by Rome before the Christian era, the three provinces in question have never ceased to the present day their use of the Latin tongue and culture, and their inhabitants until within a few decades remained almost purely of Italian blood. With the fall of the Western Empire they passed first under the sway of the Archbishops of Aquileia, who were Primates of Frinli, Istria and Dalmatia; in 579 the two latter territories were transferred to the rule of the Archbishops of Grado, and somewhat later became absorbed by Venice, which also in due time seized the temporal possessions of the Archbishops of Aquileia, including southern Tyrol (or Trentino). Venetial then the whole three provinces continued, enjoying with their paternal suzeraine all the advantages of the Renaissance, until Bonaport destroyed the Serene Republic and by the treaty of Campo Fornio in 1797 turned them over to Austria.

Up to this date, therefore, we see that these lands were continuously and entirely Italian, in every respect, considered always indeed as integral parts of Italia proper. And let us not forget that geographically also they are such: for the main ridge of the eastern Alps, the watershed between the zasins of the Adriatic and the Black Seas, runs well north of the Trentino—by the Brenner Pass—curves around north of Istria, and thence runs southeastward parallel with the coast at a short distance, separating Dalmatia from the interior by so formidable a barrier that it always warded off invasions and immigrations of the savage tribes to the east.

Italians Driven Out.

When Austria lost Venetia in 1866 she was unfortunately allowed to retain these three provinces; and since they never ceased to struggle and agitate for reunion to their motherland, keeping thus ever critical the dangerous question or "irredentism," the Imperial Government set itself the deliberate task of wiping out in them the Italian blood, language, and culture. That ethnic stock which the Alpine barrier had kept nearly pure they determined to replace with a neighboring people considered far less dangerous—the Slavic Croats and Serbs for nearly fifty years now these have been steadily brought up from the south, and over the mountains from the east, by every means in the power of despotism, and settled in the places and upon the lands of the Italians driven away by other tyrannical measures.

The result is that forced majority of Slavs in the rural population of Istria and Dalmatia—and in the population as a whole—upon which Serbia and Russia now base their claim to those territories. But nearly the whole of the educated and moneyed classes remain Italian, and, ever fighting mightily against desperate odds, have succeeded so far in keeping their control of the cities, and the use to some extent of their language and institutions.

From that 40 per cent. of the inhabitants, then, who constitute all the best elements of the population and represent the natural ethnic stock, have come all those reiterated appeals of late years which have multiplied in anguish since the war began and their burdens became intolerable, crying to Italians of the kingdom to march at last—to their rescue, or it will be too late. Rome, Venice, and the other chief cities are filled with their refugees from the terrible Austrian tyranny, who have aided the many "Trent and Trieste" Associations to bring home to all Italians during the past nine months the horrors of the despotism which is ruining and decimating their unredeemed brothers. And the people of the peninsula have responded—have turned from the neutrality which they at first desired to a resolute determination of completing now the union of Italy. E. W.

SAVES $310,000 FOR STATE'S LEAN PURSE

Governor Whitman Cuts More Appropriations—His Three Days' Total $1,322,000.

AIMS AT TWO MILLIONS

Department Heads and Legislative Leaders Cry "Grand-Stand Play" —Liken Executive to Glynn.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 12.—Governor Whitman's blue pencil today eliminated $310,371 from the appropriation bills. The total of the eliminations of three days is $1,322,083. It is predicted that before he ends his scrutiny of the bills at least $2,000,000 in items which the Governor regards as wasteful will be eliminated. There is little likelihood, however, that this will affect the project for raising nearly $20,000,000 by direct tax.

Not only heads of departments which have been affected but the legislative leaders who had a hand in shaping the fiscal measures are criticising the Governor harshly. They are unanimous in characterizing his action as a "grand-stand play," and assert that the cutting is done without any intelligent conception of what the reductions mean.

"He is doing the Glynn act over again," was the plaint of one department head. "All these so-called economies will reappear in the supply bill of next year, only they will be so much bigger that no one will recognize them."

One of the departments today was handled with gloves. That was the State Highway Department, whose head is Edwin Duffey of Cortland, who was Governor Whitman's room-mate at Amherst. Not a single appropriation was cut, although there was one item of $149,716 which Governor Whitman was anxious to eliminate.

Commissioner Duffey showed equal solicitation to have it remain. The Governor finally gave him until Monday to show cause why it should not be eliminated. From all indications the Governor in the end will have his way about it. The item represents a special appropriation for the construction of a stretch of road in Greene County from Palenville to Hunter, seventeen miles in length. The road is not part of the State system, and, according to all accounts, is of local value only. The item is a reappropriation of the balance of a special appropriation of $190,000 made by the Democratic Legislature in 1913 and approved by Governor Sulzer as a reward for the enthusiastic support he received from the Democratic leaders in Greene in his fight for direct primaries and against Tammany Leader Murphy.

"I'd like to cut that out," said the Governor, reflectively, when the item was reached. "Can't the work be carried on with some other available fund?" Commissioner Duffy told the Governor that there was no way but to do the work with the appropriation provided by the Legislature. "As it is, the road is not passable," said the Commissioner.

"Not passable? What has been done with the $50,000 that has been spent?" asked the Governor.

"That money has been used for the purchase of machinery and materials," said the Commissioner.

"I would like to veto that item," said the Governor again. "I will reserve action until Monday, and in the meantime you may submit a statement."

Health Department	$3,993
State Fair Commission	70,000
State Hospital Commission:
Administration exp.	8,430
Hospital repairs, &c.	150,000
Binghamton State Hospital	5,848
Central Islip State Hospital	54,500
Hudson River State Hospital	3,939
Kings Park State Hospital	13,200
St. Lawrence Hospital	411
Total cuts today	$310,371
Previous days	1,011,712
Grand total for three days	$1,322,083

Commissioner Duffey was the first to be summoned before the Governor to explain the needs of his department. He was followed by Health Commissioner Biggs. A reappropriation of $493 for traveling expenses for the Commissioner an dhis deputies was blue penciled and a similar course was followed with regard to an item of $3,500 for installing a new water supply plant at the States anti-toxin farm near Guilderland. The total appropriation for the Department this year is $350,000. This is three times as much as was appropriated in 1913. Dr. Biggs told the Governor that the wider scope of departmental activities following the reorganization in that year was responsible for the increase.

The $70,000 item cut from the appropriation for the State Fair Commission means the abandonment for the present at least—the Governor believes forever—of the plan for constructing a new race course at the Fair Grounds in Syracuse.

Homer Folks was consulted by the Governor when he took up the appropriation for the insane asylums. Mr. Folks pleaded warmly for tolerant treatment of the appropriations.

"The present situation is both wasteful and inhuman," said Mr. Folks. "I have heard the cry that this year is not the time for providing decent accommodations for the helpless insane patients until it has made my heart sick."

Dr. James V. May, the medical member of the Hospital Commission, told the Governor that owing to the Glynn policy, hundreds of employes at the State hospitals had been retired and there were not enough now to insure the safety of the insane. Leo Arnstein, representing New York City, pleaded for retrenchment.

"I am told," said Governor Whitman, in response to this plea, "that 18,000 of the 33,581 inmates in the State hospitals are from the metropolitan district."

Dr. Gaylord, head of the institute for the study of malignant diseases at Buffalo, told Governor Whitman that unless a $10,000 item in the supply bill was allowed, the institute would be compelled to discontinue its work on Aug. 1.

"I question whether the institute is necessary in view of the great work done by the Rockefeller Institute in the study of cancer and other malignant diseases," said the Governor. He promised, however, to take the matter under advisement.

UPHOLDS STATE'S LOAN.

Attorney General Approves Plan to Borrow $6,000,000.

ALBANY, May 12.—In an opinion rendered today, Attorney General Woodbury upholds Controller Travis's plan to borrow $6,000,000 for payroll purposes in anticipation of revenues. The legality of the Controller's action was questioned by Stewart Browne, President of the Real Estate Owners' Association of New York City, who contended that Section 14 of the Financial law under which the Controller can borrow up to $6,000,000 on short-time notes was unconstitution. In his opinion the Attorney General says:

"The Constitution inhibition with reference to the creation of debts did not contemplate the creation of an obligation where the means of payment were at the command of those who made it i norder to save unimpaired the public faith and credit or to support current expenses of government. It did not contemplate a situation where a previous administration, by failing to levy necessary taxes or produce the necessary revenues, had left the Government without funds in its treasury to carry on its ordinary activities and pay general expenses.

"The Legislature was entirely within its rights in providing in Section 14 of the finance law for the issuance of certificates of indebtedness in anticipation of and payable out of the taxes or other fixed revenues for the current year."

None of the transfer tax on the estate of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, which it is estimated may reach $3,000,000, will be received by the State in the current fiscal year, five months of which remain. In the case of large estates the first remittance usually is made almost exactly six months after death, within which period the law allows a rebate of 5 per cent.

When ex-Judge George W. McElroy, Chief of the Transfer Tax Bureau of the Controller's office, made up his estimate of income from estates he counted on a payment from the estate of John G. Wendel of $1,500,000. It has been discovered that Mr. Wendel made over most of his estate to his sisters and that the State will received only a nominal return in taxes.

Judge McElroy's estimate of the State's income from transfer taxes was $9,000,000. In seven months the income has been only $4,216,279. He expects a deficiency in the estimate of at least $3,000,000. The indirect revenue last year amounted to $42,855,013.12. The Controller estimated that this year it would be $42,063,338.02. For seven months, to April 30, the receipts from indirect taxes were, in 1914, $26,683,322.98; in 1915, $22,341,333.47. This shows a decrease to May 1, this year, as compared with last year, of $4,321,989.51.

TO SPEND $1,000,000 ON NEW FIRE ALARMS

McAneny Tells Fire Association Up-to-Date Telegraph System Will Be Installed.

MEANS CHEAPER INSURANCE

Flames that leaped across a large screen in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Astor, gas and electrical fuse explosions, and a deluge from automatic sprinklers, chemical extinguishers and regular fire-fighting equipment, all shown in moving pictures, were witnessed by more than 500 members of the National Fire Protection Association at their annual luncheon yesterday. The association, which will close its convention today, was informed by Acting Mayor George McAneny that New York City had decided to install an up-to-date fire alarm telegraph system. Robert Adamson, Fire Commissioner, said the system would cost more than $1,000,000.

The subject discussed at the luncheon was "Fire Protection and the Business Man." Allen Robinson, President of the Allied Real Estate Interests, complained of the general ignorance of the business man of all that had been done and was being done in the way of fire prevention. Mr. Robinson so warmly advocated the use of automatic sprinklers that he felt it incumbent upon him to explain he was not representing or interested in any concern that manufactured these devices. He gave illustrations to show how the installation of such equipment would be paid for in a very short period by the reduction of insurance.

"The thing you represent is so big, so fraught with promise for the future of the country and the safety of the cities, and the cutting down of economic waste that when you come among us in such large numbers it is of tremendous importance," said Acting Mayor McAneny. "No city will profit more than New York City by what you do. Of course, we have done much through legislation and through the City Government to promote fire prevention, but we still are at the beginning of the science. We must depend upon you to show and give us our directions."

According to Mr. McAneny fire-fighting apparatus could not follow the trend of skyscraper development. Experts, directed to ascertain what would be the result of an earthquake or general conflagration in the downtown section of Manhattan had reported that if all the people in the buildings of that section were suddenly emptied into the streets they would be five deep on top of one another, packed from building to building. Even so, only a small percentage of space available for tall buildings was occupied by structures of this type.

"If we stop these people from going up in the air we will compel the lateral development of our community and a more equal distribution," said Mr. McAneny. "The city has before it now a proposition to equip the Fire Department with a new and thoroughly up-to-date fire alarm telegraph system. There are certain details to be considered, but the thing must be done and done quickly. The Board of Estimate is about to vote unanimously for the proposition."

Fire Commissioner Adamson said he had asked the New York Fire Insurance Exchange whether it would make a reduction of fire insurance rates if the city installed a modern alarm system. He was answered by a resolution of the Exchange, offering, in consideration of a fire-alarm telegraph system, approved by the New York Board of Underwriters, promises that substantial reductions in the insurance rates would be made. According to Mr. Adamson the reductions to property owners would more than pay for the cost of the new equipment.

"The system we now have in this city is a disgrace," said Commissioner Adamson. "These are facts that have been known for years, and it is almost a matter of Providence that we have not had a breakdown and a general conflagration."

To meet the situation an emergency alarm system had to be provided, and this was only recently put in operation. According to Commissioner Adamson it will take at least two years to install the modern fire alarm telegraph system.

Commissioner Adamson recalled the last time he spoke at a convention of the National Fire Protection Association. He told the members then of a suit begun by the Fire Department to recover the expenses of extinguishing a fire which was due to willful and prolonged neglect. He announced that the Appellate Division recently had decided unanimously that the Fire Department could collect such damages where the owner of a building destroyed by fire had failed to comply with the notices served on him by the Fire Department.

After the speeches, motion pictures made in the Underwriters' Laboratories, in Chicago, were thrown on the screen, showing many of the tests by which the underwriters approved or rejected new devices for safeguarding against fires.

TWO KILLED BY GUNCOTTON.

Mayor of Wallington, N. J., to Investigate Explosion in Chemical Plant.

Special to The New York Times.

PASSAIC, N. J., May 12.—The dehydrating room of the Anderson Chemical Company's plant in Lodi Road, Wallington, a one-story frame building thirty feet square, was demolished this morning by an explosion of guncotton. William Wolverkummer, a chemist in an adjoining building, was killed when the wall was crashed in on him. William Godzik's right leg was blown off and he died later. Michael Cuzenko is reported dying in St. Mary's Hospital here. He and Godzik were in the wrecked room.

Mayor John H. McMahon has called a special meeting of the Council for tomorrow night to investigate the cause of the explosion and to plan how to make the company to take precautions against a repetition.

There was a similar explosion two years ago, in which two men were killed.

BRYCE COMMITTEE'S REPORT ON DELIBERATE SLAUGHTER OF BELGIAN NON-COMBATANTS

GERMAN ATROCITIES ARE PROVED, FINDS BRYCE COMMITTEE

Not Only Individual Crimes, but Premeditated Slaughter in Belgium.

CIVILIANS USED AS SHIELDS

Proof That Belgians Did Not Fire on Germans at Louvain—Germans Received Kindness.

Proofs of atrocities by the German armies in Belgium—proofs collected by men trained in the law and presented with unemotional directness after a careful inquiry—are presented in the report of the "Committee on Alleged German Atrocities" headed by Viscount Bryce, the famous historian and formerly British Ambassador at Washington. The impressive document of about 30,000 words was made public yesterday simultaneously in London and Washington.

In minute detail the report sets forth the hundreds of cases investigated, with an introduction relating how extreme care was taken in getting the truth. Purely hearsay evidence, it is declared, was not used in arriving at conclusions. Unsupported testimony was discounted. The temper, condition, and capabilities of the witnesses were considered closely. German diaries, the committee adds, were examined in large numbers and bore out the findings from other sources—and the diaries in all instances were well authenticated.

The committee, which was appointed by Premier Asquith to make the inquiry for the British Government, says in conclusion that innocent civilians of both sexes and all ages have been murdered, women violated, property wantonly destroyed, and the population of invaded Belgium terrorized by all manner of outrages, not only through individual offenses, but with the deliberate support of the officers of the German army. It is asserted that the usages of civilized warfare have been disregarded consistently, and with set purpose; that civilians old and young have been used as battleshields, Red Cross and white flags fired upon, and mutilations inflicted with ghastly cruelty upon men, women, and small children.

The report, the full text of which is printed herewith, presents an unimpassioned, but at times graphic, account of villages burned to the ground for no cause, wholesale slaughters by conquerors who included many officers and men overcome by drink, summary executions of children and bed-ridden old women, citizens burned alive in their homes, noncombatant crowds massacred in the streets, and other similarly atrocious occurrences of the war in Belgium.

Instances of Cruelties.

A few instances trace the trend of the tragic story told in this statistical and highly dignified official report:

A man was murdered while a child sat on each of his knees. A little boy was shot on the town green, and soon afterward a girl and her two small brothers were done to death in the same place—all for no reason. At least one town, Dinant, was systematically set afire with hand grenades. Women were attacked and bayoneted, and in a number of cases their breasts were cut off. Hideous wounds were found on the bodies of babies lying beside the roads.

Abundant evidence is presented to show that there were deliberate plans for the killing of noncombatants. Slaughter under orders, is one term the committee applies to it. Burning and pillage were organized, too. Nor, according to the report, is there any proof of "military necessity," though the Germans have offered that as their excuse. The committee finds that the idea of killing noncombatants had been instilled into the German army as a whole, that the officers foisted false stories of outrages committed by Belgians against the invaders, and that, with their minds prepared for what they were expected to do, the soldiers became filled with lust for blood and spoils in the wake of battle.

Two important contributions to questions long debated are the findings in reference to the sacking of Louvain and the killing of the Aerschot burgomaster's family. The investigators assert that the Belgians did not fire on the Germans in Louvain on Aug. 25, and that the Aerschot affair was not caused by the Belgian household, but by the unbidden German visitors misbehavior.

The committee, after setting forth its reasons for deciding that the atrocities were as much the result of a set plan by German officials as due to personal criminality, takes pains to record instances of exceptional German officers. These officers did not favor uncivilized war; they did at times punish offending soldiers. But one of them, in Brussels, is quoted as having said that in ruling the community under his command he did not do a hundredth part of what he was ordered to do by his superiors.

Full Text of the Report.

To the Right Hon. H. H. Asquith, &c., &c., First Lord of H. M. Treasury.

The committee have the honor to present and transmit to you a report upon the evidence which has been submitted to them regarding outrages alleged to have been committed by the German troops in the present war.

By the terms of their appointment the committee were directed "to consider and advise on the evidence collected on behalf of his Majesty's Government, as to outrages alleged to have been committed by German troops during the present war, cases of alleged maltreatment of civilians in the invaded territories, and breaches of the laws and established usages of war; and to prepare a report for his Majesty's Government showing the conclusion at which they arrive on the evidence now available."

It may be convenient that, before proceeding to state how we have dealt with the materials and what are the conclusions we have reached, we should set out the manner in which the evidence came into being, and its nature.

In the month of September, 1914, a minute was, at the instance of the Prime Minister, drawn up and signed by the Home Secretary and the Attorney General. It stated the need that had arisen for investigating the accusations of inhumanity and outrage that had been brought against the German soldiers, and indicated the precautions to be taken in collecting evidence that would be needed to ensure its accuracy. Pursuant to this minute steps were taken under the direction of the Home Office to collect evidence, and a great many persons who could give it were seen and examined.

For some three or four months before the appointment of the committee, the Home Office had been collecting a large body of evidence. [Taken from Belgian witnesses, some soldiers, but most of them civilians from those towns and villages through which the German Army passed, and from British officers and soldiers.] More than 1,200 depositions made by these witnesses have been submitted to and considered by the committee. Nearly all of these were obtained under the supervision of Sir Charles Mathews, the Director of Public Prosecutions, and of Mr. E. Grimwood Mears, barrister of the Inner Temple, while in addition Professor J. H. Morgan has collected a number of statements, mainly from British soldiers, which have also been submitted to the committee.

The labor involved in securing, in a comparatively short time, so large a number of statements from witnesses scattered all over the United Kingdom, made it necessary to employ a good many examiners. The depositions were in all cases taken down in this country by gentlemen of legal knowledge and experience, though, of course, they had no authority to administer an oath. They were instructed not to "lead" the witnesses or make any suggestions to them, and also to impress upon them the necessity for care and precision in giving their evidence.

Careful to Find the Truth.

They were also directed to treat the evidence critically and as far as possible satisfy themselves, by putting questions which arose out of the evidence, that the witnesses were speaking the truth. They were, in fact, to cross-examine them, so far as the testimony given provided materials for cross-examination.

We have seen and conversed with many of these gentlemen, and have been greatly impressed by their ability and by what we have gathered as to the fairness of spirit which they brought to their task. We feel certain that the instructions given have been scrupulously observed.

In many cases those who took the evidence have added their comments upon the intelligence and demeanor of the witnesses, stating the impression which each witness made, and indicating any cases in which the story told appeared to them open to doubt or suspicion. In coming to a conclusion upon the evidence the committee have been greatly assisted by these expressions of opinion and have uniformly rejected every deposition on which an opinion adverse to the witness has been recorded.

This seems to be a fitting place at which to put on record the invaluable help which we have received from our secretaries, Mr. E. Grimwood Mears and Mr. W. J. H. Brodrick, whose careful diligence and minute knowledge of the evidence have been of the utmost service. Without their skill, judgment, and untiring industry the labor of examining and appraising each part of so large a mass of testimony would have occupied us for six months instead of three.

The marginal references in this report indicate the particular deposition or depositions on which the statements made in the text are based.

The depositions printed in the appendix themselves show that the stories were tested in detail, and in none of these have we been able to detect the trace of any desire to "make a case" against the German Army. Care was taken to impress upon the witness that the giving of evidence was a grave and serious matter, and every deposition submitted to us was signed by the witness in the presence of the examiner.

A noteworthy feature of many of the depositions is that though taken at different places and on different dates and by different lawyers from different witnesses, they often corroborate each other in a striking manner.

The evidence is all couched in the very words which the witnesses used, and where they spoke, as the Belgian witnesses did, in Flemish or French, pains were taken to have competent translators and to make certain that the translation was exact.

Belgian Witnesses Reticent.

Seldom did these Belgian witnesses show a desire to describe what they had seen or suffered. The lawyers who took the depositions were surprised to find how little vindictiveness, or indeed passion, they showed, and how generally free from emotional excitement their narratives were. Many hesitated to speak lest what they said, if it should ever be published, might involve their friends or relatives at home in danger, and it was found necessary to give an absolute promise that names should not be disclosed.

For this reason names have been omitted.

A large number of depositions and extracts from depositions will be found in Appendix A, and to these your attention is directed.

In all cases these are given as nearly as possible (for abbreviation was sometimes inevitable) in the exact words of the witness, and wherever a statement has been made by a witness tending to exculpate the German troops it has been given in full. Excisions have been made only where it has been felt necessary to conceal the identity of the deponent, or to omit what are merely hearsay statements or are palpably irrelevant. In every case the name and description of the witnesses are given in the original depositions and in copies which have been furnished to us by H. M. Government. The originals remain in the custody of the Home Department, where they will be available, in case of need, for reference after the conclusion of the war.

The committee have also had before them a number of diaries taken from the German dead.

It appears to be the custom in the German Army for soldiers to be encouraged to keep diaries and to record in them the chief events of each day. A good many of these diaries were collected on the field when British troops were advancing over ground which had been held by the enemy, were sent to Headquarters in France, and dispatched thence to the War Office in England. They passed into the possession of the Prisoners of War Information Bureau, and were handed by it to our secretaries. They have been translated with great care. We have inspected them and are absolutely satisfied of their authenticity. They have thrown important light upon the methods followed in the conduct of the war. In one respect, indeed, they are the most weighty part of the evidence, because they proceed from a hostile source and are not open to any such criticism on the ground of bias, as might be applied to Belgian testimony. From time to time references to these diaries will be found in the text of the report. In Appendix B they are set out at greater length both in the German original and in an English translation, together with a few photographs of the more important entries.

Findings of the Committee Regarding German Atrocities

1. That there were in many parts of Belgium deliberate and systematically organized massacres of the civil population, accompanied by many isolated murders and other outrages.

2. That in the conduct of the war generally innocent civilians, both men and women, were murdered in large numbers, women violated, and children murdered.

3. That looting, house burning, and the wanton destruction of property were ordered and countenanced by the officers of the German army, that elaborate provision had been made for systematic incendiarism at the very outbreak of the war, and that the burnings and destruction were frequent where no military necessity could be alleged, being indeed part of a system of general terrorization.

4. That the rules and usages of war were frequently broken, particularly by the using of civilians, including women and children, as a shield for advancing forces exposed to fire, to a less degree by killing the wounded and prisoners, and in the frequent abuse of the Red Cross and the White Flag.

Warrant of the Committee Appointed by Premier Asquith

I hereby appoint:
The Right Hon. Viscount Bryce, O. M.;
The Right Hon. Sir Frederick Pollock, Bt., K. C.;
The Right Hon. Sir Edward Clarke, K. C.;
Sir Alfred Hopkinson, K. C.;
Mr. H. A. L. Fisher, Vice-Chancellor of the University of Sheffield; and Mr. Harold Cox;

to be a committee to consider and advise on the evidence collected on behalf of His Majesty's Government as to outrages alleged to have been committed by German troops during the present war, cases of alleged maltreatment of civilians in the invaded territories, and breaches of the laws and established usages of war; and to prepare a report for His Majesty's Government showing the conclusion at which they arrive on the evidence now available.

And I appoint Viscount Bryce to be Chairman, and Mr. E. Grimwood Mears and Mr. W. J. H. Brodrick, barristers-at-law, to be Joint Secretaries to the committee.

H. H. ASQUITH.

15th December, 1914.

Sir Kenelm E. Digby, K. C., G. C. B., was appointed an additional member of the committee on 22d January, 1915.

In Appendix C are set out a number of German proclamations. Most of these are included in the Belgian Report No. VI., which has been furnished to us. Actual specimens of original proclamations, issued by or at the bidding of the German military authorities, and posted in the Belgian and French towns mentioned, have been produced to us, and copies thereof are to be found in this appendix.

Appendix D contains the rules of The Hague Convention dealing with the conduct of war on land as adopted in 1907, Germany being one of the signatory powers.

In Appendix E will be found a selection of statements collected in France by Professor Morgan.

These five appendices are contained in a separate volume.

Inquiry with Legal Exactness.

In dealing with the evidence we have recognized the importance of testing it severely, and so far as the conditions permit we have followed the principles which are recognized in the courts of England, the British overseas dominions, and the United States. We have also (as already noted) set aside the testimony of any witnesses who did not favorably impress the lawyers who took their depositions, and have rejected hearsay evidence except in cases where hearsay furnished an undesigned confirmation of facts with regard to which we already possessed direct testimony from some other source, or explained in a natural way facts imperfectly narrated or otherwise perplexing.

[For instance, the dead body of a man is found lying on a doorstep, or a woman is seen who has the appearance of having been outraged. So far the facts are proved by the direct evidence of the person by whom they have been seen. Information is sought for by him as to the circumstances under which the death or outrage took place. The bystanders who saw the circumstances, but who are not now accessible, relate what they saw, and this is reported by the witness to the examiner and is placed on record in the depositions. We have had no hesitation in taking such evidence into consideration.]

It is natural to ask whether much of the evidence given, especially by the Belgian witnesses, may not be due to excitement and overstrained emotions, and whether, apart from deliberate falsehood, persons who mean to speak the truth may not in a more or less hysterical condition have ben imagining themselves to have seen the things which they say that they saw. Both the lawyers who took the depositions, and we when we came to examine them, fully recognized this possibility. The lawyers, as already observed, took pains to test each witness and either rejected, or appended a note of distrust to, the testimony of those who failed to impress them favorably. We have carried the sifting still further by also omitting from the depositions those in which we found something that seemed too exceptional to be accepted on the faith of one witness only, or too little supported by other evidence pointing to like facts. Many depositions have thus been omitted on which, though they are probably true, we think it safer not to place reliance.

Notwithstanding these precautions, we began the inquiry with doubts whether a positive result would be attained. But the further we went and the more evidence we examined, so much the more was our skepticism reduced. There might be some exaggeration in one witness, possible delusion in another, inaccuracies in a third. When, however, we found that things which had at first seemed improbable were testified to by many witnesses coming from different places, having had no communication with one another, and knowing nothing of one another's statements, the points in which they all agreed became more and more evidently true. And when this concurrence of testimony, this convergence upon what were substantially the same broad facts, showed itself in hundreds of depositions, the truth of these broad facts stood out beyond question. The force of the evidence is cumulative. Its worth can be estimated only by perusing the testimony as a whole. If any further confirmation had been needed, we found it in the diaries in which the German officers and private soldiers have recorded incidents just such as those to which the Belgian witnesses depose.

The experienced lawyers who took the depositions tell us that they passed from the same stage of doubt into the same stage of conviction. They also began their work in a skeptical spirit, expecting to find much of the evidence colored by passion, or prompted by an excited fancy. But they were impressed by the general moderation and matter of fact levelheadedness of the witnesses. We have interrogated them particularly regarding some of the most startling and shocking incidents which appear in the evidence laid before us, and where they expressed a doubt we have excluded the evidence, admitting it as regards the cases in which they stated that the witnesses seemed to them to be speaking the truth, and that they themselves believed the incidents referred to to have happened. It is for this reason that we have inserted among the depositions printed in the appendix several cases which we might otherwise have deemed scarcely credible.

The committee has conducted its investigations and come to its conclusions independently of the reports issued by the French and Belgian Commissions, but it has no reason to doubt that those conclusions are in substantial accord with the conclusions that have been reached by these two commissions.

Arrangement of the Report.

As respects the framework and arrangement of the report, it has been deemed desirable to present first of all what may be called a general historical account of the events which happened, and the conditions which prevailed in the parts of Belgium which lay along the line of the German march, and thereafter to set forth the evidence which bears upon particular classes of offenses against the usages of civilized warfare, evidence which shows to what extent the provisions of The Hague Convention have been disregarded.

This method, no doubt, involves a certain amount of overlapping, for some of the offenses belonging to the latter part of the report have been already referred to in the earlier part which deals with the invasion of Belgium. But the importance of presenting a connected narrative of events seems to outweigh the disadvantage of occasional repetition.

The report will therefore be found to consist of two parts, viz.:

(1.) An analysis and summary of the evidence regarding the conduct of the German troops in Belgium toward the civilian population of that country during the first few weeks of the invasion.

(2.) An examination of the evidence relating to breaches of the rules and usages of war and acts of inhumanity, committed by German soldiers or groups of soldiers, during the first four months of the war, whether in Belgium or in France.

This second part has again been subdivided into two sections:

a. Offenses committed against noncombatant civilians during the conduct of the war generally.

PART I.

Conduct of German Troops.

Although the neutrality of Belgium had been guaranteed by a treaty signed in 1839 to which France, Prussia, and Great Britain were parties, and although, apart altogether from any duties imposed by treaty, no belligerent nation has any right to claim a passage for its army across the territory of a neutral State, the position which Belgium held between the German Empire and France had obliged her to consider the possibility that in the event of a war between these two powers her neutrality might not be respected. In 1911 the Belgian Minister at Berlin had requested an assurance from Germany that she would observe the Treaty of 1839; and the Chancellor of the Empire had declared that Germany had no intention of violating Belgian neutrality. Again in 1913 the German Secretary of State at a meeting of a Budget Committee of the Reichstag had declared that "Belgian neutrality is provided for by international conventions and Germany is determined to respect those conventions." Finally, on July 31, 1914, when the danger of war between Germany and France seemed imminent, Herr von Buelow, the German Minister in Brussels, being interrogated by the Belgian Foreign Department, replied that he knew of the assurances given by the German Chancellor in 1911, and that he "was certain that the sentiments expressed at that time had not changed." Nevertheless on Aug. 2 the same Minister presented a note to the Belgian Government demanding a passage through Belgium for the German army on pain of an instant declaration of war. Startled as they were by the suddenness with which this terrific war cloud had risen on the eastern horizon, the leaders of the nation rallied round the King in his resolution to refuse the demand and to prepare for resistance. They were aware of the danger which would confront the civilian population of the country if it were tempted to take part in the work of national defence. Orders were accordingly issued by the civil governors of provinces, and by the burgomasters of towns, that the civilian inhabitants were to take no part in hostilities and to offer no provocation to the invaders. That no excuse might be furnished for severities, the populations of many important towns were instructed to surrender all firearms into the hands of the local officials.

This happened on Aug. 2. On the evening of Aug. 3 the German troops crossed the frontier. The storm burst so suddenly that neither party had time to adjust its mind to the situation. The Germans seem to have expected an easy passage. The Belgian population, never dreaming of an attack, were startled and stupefied.

Liege and District.

On Aug. 4 the roads converging upon Liége from northeast, east, and south were covered with German Death's Head Hussars and Uhlans pressing forward to seize the passage over the Meuse. From the very beginning of the operations the civilian population of the villages lying upon the line of the German advance were made to experience the extreme horrors of war.

"On the 4th of August," says one witness, "at Herve" (a village not far from the frontier), "I saw at about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, near the station, five Uhlans; these were the first German troops I had seen. They were followed by a German officer and some soldiers in a motor car. The men in the car called out to a couple of young fellows who were standing about thirty yards away. The young men, being afraid, ran off and then the Germans fired and killed one of them named D——."

The murder of this innocent fugitive civilian was a prelude to the burning and pillage of Herve and of other villages in the neighborhood, to the indiscriminate shooting of civilians of both sexes, and to the organized military execution of batches of selected males. Thus at Herve some fifty men escaping from the burning houses were seized, taken outside the town and shot. At Melen, a hamlet west of Herve, forty men were shot. In one household alone the father and mother (names given) were shot, the daughter died after being repeatedly outraged, and the son was wounded. Nor were children exempt.

"About Aug. 4," says one witness, "near Vottem, we were pursuing some Uhlans. I saw a man, woman, and a girl about nine, who had been killed. They were on the threshold of a house, one on the top of the other, as if they had been shot down, one after the other, as they tried to escape."

The burning of the villages in this neighborhood and the wholesale slaughter of civilians, such as occurred at Herve, Micheroux, and Soumagne, appear to be connected with the exasperation caused by the resistance of Fort Fléron, whose guns barred the main road from Aix la Chapelle to Liége. Enraged by the losses which they had sustained, suspicious of the temper of the civilian population, and probably thinking that by exceptional severities at the outset they could cow the spirit of the Belgian nation, the German officers and men speedily accustomed themselves to the slaughter of civilians. How rapidly the process was effected is illustrated by an entry in the diary of Kurt Hoffman, a one year's man in the 1st Jägers, who on Aug. 5 was in front of Fort Fléron. He illustrates his story by a sketch map.

"The position," he says, "was dangerous. As suspicious civilians were hanging about—houses 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, were cleared, the owners arrested (and shot the following day). Suddenly village A was fired at. Out of it bursts our baggage train, and the 4th Company of the 27th Regiment who had lost their way and been shelled by our own artillery. From the point D.P. (shown in diary) I shoot a civilian with rifle at 400 meters slap through the head, as we afterward ascertained."

Within a few hours, Hoffman, whilst in house 3, was himself under fire from his own comrades and narrowly escaped being killed. A German, ignorant that house 3 had been occupied, reported, as was the fact, that he had been fired upon from that house. He had been challenged by the field patrol, and failed to give the countersign. Hoffman continues:

"Ten minutes later, people approach who are talking excitedly—apparently Germans. I call out 'Halt, who's there?' Suddenly rapid fire is opened upon us, which I can only escape by quickly jumping on one side—with bullets and fragments of wall and pieces of glass flying round me. I call out 'Halt, here Field Patrol.' Then it stops, and there appears Lieutenant Römer with three platoons. A man has reported that he had been shot at out of our house; no wonder, if he does not give the countersign."

The entry, though dated August the 5th, was evidently written on the 6th or later, because the writer refers to the suspicious civilians as having been shot on that day. Hoffman does not indicate of what offence these civilians were guilty, and there is no positive evidence to connect their slaughter with the report made by the German who had been fired on by his comrades. They were "suspicious" and that was enough.

Civilians Summarily Executed.

The systematic execution of civilians, which in some cases, as the diary just cited shows, was founded on a genuine mistake, was given a wide extension through the province of Liége. In Soumagne and Micheroux very many civilians were summarily shot. In a field belonging to a man named E—— 56 or 57 were put to death. A German officer said: "You have shot at us." One of the villagers asked to be allowed to speak, and said: "If you think these people fired, kill me, but let them go." The answer was three volleys. The survivors were bayoneted. Their corpses were seen in the field that night by another witness. One at least had been mutilated. These were not the only victims in Soumagne. The eye-witness of the massacre saw, on his way home, 20 bodies, one that of a young girl of 13. Another witness saw 19 corpses in a meadow.

At Blegny Trembleur, on the 6th, some civilians were captured by German soldiers, who took steps to put them to death forthwith, but were restrained by the arrival of an officer. The prisoners subsequently were taken off to Battice and five were shot in a field. No reason was assigned for their murder.

In the meantime house burners were at work. On the 6th, Battice was destroyed in part. From the 8th to the 10th over 300 houses were burnt at Herve, while mounted men shot into doors and windows to prevent the escape of the inhabitants.

At Heure le Romain on or about the 15th of August all the male inhabitants, including some bedridden old men were imprisoned in the church. The burgomaster's brother and the priest were bayoneted.

Officers Direct Incendiaries.

On or about the 14th and 15th the village of Visé was completely destroyed. Officers directed the incendiaries, who worked methodically with benzine. Antiques and china were removed from the houses, before their destruction, by officers, who guarded the plunder revolver in hand. The house of a witness, which contained valuables of this kind, was protected for a time by a notice posted on the door by officers. This notice has been produced to the committee. After the removal of the valuables this house also was burnt.

German soldiers had arrived on the 15th at Blegny Trembleur and seized a quantity of wine. On the 16th prisoners were taken; four, including the priest and the burgomaster, were shot. On the same day 200 (so-called) hostages were seized at Flémalle and marched off. There they were told that unless Fort Flémalle surrendered by noon they would be shot. It did surrender and they were released.

Entries in a German diary show that on the 19th the German soldiers gave themselves up to debauchery in the streets of Liége, and on the night of the 20th (Thursday) a massacre took place in the streets, beginning near the Café Carpentier, at which there is said to have been a dinner attended by Russian and other students. A proclamation issued by General Kolewe on the following day gave the German version of the affair, which was that his troops had been fired on by Russian students. The diary states that in the night the inhabitants of Liége became mutinous and that 50 persons were shot. The Belgian witnesses vehemently deny that there had been any provocation given, some stating that many German soldiers were drunk, others giving evidence which indicates that the affair was planned beforehand. It is stated that at 5 o'clock in the evening, long before the shooting, a citizen was warned by a friendly German soldier not to go out that night.

Though the cause of the massacre is in dispute, the results are known with certaint. The Rue des Pitteurs and houses in the Place de l'Université and the Quai des Pêcheurs were systematically fired with benzine, and many inhabitants were burnt alive in their houses, their efforts to escape being prevented by rifle fire. Twenty people were shot, while trying to escape, before the eyes of one of the witnesses. The Liége Fire Brigade turned out but was not allowed to extinguish the fire. Its carts, however, were usefully employed in removing heaps of civilian corpses to the Town Hall. The fire burnt on through the night and the murders continued on the following day, the 21st. Thirty-two civilians were killed on that day in the Place de l'Université alone, and a witness states that this was followed by the rape in open day of 15 or 20 women on tables in the square itself.

No depositions are before us which deal with events in the city of Liége after this date. Outrages, however, continued in various places in the province.

Outrages All Through District.

For example, on or about the 21st of August, at Pepinster, two witnesses were seized as hostages and were threatened, together with five others, that unless they could discover a civilian who was alleged to have shot a soldier in the leg, they would be shot themselves. They escaped their fate because one of the hostages convinced the officer that the alleged shooting, if it took place at all, took place in the Commune of Cornesse and not that of Pepinster, whereupon the Burgomaster of Cornesse, who was old and very deaf, was shot forthwith.

The outrages on the civilian population were not confined to the villages mentioned above, but appear to have been general throughout this district from the very outbreak of the war.

An entry in one of the diaries says:

"We crossed the Belgian frontier on 15th August, 1914, at 11:50 in the forenoon, and then we went steadily along the main road till we got into Belgium. Hardly were we there when we had a horrible sight. Houses were burnt down, the inhabitants chased away and some of them shot. Not one of the hundreds of houses were spared. Everything was plundered and burnt. Hardly had we passed through this large village before the next village was burnt, and so it went on continuously. On the 16th of August, 1914, the large village of Barchon was burnt down. On the same day we crossed the bridge over the Meuse at 11:30 in the morning. We then arrived at the town of Wandre. Here the houses were spared, but everything was examined. At last we were out of the town and everything went in ruins. In one house a whole collection of weapons was found. The inhabitants without exception were brought out and shot. This shooting was heartbreaking as they all knelt down and prayed, but that was no ground for mercy. A few shots rang out and they fell back into the green grass and slept forever." ["Die Einwohner wurden samt und sonders herausgeholt und erschossen; aber dieses Erschiessen war direkt herzzerreisend wie sie alle kniethen und beteten, aber dies half kein Erbarmen. Ein paar Schüsse krachten und die fielen rücklings in das grüne Gras und verschliefen für immer."]

Valleys of Meuse and Sambre.

While the First Army, under the command of General Alexander von Kluck, was mastering the passages of the Meuse between Visé and Namur, and carrying out the scheme of devastation which has already been described, detachments of the Second German Army, under General von Bülow, were proceeding up the Meuse valley toward Namur. On Wednesday, August the 12th, the town of Huy, which stands halfway between Namur and Liége, was seized. On August 20th German guns opened fire on Namur itself. Three days later the city was evacuated by its defenders, and the Germans proceeded along the valley of the Sambre through Tamines and Charleroi to Mons. Meanwhile a force under General von Hausen had advanced upon Dinant, by Laroche, Marche, and Achène, and on August 15th made an unsuccessful assault upon that town. A few days later the attack was renewed and with success, and, Dinant captured, Von Hausen's army streamed into France by Bouvines and Rethel, firing and looting the villages and shooting the inhabitants as they passed through.

The evidence with regard to the Province of Namur is less voluminous than that relating to the north of Belgium. This is largely due to the fact that the testimony of soliders is seldom available, as the towns and villages once occupied by the Germans were seldom reoccupied by the opposing troops, and the number of refugees who have reached England from the Namur district is comparatively small.

Andenne is a small town on the Meuse between Liége and Namur, lying opposite the village of Seilles (with which it is connected by a bridge over the river), and was one of the earlier places reached on the German advance up the Meuse. In order to understand the story of the massacre which occurred there on Thursday, August 20th, the following facts should be borne in mind: The German advance was hotly contested by Belgian and French troops. From daybreak onward on the 19th August the 8th Belgian Regiment of the Line were fighting with the German troops on the left bank of the Meuse on the heights of Seilles. At 8 A. M. on the 19th the Belgians found further resistance impossible in the district, and retired under shelter of the forts of Namur. As they retired they blew up Andenne bridge. The first Germans arrived in Andenne at about 10 A. M., when 10 or 12 Uhlans rode into the town. They went to the bridge and found it was destroyed. They then retired, but returned about half an hour afterward. Soon after that several thousand Germans entered the town and made arrangements to spend the night there. Thus, on the evening of the 19th August a large body of German troops were in possession of the town, which they had entered without any resistance on the part of the allied armies or of the civilian population.

About 4:30 on the next afternoon shots were fired from the left bank of the Meuse and replied to by the Germans in Andenne. The village of Andenne had been isolated from the district on the left bank of the Meuse by the destruction of the bridge, and there is nothing to suggest that the firing on the left came from the inhabitants of Andenne. Almost immediately, however, the slaughter of these inhabitants began, and continued for over two hours and intermittently during the night. Machine guns were brought into play. The German troops were said to be for the most part drunk, and they certainly murdered and ravaged unchecked. A reference to the German diaries in the appendix will give some idea of the extent to which the army gave itself up to drink through the month of August.

When the fire slackened about 7 o'clock, many of the townspeople fled in the direction of the quarries; others remained in their houses. At this moment the whole of the district round the station was on fire and houses were flaming over a distance of 2 kilometres in the direction of the hamlet of Tramaka. The little farms which rise one above the other on the high ground of the right bank were also burning.

At 6 o'clock on the following morning, the 21st, the Germans began to drag the inhabitants from their houses. Men, women, and children were driven into the square where the sexes were separated. Three men were then shot, and a fourth was bayoneted. A German colonel was present whose intention in the first place appeared to be to shoot all the men. A young German girl who had been staying in the neighborhood interceded with him, and after some parleying, some of the prisoners were picked out, taken to the banks of the Meuse and there shot. The colonel accused the population of firing on the soldiers, but there is no reason to think that any of them had done so, and no inquiry appears to have been made.

About 400 people lost their lives in this massacre, some on the banks of the Meuse, where they were shot according to orders given, and some in the cellars of the houses where they had taken refuge. Eight men belonging to one family were murdered. Another man was placed close to a machine gun which was fired through him. His wife brought his body home on a wheel-barrow. The Germans broke into her house and ransacked it, and piled up all the eatables in a heap on the floor and relieved themselves upon it.

A hair-dresser was murdered in his kitchen where he was sitting with a child on each knee. A paralytic was murdered in his garden. After this came the general sack of the town. Many of the inhabitants who escaped the massacre were kept as prisoners and compelled to clear the houses of corpses and bury them in trenches. These prisoners were subsequently used as a shelter and protection for a pontoon bridge which the Germans had built across the river, and were so used to prevent the Belgian forts from firing upon it.

A few days later the Germans celebrated a Fête Nocturne in the square. Hot wine, looted in the town, was drunk, and the women were compelled to give three cheers for the Kaiser and to sing "Deutschland über Alles."

The Namur District.

The fight round Namur was accompanied by sporadic outrages. Near Marchovelette wounded men were murdered in a farm by German soldiers. The farm was set on fire. A German cavalryman rode away holding in front of him one of the farmer's daughters crying and dishevelled.

At Temploux, on the 23rd August, a professor of modern languages at the College of Namur was shot at his front door by a German officer. Before he died he asked the officer the reason for this brutality, and the officer replied that he had lost his temper because some civilians had fired upon the Germans as they entered the village. This allegation was not proved. The Belgian army was still operating in the district, and it may well be that it was from them that the shots in question proceeded. After the murder the house was burnt.

On the 24th and 25th of August massacres were carried out at Surice, in which many persons belonging to the professional classes, as well as others, were killed.

Namur was entered on the 24th August. The troops signalized their entry by firing on a crowd of 150 unarmed unresisting civilians, ten alone of whom escaped.

A witness of good standing who was in Namur describes how the town was set on fire systematically in six different places. As the inhabitants fled from the burning houses they were shot by the German troops. Not less than 140 houses were burnt.

On the 25th the hospital at Namur was set on fire with inflammable pastilles, the pretext being that soldiers in the hospital had fired upon the Germans

At Denée, on the 28th of August, a Belgian soldier who had been taken prisoner saw three civilian fellow prisoners shot. One was a cripple and another an old man of eighty who was paralyzed. It was alleged by two German soldiers that these men had shot at them with rifles. Neither of them had rifles, nor had they anything in their pockets. The witness actually saw the Germans search them and nothing was found.

Charleroi's Child Victims.

In Tamines, a large village on the Meuse between Namur and Charleroi, the advance guard of the German Army appeared in the first fortnight in August, and in this, as well as in other villages in the district, it is proved that a large number of civilians, among them aged people, women, and children, were deliberately killed by the soldiers. One witness describes how she saw a Belgian boy of fifteen shot on the village green at Tamines, and a day or two later, on the same green, a little girl and her two brothers, (name given,) who were looking at the German soldiers, were killed before her eyes for no apparent reason.

The principal massacre at Tamines took place about Aug. 23. A witness describes how he saw the public square littered with corpses, and after a search found those of his wife and child, a little girl of seven.

Another witness, who lived near Tamines, went there on Aug. 27, and says: "It is absolutely destroyed and a mass of ruins."

At Morlanwelz, about this time, the British Army, together with some French cavalry, were compelled to retire before the German troops. The latter took the burgomaster and his man-servant prisoner and shot them both in front of the Hôtel de Ville at Péronne, (Belgium,) where the bodies were left in the street for forty-eight hours. They burnt the Hôtel de Ville and sixty-two houses. The usual accusation of firing by civilians was made. It is strenuously denied by the witness, who declares that three or four days before the arrival of the Germans circulars had been distributed to every house and placards had been posted in the town ordering the deposit of all firearms at the Hôtel de Ville, and that this order had been complied with.

At Monceau-sur-Sambre, on the 21st of August, a young man of eighteen was shot in his garden. His father and brother were seized in their house and shot in the courtyard of a neighboring country house. The son was shot first. The father was compelled to stand close to the feet of his son's corpse and to fix his eyes upon him while he himself was shot. The corpse of the young man shot in the garden was carried into the house and put on a bed. The next morning the Germans asked where the corpse was. When they found it was in the house they fetched straw, packed it round the bed on which the corpse was lying, and set fire to it and burnt the house down. A great many houses were burnt in Monceau.

A vivid picture of the events at Montigny-sur-Sambre has been given by a witness of high standing who had exceptional opportunities of observation. In the early morning of Saturday, Aug. 22, Uhlans reached Montigny. The French Army was about four kilometers away, but on a hill near the village were a detachment of French about 150 to 200 strong lying in ambush. At about 1:30 the main body of the German Army began to arrive. Marching with them were two groups of so-called hostages, about 400 in all. Of these, 300 were surrounded with a rope held by the front, rear, and outside men. The French troops in ambush opened fire, and immediately the Germans commenced to destroy the town. Incendiaries with a distinctive badge on their arm went down the main street throwing handfuls of inflammatory and explosive pastilles into the houses. These pastilles were carried by them in bags, and in this way about 130 houses were destroyed in the main street. By 10:30 P. M. some 200 more hostages had been collected. These were drawn from Montigny itself, and on that night about fifty men, women, and children were placed on the bridge over the Sambre and kept there all night. The bridge was similarly guarded for a day or two, apparently either from a fear that it was mined or in the belief that these men, women, and children would afford some protection to the Germans in the event of the French attempting to storm the bridge. At one period of the German occupation of Montigny eight nuns of the Order of Ste. Marie were captives on the bridge. House burning was accompanied by murder, and on the Monday morning twenty-seven civilians from one parish alone were seen lying dead in the hospital.

Other outrages committed at Jumet, Bouffioulx, Charleroi, Marchiennes-au-Pont, Couillet, and Maubeuge are described in the depositions given in the Appendix.

Dinant in Flames.

A clear statement of the outrages at Dinant, which many travelers will recall as a singularly picturesque town on the Meuse, is given by one witness, who says that the Germans began burning houses in the Rue St. Jacques on the 21st August, and that every house in the street was burnt. On the following day an engagement took place between the French and the Germans, and the witness spent the whole day in the cellar of a bank with his wife and children. On the morning of the 23d, about 5 o'clock, firing ceased, and almost immediately afterward a party of Germans came to the house. They rang the bell and began to batter at the door and windows. The witness's wife went to the door, and two or three Germans came in. The family were ordered out into the street. There they found another family, and the two families were driven with their hands above their heads along the Rue Grande. All the houses in the street were burning. The party was eventually put into a forge where there were a number of other prisoners, about a hundred in all, and were kept there from 11 A. M. till 2 P. M. They were then taken to the prison. There they were assembled in a courtyard and searched. No arms were found. They were then passed through into the prison itself and put into cells. The witness and his wife were separated from each other. During the next hour, the witness heard rifle shots continually, and noticed in the corner of a courtyard leading off the row of cells the body of a young man with a mantle thrown over it. He recognized the mantle as having belonged to his wife. The witness's daughter was allowed to go out to see what had happened to her mother, and the witness himself was allowed to go across the courtyard half an hour afterward for the same purpose. He found his wife lying on the floor in a room. She had bullet wounds in four places, but was alive, and told her husband to return to the children, and he did so. About 5 o'clock in the evening he saw the Germans bringing out all the young and middle-aged men from the cells, and ranging their prisoners, to the number of forty, in three rows in the middle of the courtyard. About twenty Germans were drawn up opposite, but before anything was done there was a tremendous fusillade from some point near the prison and the civilians were hurried back to their cells. Half an hour later the same forty men were brought back into the courtyard. Almost immediately there was a second fusillade like the first, and they were driven back to the cells again. About 7 o'clock the witness and others prisoners were brought out of their cells and marched out of the prison. They went between two lines of troops to Roche Bayard, amout a kilometer away. An hour later the women and children were separated and the prisoners were brought back to Dinant, passing the prison on their way. Just outside the prison the witness saw three lines of bodies which he recognized as being those of neighbors. They were nearly all dead, but he noticed movement in some of them. There were about 120 bodies. The prisoners were then taken up to the top of the hill outside Dinant and compelled to stay there till 8 o'clock in the morning. On the following day they were put into cattle trucks and taken thence to Coblenz. For three months they remained prisoners in Germany.

Unarmed civilians were killed in masses at other places near the prison. About ninety bodies were seen lying on the top of one another in a grass square opposite the convention. They included many relatives of a witness whose deposition will be found in the Appendix. This witness asked a German officer why her husband had been shot, and he told her that it was because two of her sons had been in the civil guard and had shot at the Germans. As a matter of fact, one of her sons was at that time in Liége and the other in Brussels. It is stated that beside the ninety corpses referred to above, sixty corpses of civilians were recovered from a hole in the brewery yard, and that forty-eight bodies of women and children were found in a garden. The town was systematically set on fire by hand grenades.

Another witness saw a little girl of seven, one of whose legs was broken and the other injured by a bayonet.

We have no reason to believe that the civilian population of Dinant gave any provocation, or that any other defense can be put forward to justify the treatment inflicted upon its citizens.

As regards this town and the advance of the German Army from Dinant to Rethel on the Aisne, a graphic account is given in the diary of a Saxon officer. This diary confirms what is clear from the evidence as a whole, both as regards these and other districts, that civilians were constantly taken as prisoners, often dragged from their homes and shot under the direction of the authorities without any charge being made against them. An event of the kind is thus referred to in a diary entry: "Apparently 200 men were shot. There must have been some innocent men among them. In future we shall have to hold an inquiry as to their guilt instead of shooting them." The shooting of inhabitants, women and children as well as men, went on after the Germans had passed Dinant on their way into France. The houses and villages were pillaged and property wantonly destroyed.

Aerschot, Malines, Vilvorde, Louvain.

About Aug. 9 a powerful screen of cavalry masking the general advance of the first and second German armies was thrown forward into the provinces of Brabant and Limburg. The progress of the invaders was contested at several points, probably near Tirlemont on the Louvain Road, and at Diest, Haelen, and Schaffen, on the Aerschot Road, by detachments of the main Belgian army which was drawn up upon the line of the Dyle. In their preliminary skirmishes the Belgians more than once gained advantages, but after the fall on Aug. 15 of the last of the Liége forts the great line of railway which runs through Liége toward Brussels and Antwerp in one direction and toward Namur and the French frontier in another, fell into the hands of the Germans. From this moment the advance of the main army was swift and irresistible. On Aug. 19 Louvain and Aerschot were occupied by the Germans, the former without resistance, the latter after a struggle which resulted early in the day in the retirement of the Belgian army upon Antwerp. On Aug. 20 the invaders made their entry into Brussels.

The quadrangle of territory bounded by the towns of Aerschot, Malines, Vilvorde, and Louvain is a rich agricultural tract, studded with small villages and comprising two considerable cities, Louvain and Malines. This district on Aug. 19 passed into the hands of the Germans, and, owing perhaps to its proximity to Antwerp, then the seat of the Belgian Government and headquarters of the Belgian Army, it became from that date a scene of chronic outrage, with respect to which the committee has received a great mass of evidence.

The witnesses to these occurrences are for the most part imperfectly educated persons who cannot give accurate dates, so it is impossible in some cases to fix the dates of particular crimes; and the total number of outrages is so great that we cannot refer to all of them in the body of the report or give all the depositions relating to them in the Appendix. The main events, however, are abundantly clear, and group themselves naturally round three dates—August 19th, August 25th, and September 11th.

The arrival of the Germans in the district on August the 19th was marked by systematic massacres and other outrages at Aerschot itself, Gelrode, and some other villages.

Leading Up to Louvain.

On August 25th the Belgians, sallying out of the defenses of Antwerp, attacked the German positions at Malines, drove the enemy from the town and reoccupied many of the villages, such as Sempst, Hofstade, and Eppeghem, in the neighborhood. And just as numerous outrages against the civilian population had been the immediate consequence of the temporary repulse of the German vanguard from Fort Fléron, so a large body of depositions testify to the fact that a sudden outburst of cruelty was the response of the German Army to the Belgian victory at Malines. The advance of the German Army to the Dyle had been accompanied by reprehensible and, indeed, (in certain cases,) terrible outrages, but these had been, it would appear, isolated acts, some of which are attributed by witnesses to indignation at the check at Haelen, while others may have been the consequence of drunkenness. But the battle of Malines had results of a different order. In the first place it was the occasion of numerous murders committed by the German Army in retreating through the villages of Sempst, Hofstade, Eppeghem, Elewyt, and elsewhere. In the second place, it led, as it will be shown later, to the massacres, plunderings, and burnings at Louvain, the signal for which was provided by shots exchanged between the German Army retreating after its repulse at Malines and some members of the German garrison at Louvain, who mistook their fellow-countrymen for Belgians. Lastly, the encounter at Malines seems to have stung the Germans into establishing a reign of terror in so much of the district comprised in the quadrangle as remained in their power. Many houses were destroyed and their contents stolen. Hundreds of prisoners were locked up in various churches, and were in some instances marched about from one village to another. Some of these were finally conducted to Louvain and linked up with the bands of prisoners taken in Louvain itself, and sent to Germany and elsewhere.

On September 11th, when the Germans were driven out of Aerschot across the River Dèmer by a successful sortie from Antwerp, murders of civilians were taking place in the villages which the Belgian Army then recaptured from the Germans. These crimes bear a strong resemblance to those committed in Hofstade and other villages after the battle of Malines.

Aerschot and Its District.

The German Army entered Aerschot quite early in the morning. Workmen going to their work were seized and taken as hostages.

The Germans, apparently already irritated, proceeded to make a search for the priests and threatened to burn the convent if the priests should happen to be found there. One priest was accused of inciting the inhabitants to fire on the troops, and when he denied it the Burgomaster was blamed by the officer. The priest then showed the officer the notices on the walls, signed by the Burgomaster, warning the inhabitants not to intervene in hostilities.

It appears that they accused the priest of having fired at the Germans from the tower of the church. This is important, because it is one of the not infrequent cases in which the Germans ascribed firing from a church to priests, whereas, in fact, this firing came from Belgian soldiers, and also because it seems to show that the Germans, from the moment of their arrival in Aerschot, were seeking to pick a quarrel with the inhabitants, and this goes far to explain their subsequent conduct. Hostages were collected until 200 men, some of whom were invalids, were gathered together.

M. Tielmans, the Burgomaster, was then ordered by some German officers to address the crowd and to tell them to hand in any weapons which they might have in their possession at the Town Hall, and to warn them that any one who was found with weapons would be killed. As a matter of fact, the arms in the possession of civilians had already been collected at the beginning of the war. The Burgomaster's speech resulted in the delivery of one gun, which had been used for pigeon shooting. The hostages were then released. Throughout the day the town was looted by the soldiers. Many shop windows were broken, and the contents of the shop fronts ransacked.

A shot was fired about 7 o'clock in the evening, by which time many of the soldiers were drunk. The Germans were not of one mind as to the direction from which the shot proceeded. Some said it came from a jeweler's shop, and some said it came from other houses. No one was hit by this shot, but thereafter German soldiers began to fire in various directions at people in the streets.

Aershot Burgomaster's Tragedy.

It is said that a German General or Colonel was killed at the Burgomaster's house. As far as the committee has been able to ascertain, the identity of the officer has never been revealed. The German version of the story is that he was killed by the fifteen-year-old son of the Burgomaster; the committee, however, is satisfied by the evidence of several independent witnesses that some German officers were standing at the window of the Burgomaster's house, that a large body of German troops were in the square, that some of these soldiers were drunk and let off their rifles, that in the volley one of the officers standing at the window of the Burogmaster's house fell, that at the time of the accident the wife and son of the Burgomaster had gone to take refuge in the cellar, and that neither the Burgomaster nor his son were in the least degree responsible for the occurrence which served as the pretext for their subsequent execution, and for the firing and sack of the town.

This account agrees substantially with that given in a letter written by Mme. Tielmans, the Burgomaster's wife, which is printed in the fifth report of the Belgian Commission. The letter is as follows:

"This is how it happened. About 4 o'clock in the afternoon my husband was giving cigars to the sentinels stationed at the door. I saw that the General and his aides-de-camp were looking at us from the balcony, and told him to come indoors. Just then I looked toward the Grand Place, where more than 2,000 Germans were encamped, and distinctly saw two columns of smoke followed by a fusillade; the Germans were firing on the houses, and forcing their way into them. My husband, children, servant, and myself had just time to dash into the staircase leading to the cellar. The Germans were even firing into the passages of the houses. After a few minutes of indescribable horror, one of the General's aides-de-camp came down and said: 'The General is dead. Where is the Burgomaster?' My husband said to me, 'This will be serious for me.' As he went forward, I said to the aide-de-camp, 'You can see for yourself, sir, that my husband did not fire.' 'That makes no difference,' he said, 'he is responsible.' My husband was taken off. My son, who was at my side, took us into another cellar. The came aide-de-camp came and dragged him out, and made him walk in front of him, kicking him as he went. The poor boy could hardly walk. That morning when they came to the town the Germans had fired through the windows of the houses, and a bullet had come into the room where my son was, and he had been wounded in the calf by the ricochet. After my husband and son had gone, I was dragged all through the house by Germans, with their revolvers level at my head. I was compelled to see their dead General. Then my daughter and I were thrown into the street without cloaks or anything. We were massed in the Grand Place, surrounded by a cordon of soldiers, and compelled to witness the destruction of our beloved town. And then by the hideous light of the fire I saw them for the last time, about 1 in the morning, my husband and my boy tied together. My brother-in-law was behind them. They were being led out to execution."

The houses were set on fire with special apparatus, while people were dragged from their houses already burning, and some were shot in the streets.

Many civilians were marched to a field on the road to Louvain and kept there all night. Meanwhile many of the inhabitants were collected in the square. By this time very many of the troops were drunk.

On the following day a number of the civilians were shot under the orders of an officer, together with the Burgomaster, his brother and his son. Of this incident, which is spoken to by many witnesses, a clear account is given:

"German soldiers came and took hold of me and every other man they could see, and eventually there were about 60 of us, including some of 80 (i. e., years of age,) and they made us accompany them. * * * All the prisoners had to walk with their hands above their heads. We were then stopped and made to stand in a line, and an officer, a big fat man who had a blueish uniform, * * * came along the line and picked out the Burgomaster, his brother, and his son, and some men who had been employed under the Red Cross. In all, ten men were picked out * * * The remainder were made to turn their backs upon the ten. I then heard some shots fired, and I and the other men turned round and we saw all the ten men, including the Burgomaster, were lying on the ground."

This incident is spoken to by other witnesses also; some of their depositions appear in the appendix.

Slaughter at Gelrode.

On the same day, at Gelrode, a small village close to Aerschot, 25 civilians were imprisoned in the church; seven were taken out by 15 German soldiers in charge of an officer just outside. One of the seven tried to run away, whereupon all the six who remained behind alive were shot. This was on the night of the 19th of August. No provocation whatever had been given. The men in question had been searched, and no arms had been found upon them. Here, as at Aerschot, precautions had been taken previously to secure the delivery up of all arms in the hands of civilians.

Some of the survivors were compelled to dig graves for the seven. At a later date the corpses were disinterred and reburied in consecrated ground. The marks of the bullets in the brick wall against which the six were shot were then still plainly visible. On the same day a woman was shot by some German soldiers as she was walking home. This was done at a distance of 100 yards and for no apparent reason.

An account of a murder by an officer at Campenhout is given in a later part of this report, and depositions relating to Rotselaer, Tremeloo, and Wespelaer will be found in the appendix.

The committee is specially impressed by the character of the outrages committed in the smaller villages. Many of these are exceptionally shocking and cannot be regarded as contemplated or prescribed by the responsible commanders of the troops by whom they were committed. The inference, however, which we draw from these occurrences is that when once troops have been encouraged in a career of terrorism, the more savage and brutal natures, of whom there are some in every large army, are liable to run to wild excess, more particularly in those regions where they are least subject to observation and control.

Later Outrages Near Aerschot.

Immediately after the battle of Malines, which resulted in the evacuation by the Germans of the district of Malines, Sempst, Hofstade, and Eppeghem, a long series of murders were committed either just before or during the retreat of the army. Many of the inhabitants who were unarmed, including women and young children, were killed—some of them under revolting circumstances.

Evidence given goes to show that the death of these villagers was due not to accident but to deliberate purpose. The wounds were generally stabs or cuts, and for the most part appear to have been inflicted with the bayonet.

In Malines itself many bodies were seen. One witness saw a German soldier cut a woman's breasts after he had murdered her, and saw many other dead bodies of women in the streets.

In Hofstade a number of houses had been set on fire and many corpses were seen, some in houses, some in back yards, and some in the streets.

Several examples are given below:

Two witnesses speak to having seen the body of a young man pierced by bayonet thrusts, with the wrists cut also.

On a side road the corpse of a civilian was seen on his doorstep with a bayonet wound in his stomach, and by his side the dead body of a boy of five or six with his hands nearly severed.

The corpses of a woman and boy were seen at the blacksmith's. They had been killed with the bayonet.

In a café a young man, also killed with the bayonet, was holding his hands together as if in the attitude of supplication.

Two young women were lying in the back yard of the house. One had her breasts cut off, the other had been stabbed.

A young man had been hacked with the bayonet until his entrails protruded. He also had his hands joined in the attitude of prayer.

In the garden of a house in the main street bodies of two women were observed, and in another house the body of a boy of 16 with two bayonet wounds in the chest.

In Sempst a similar condition of affairs existed. Houses were burning, and in some of them were the charred remains of civilians.

In a bicycle shop a witness saw the burned corpse of a man. Other witnesses speak of this incident.

Another civilian, unarmed, was shot as he was running away. As will be remembered all the arms had been given up some time before by order of the Burgomaster.

Attacks on Young Girls.

The corpse of a man with his legs cut off, who was partly bound, was seen by another witness, who also saw a girl of seventeen dressed only in a chemise and in great distress. She alleged that she herself and other girls had been dragged into a field, stripped naked and violated, and that some of them had been killed with the bayonet.

At Weerde four corpses of civilians were lying in the road. It was said that these men had fired upon the German soldiers; but this is denied. The arms had been given up long before.

Two children were killed in a village, apparently Weerde, quite wantonly as they were standing in the road with their mother. They were three or four years old and were killed with the bayonet.

A small farm burning close by formed a convenient means of getting rid of the bodies. They were thrown into the flames from the bayonets. It is right to add that no commissioned officer was present at this time.

At Eppeghem, on the 25th of August, a pregnant woman who had been wounded with a bayonet was discovered in the convent. She was dying. On the road six dead bodies of laborers were seen.

At Elewyt a man's naked body was tied up to a ring in the wall in the back yard of a house. He was dead, and his corpse was mutilated in a manner too horrible to record. A woman's naked body was also found in a stable abutting on the same back yard.

At Vilvorde corpses of civilians were also found. These villages are all on the line from Malines to Brussels.

At Boort Meerbeek, a German soldier was seen to fire three times at a little girl of five years old. Having failed to hit her, he subsequently bayoneted her. He was killed with the butt end of a rifle by a Belgian soldier who had seen him commit this murder from a distance.

At Herent the charred body of a civilian was found in a butcher's shop, and in a hand cart 20 yards away was the dead body of a laborer. Two eyewitnesses relate that a German soldier shot a civilian and stabbed him with a bayonet as he lay. He then made one of these witnesses, a civilian prisoner, smell the blood on the bayonet.

At Haecht the bodies of 10 civilians were seen lying in a row by a brewery wall. In a laborer's house, which had been broken up, the mutilated corpse of a woman of 30 to 35 was discovered. A child of three with its stomach cut open by a bayonet was lying near a house.

At Werchter the corpses of a man and woman and four younger persons were found in one house. It is stated that they had been murdered because one of the latter, a girl, would not allow the Germans to outrage her.

Cruelty the Accompaniment of War.

This catalogue of crimes does not by any means represent the sum total of the depositions relating to this district laid before the committee. The above are given merely as examples of acts which the evidence shows to have taken place in numbers that might have seemed scarcely credible.

In the rest of the district, that is to say Aerschot and the other villages from which the Germans had not been driven, the effect of the battle was to cause a recrudescence of murder, arson, pillage, and cruelty, which had to some extent died down after the 20th or 21st of August.

In Aerschot itself fresh prisoners seem to have been taken and added to those who were already in the church, since it would appear that prisoners were kept to some extent in the church during the whole of the German occupation of Aerschot. The second occasion on which large numbers of prisoners were put there was shortly after the battle of Malines, and it was then that the priest of Gelrode was brought to Aerschot church, treated abominably and finally murdered.

One witness describes the scene graphically:

"The whole of the prisoners—men, women, and children—were placed in the church. Nobody was allowed to go outside the church to obey the calls of nature. The church had to be used for that purpose. We were afterwards allowed to go outside the church for this purpose, and then I saw the clergyman of Gelrode standing by the wall of the church with his hands above his head, being guarded by soldiers."

The actual details of the murder of the priest are as follows: The priest was struck several times by the soldiers on the head. He was pushed up against the wall of the church. He asked in Flemish to be allowed to stand with his face to the wall, and tried to turn round. The Germans stopped him, and then turned him with his face to the wall, with his hands above his head. An hour later the same witness saw the priest still standing there. He was then led away by the Germans a distance of about 50 yards. There, with his face against the wall of a house, he was shot by five soldiers.

Other murders of which we have evidence appear in the appendix.

Some of the prisoners in the church at Aerschot were actually kept there until the arrival of the Belgian army, on Sept. 11, when they were released. Others were marched to Louvain, and eventually merged with other prisoners, both from Louvain itself and the surrounding districts, and taken to Germany and elsewhere.

It is said by one witness that about 1,500 were marched to Louvain, and that the journey took six hours.

The journey to Louvain is thus described by a witness: "We were all marched off to Louvain, walking. There were some very old people, among others a man 90 years of age. The very old people were drawn in carts and barrows by the younger men. There was an officer with a bicycle, who shouted, as people fell out by the side of the road, 'Shoot them!'"

September in Aerschot District.

It is unnecessary to describe with much particularity the events of the period beginning about Sept. 10. The Belgian soldiers who had recaptured the place found corpses of civilians, who must have been murdered in Aerschot itself, just as they found them in Sempst and the other villages on August 25. Some of these bodies were found in wells, and some had been burned alive in their houses.

The prisoners released by the Belgian army from the church were almost starved.

At Haecht several children had been murdered. One of 2 or 3 years old was found nailed to the door of a farmhouse by its hands and feet, a crime which seems almost incredible, but the evidence for which we feel bound to accept. In the garden of this house was the body of a girl, who had been shot in the forehead.

At Capelle-au-Bois two children were murdered in a cart, and their corpses were seen by many witnesses at different stages of the cart's journey.

At Eppeghem the dead body of a child at 2 was seen pinned to the ground with a German lance. Same witness saw a mutilated woman alive near Weerde on the same day.

Belgian soldiers on patrol duty found a young girl naked on the ground, covered with scratches. She complained of having been violated. On the same day an old woman was seen kneeling by the body of her husband, and she told them that the Germans had shot him as he was trying to escape from the house.

Louvain and District.

The events spoken of as having occurred in and around Louvain between the 19th and the 25th of August deserve clost attention.

For six days the Germans were in peaceful occupation of the city. No houses were set on fire—no citizens killed. There was a certain amount of looting of empty houses, but otherwise discipline was effectively maintained. The condition of Louvain during these days was one of relative peace and quietude, presenting a striking contrast to the previous and contemporaneous conduct of the German army elsewhere.

On the evening of Aug. 25 a sudden change takes place. The Germans, on that day repulsed by the Belgians, had retreated to and reoccupied Louvain. Immediately the devastation of that city and the holocaust of its population commences. The inference is irresistible that the army as a whole wreaked its vengeance on the civil population and the buildings of the city in revenge for the setback which the Belgian arms had inflicted on them. A subsidiary cause alleged was the assertion, often made before, that civilians had fired upon the German army.

The depositions which relate to Louvain are numerous, and are believed by the committee to present a true and fairly complete picture of the events of the 25th and 26th August and subsequent days. We find no grounds for thinking that the inhabitants fired upon the German army on the evening of the 25th August. Eyewitnesses worthy of credence detail exactly when, where, and how the firing commenced. Such firing was by Germans on Germans. No impartial tribunal could, in our opinion, come to any other conclusion.

On the evening of the 25th firing could be heard in the direction of Herent, some three kilometres from Louvain. An alarm was sounded in the city. There were disorder and confusion, and at 8 o'clock horses attached to baggage wagons stampeded in the street and rifle fire commenced. This was in the Rue de la Station and came from the German police guard, (2[illegible] in number,) who, seeing the troops arrive in disorder, thought it was the enemy. Then the corps of incendiaries got to work. They had broad belts with the words "Gott mit uns," and their equipment consisted of a hatchet, a syringe, a small shovel, and a revolver. Fires blazed up in the direction of the Law Courts, St. Martin's Barracks, and later in the Place de la Station. Meanwhile an incessant fusilade was kept up on the windows of the houses. In their efforts to escape the flames the inhabitants climbed the walls.

"My mothr and servants," says a witness, "had to do the same, and took refuge at Monsieur A.'s, whose cellars are vaulted and afforded a better protection than mine. A little later we withdrew to Monsieur A.'s stables, where about thirty people, who had got there by climbing the walls, were to be found. Some of these poor wretches had to climb twenty walls. A ring came at the bell. We opened the door. Several civilians flung themselves under the porch. The Germans were firing upon them from the street. Every moment new fires were lighting up, accompanied by explosions. In the middle of the night I heard a knock at the outer door of the stable which led into a little street and heard a woman's voice crying for help. I opened the door, and just as I was going to let her in a rifle shot fired from the street by a German soldier rang out and the woman fell dead at my feet. About 9 in the morning things got quieter, and we took the opportunity of venturing into the street. A German who was carrying a silver pyx and a number of boxes of cigars told us we were to go to the station, where trains would be waiting for us. When we got to the Place de la Station we saw in the Square seven or eight dead bodies of murdered civilians. Not a single house in the place was standing. A whole row of houses behind the station at Blauwput was burned. After being driven hither and thither interminably by officers, who treated us roughly and insulted us throughout, we were divided."

Theft and Murder at Herent.

The prisoners were then distributed between different bodies of troops and marched in the direction of Herent. Seventy-seven inhabitants of Louvain, including a number of people of good position, (the names of several are given,) were thus taken to Herent.

"We found the village of Herent in flames, so much so that we had to quicken up to prevent ourselves from being suffocated and burned up by the flames in the middle of the road. Half-burnt corpses of civilians were lying in front of the houses. During a halt soldiers stole cattle and slaughtered them where they stood. Firing started on our left. We were told it was the civilians firing and that we were going to be shot. The truth is that it was the Germans themselves who were firing to frighten us. There was not a single civilian in the neighborhood. Shortly afterwards we proceeded on our march to Malines. We were insulted and threatened. * * * The officers were worse than the men. We got to Campenhout about 7 P. M., and were locked into the church with all the male population of the village. Some priests had joined our numbers. We had had nothing to eat or drink since the evening of the day before. A few compassionate soldiers gave us water to drink, but no official took the trouble to see that we were fed."

Next day, Thursday, the 27th, a safe-conduct to return to Louvain was given, but the prisoners had hardly started when they were stopped and taken before a Brigade General and handed to another escort. Some were grossly ill-treated. They were accused of being soldiers out of uniform, and were told they could not go to Louvain, "as the town was going to be razed to the ground." Other prisoners were added, even women and children, until there were more than 200. They were then taken toward Malines, released, and told to go to that town together and that those who separated would be fired on. Other witnesses corroborate the events described by the witness.

A woman employed as servant by an old gentleman living in the Rue de la Station tells the story of her master's death.

"We had supper, as usual, about 8, but two German officers, (who were staying in the house,) did not come in to supper that evening. My master went to bed at 8:15, and so did his son. The servants went to bed at half-past 9. Soon after I got to my bedroom I saw out of my room flames from some burning house near by. I roused my master and his son. As they came down the stairs they were seized by German soldiers and both were tied up and led out, my master being tied with a rope and his son with a chain. They were dragged outside. I did not actually see what happened outside, but heard subsequently that my master was bayonetted and shot and that his son was shot. I heard shots from the kitchen, where I was, and was present at the burial of my master and his son thirteen days later. German soldiers came back into the house and poured some inflammable liquid over the floors and set fire to it. I escaped by another staircase to that which my master and his son had descended."

On the 26th, (Wednesday,) in the city of Louvain massacre, fire, and destruction went on. The University, with its library, the Church of St. Peter, and many houses were set on fire and burned to the ground. Citizens were shot and others taken prisoners and compelled to go with the troops. Soldiers went through the streets saying, "Man hat geschossen," ["They have been shooting."] One soldier was seen going along shooting in the air.

Many of the people hid in cellars, but the soldiers shot down through the gratings. Some citizens were shot on opening the doors, others in endeavoring to escape. Among other persons whose houses were burned was an old man of 90 lying dangerously ill, who was taken out on his mattress and left lying in his garden all night. He died shortly after in the hospital to which a friend took him the following morning.

On Thursday, the 27th, orders were given that every one should leave the city, which was to be razed to the ground.

Fate of Louvain Captives.

Some citizens, including a Canon of the Cathedral, with his aged mother, were ordered to go to the station and afterwards to take the road to Tirlemont. Among the number were about twenty priests from Louvain. They were insulted and threatened, but ultimately allowed to go free and make their way as best they could, women and sick persons among them, to Tirlemont. Other groups of prisoners from Louvain were on the same day taken by other routes, some early in the morning, through various villages in the direction of Malines with hands tightly bound by a long cord. More prisoners were afterwards added, and all made to stay the night in the church at Campenhout. Next day, the 28th, this group, then consisting of about 1,000 men, women, and children, was taken back to Louvain. The houses along the road were burning, and many dead bodies of civilians, men and women, were seen on the way. Some of the principal streets in Louvain had by that time been burned out. The prisoners were placed in a large building on the cavalry exercise ground—"One woman went mad, some children died, others were born." On the 29th the prisoners were marched along the Malines road, and at Herent the women and children and men over 40 were allowed to go. The others were taken to Boort Meerbeek, fifteen kilometres from Malines, and told to march straight to Malines or be shot. At 11 P. M. they reached the fort of Waelhem, and were at first fired on by the sentries, but on calling out they were Belgians were allowed to pass. These prisoners were practically without food from early morning on the 26th until midnight on the 29th. Of the corpses seen on the road, some had their hands tied behind their backs, others were burned, some had been killed by blows, and some corpses were those of children who had been shot.

Another witness, a man of independent means, was arrested at noon by the soldiers of the 165th Regiment and taken to the Place de la Station. He was grossly ill-treated on the way and robbed by an officer of his purse and keys. His hands were tied behind his back. His wife was kept a prisoner at the other side of his station. He was then made to march with about 500 other prisoners until midnight, slept in the rain that night, and next day, having had no food since leaving Louvain, was taken to the church in Rotselaer, where there were then about 1,500 prisoners confined, including some infants. No food was given, only some water. Next day they were taken through Wespelaer and back to Louvain. On the way from Rotselaer to Wespelaer fifty bodies were seen, some naked and carbonized and unrecognizable. When they arrived at Louvain the fish market, the Place Marguerite, the Cathedral, and many other buildings were on fire. In the evening about 100 men, women, and children were put in horse trucks, from which the dung had not been removed, and at 6 next morning left for Cologne.

The wife of this witness was also taken prisoner with her husband and her maid, but was separated from him, and she saw other ladies made to walk before the soldiers with their hands above their heads. One, an old lady of 85, (name given,) was dragged from her cellar and taken with them to the station. They were kept there all night, but set free in the morning, Thursday, but shortly afterwards sent to Tirlemont on foot. A number of corpses were seen on the way. The prisoners, of whom there are said to have been thousands, were not allowed even to have water to drink, although there were streams on the way from which the soldiers drank. Witness was given some milk at a farm, but as she raised it to her lips it was taken away from her.

Paths Amid Burned Corpses.

A priest was taken on the Friday morning, Aug. 28th, and placed at the head of a number of refugees from Wygmael. He was led through Louvain, abused and ill-treated, and placed, with some thousands of other people, in the riding school in the Rue de Manège. The glass roof broke in the night from the heat of burning buildings around. Next day the prisoners were marched through the country with an armed guard. Burned farms and burned corpses were seen on the way. The prisoners were finally separated into three groups, and the younger men marched through Herent and Bueken to Campenhout, and ultimately reached the Belgian lines about midnight on Saturday, Aug. 29th. All the houses in Herent, a village of about 5,000 inhabitants, had been burned.

The massacre of civilians at Louvain was not confined to its citizens. Large crowds of people were brought into Louvain from the surrounding districts, not only from Aerschot and Gelrode, as above mentioned, but also from other places. For example, a witness describes how many women and children were taken in carts to Louvain and there placed in a stable. Of the hundreds of people thus taken from the various villages and brought to Louvain as prisoners some were massacred there, others were forced to march along with citizens of Louvain through various places, some being ultimately sent, on the 29th, to the Belgian lines at Malines. Others were taken in trucks to Cologne, as described below; others were released. An account of the massacre of some of these unfortunate civilian prisoners given by two witnesses may be quoted.

"We were all placed in Station Street, Louvain, and the German soldiers fired upon us. I saw the corpses of some women in the street. I fell down, and a woman who had been shot fell on top of me. I did not dare to look at the dead bodies in the street, there were so many of them. All of them had been shot by the German soldiers. One woman whom I saw lying dead in the street was a Miss J., about 35. I also saw the body of A. M., (a woman.) She had been shot. I saw an officer pull her corpse underneath a wagon."

Another witness, who was taken from Aerschot, also describes the occurrence.

"I was afterwards taken, with a large number of other civilians, and placed in the church at Louvain. Then we were taken to Station Street, Louvain. There were about 1,500 civilians of both sexes, and we had been marched from Aerschot to Louvain. When we were in Station Street I felt that something was about to happen, and I tried to shelter in a doorway. The German soldiers then fired a mitrailleuse and their rifles upon the people, and the people fell on all sides. Two men next to me were killed. I afterwards saw some one give a signal and the firing ceased. I then ran away with a married woman named B——, (whose maiden name was A. M.,) aged 29, who belonged to Aerschot, but we were again captured. She was shot by the side of me, and I saw her fall. Several other people were shot at the same time. I again ran away, and in my flight saw children falling out of their mothers' arms. I cannot say whether they were shot or whether they fell from their mothers' arms in the great panic which ensued. I, however, saw children bleeding."

From Louvain to Cologne.

The greatest number of prisoners from Louvain, however, were assembled at the station and taken by trains to Cologne. Several witnesses describe their sufferings and the ill-treatment they received on the journey. One of the first trains started in the afternoon. It consisted of cattle trucks, about 100 being in each truck. It took three days to get to Cologne. The prisoners had nothing to eat but a few biscuits each, and they were not allowed to get out for water and none was given. On a wagon the words, "Civilians who shot at the soldiers at Louvain" were written. Some were marched through Cologne afterwards for the people to see. Ropes were put around the necks of some and they were told they would be hanged. An order then came that they were to be shot instead of hanged. A firing squad was prepared, and five or six prisoners were put up, but were not shot. After being kept a week at Cologne some of these prisoners were taken back—this time only thirty or forty in a truck—and allowed to go free on arriving at Limburg. Several witnesses who were taken in other trains to Cologne describe their experiences in detail. Some of the trucks were abominably filthy. Prisoners were not allowed to leave to obey the calls of nature; one man who quitted the truck for the purpose was killed by a bayonet. Describing what happened to another body of prisoners, a witness says that they were made to cross Station Street, where the houses were burning, and taken to the station, placed in horse trucks, crowded together, men, women, and children, in each wagon. They were kept at the station during the night and the following day left for Cologne. For two days and a half they were without food, and then they received a loaf of bread among ten persons and some water. The prisoners were afterwards taken back to Belgium. They were, in all, eight days in the train, crowded and almost without food. Two of the men went mad. The women and children were separated from the men at Brussels. The men were taken to a suburb and then to the villages of Herent, Vilvorde, and Sempst, and afterwards set at liberty.

This taking of the inhabitants, including some of the influential citizens, in groups and marching them to various places, and in particular the sending them to Malines and the dispatch of great numbers to Cologne, must evidently have been done under the direction of the higher military authorities. The ill-treatment of the prisoners was under the eyes and often by the direction or with the sanction of officers, and officers themselves took part in it.

The object of taking many hundreds of prisoners to Cologne and back into Belgium is at first sight difficult to understand. Possibly it is to be regarded as part of the policy of punishment for Belgian resistance and general terrorization of the inhabitants—possibly as a desire to show these people to the population of a German city and thus to confirm the belief that the Belgians had shot at their troops.

Outrages Were Deliberate.

Whatever may have been the case when the burning began on the evening of the 25th, it appears clear that the subsequent destruction and outrages were done with a set purpose. It was not until the 26th that the Library, and other University buildings, the Church of St. Peter, and many houses were set on fire. It is to be noticed that cases occur in the depositions in which humane acts by individual officers and soldiers are mentioned, or in which officers are said to have expressed regret at being obliged to carry out orders for cruel action against the civilians. Similarly, we find entries in diaries which reveal a genuine pity for the population and disgust at the conduct of the army. It appears that a German non-commissioned officer stated definitely that he "was acing under orders and executing them with great unwillingness." A commissioned officer on being asked at Louvain by a witness—a highly educated man—about the horrible acts committed by the soldiers, said he "was merely executing orders," and that he himself would be shot if he did not execute them. Others gave less credible excuses, one stating that the inhabitants of Louvain had burned the city themselves because they did not wish to supply food and quarters for the German army. It was to the discipline rather than the want of discipline in the army that these outrages, which we are obliged to describe as systematic, were due, and the special official notices posted on certain houses that they were not to be destroyed show the fate which had been decreed for the others which were not so marked.

We are driven to the conclusion that the harrying of the villages in the district, the burning of a large part of Louvain, the massacres there, the marching out of the prisoners, and the transport to Cologne (all done without inquiry as to whether the particular persons seized or killed had committed any wrongful act), were due to a calculated policy carried out scientifically and deliberately, not merely with the sanction, but under the direction of higher military authorities, and were not due to any provocation or resistance by the civilian population.

Ruins of Termonde.

To understand the depositions describing what happened at Termonde it is necessary to remember that the German army occupied the town on two occasions, the first, from Friday, September the 4th, to Sunday, September the 6th, and again later in the month, about the 16th. The civilians had delivered up their arms a fortnight before the arrival of the Germans.

Early in the month, probably about the 4th, a witness saw two civilians murdered by Uhlans. Another witness saw their dead bodies which remained in the street for ten days. Two hundred civilians were utilized as a screen by the German troops about this date.

On the 5th the town was partially burned. One witness was taken prisoner in the street by some German soldiers together with several other civilians. At about 12 o'clock some of the tallest and strongest men among the prisoners were picked out to go around the streets with paraffin. Three or four carts containing paraffin tanks were brought up, and a syringe was used to put paraffin on to the houses, which were then fired. The process of destruction began with the houses of rich people, and afterward the houses of the poorer classes were treated in the same manner. German soldiers had previously told this witness that if the Burgomaster of Termonde, who was out of town, did not return by 12 o'clock that day the town would be set on fire. The firing of the town was in consequence of his failure to return. The prisoners were afterward taken to a factory and searched for weapons. They were subsequently provided with passports enabling them to go anywhere in the town, but not outside. The witness in question managed to effect his escape by swimming across the river.

Another witness describes how the tower of the Church of Termonde St. Gilles was utilized by the Belgian troops for offensive purposes. They had, in fact, mounted a machine gun there. This witness was subsequently taken prisoner in a cellar in Termonde in which he had taken refuge with other people. All the men were taken from the cellar and the women were left behind. About 70 prisoners in all were taken; one, a brewer, who could not walk fast enough, was wounded with a bayonet. He fell down and was compelled to get up and follow the soldiers. The prisoners had to hold up their hands, and if they dropped their hands they were struck on the back with the butt ends of rifles. They were taken to Lebbeke, where there were in all 300 prisoners, and there they were locked up in the church for three days and with scarcely any food.

A witness living at Baesrode was taken prisoner with 250 others and kept all night in a field. The prisoners were released on the following morning. This witness saw three corpses of civilians, and says that the Germans on Sunday, the 6th, plundered and destroyed the houses of those who had fled. The Germans left on the following day, taking about thirty men with them, one a man of 72 years of age.

Later in the month civilians were again used as a screen, and there is evidence of other acts of outrage.

Alost's Record of Cruelty.

Alost was the scene of fighting between the Belgian and German armies during the whole of the latter part of the month of September. In connection with the fighting numerous cruelties appear to have been perpetrated by the German troops.

On Saturday, the 11th September, a weaver was bayonetted in the street. Another civilian was shot dead at his door on the same night. On the following day the witness was taken prisoner together with thirty others. The money of the prisoners was confiscated, and they were subsequently used as a screen for the German troops who were at that moment engaged in a conflict with the Belgian army in the town itself. The Germans burned a number of houses at this time. Corpses of fourteen civilians were seen in the streets on this occasion.

A well-educated witness, who visited the Wetteren Hospital shortly after this date, saw the dead bodies of a number of civilians belonging to Alost, and other civilians wounded. One of these stated that he took refuge in the house of his sister-in-law that the Germans dragged the people out of the house, which was on fire, seized him, threw him on the ground, and hit him on the head with the butt end of a rifle, and ran him through the thigh with a bayonet. They then placed him with seventeen or eighteen others in front of the German troops, threatening them with revolvers. They said that they were going to make the people of Alost pay for the losses sustained by the Germans. At this hospital was an old woman of 80 completely transfixed by a bayonet.

Other crimes on non-combatants at Alost belong to the end of the month of September. Many witnesses speak to the murder of harmless civilians.

In Binnenstraat the Germans broke open the windows of the houses and threw fluid inside, and the houses burst into flames. Some of the inhabitants were burned to death.

The civilians were utilized on Saturday, the 26th September, as a screen. During their retreat the Germans fired twelve houses in Rue des Trois Clefs, and three civilians, whose names are given, were shot dead in that street after the firing of the houses. On the following day a heap of nine dead civilians was lying in the Rue de l'Argent.

Similar outrages occurred at Erpe, a village a few miles from Alost, about the same date. The village was deliberately burned. The houses were plundered and some civilians were murdered.

Civilians were apparently used as a screen at Erpe, but they were prisoners taken from Alost and not dwellers in that village.

From Germans' Own Diaries.

This disregard for the lives of civilians is strikingly shown in extracts from German soldiers' diaries, of which the following are representative examples:

Barthel, who was a Sergeant and standard bearer of the 2nd Company of the 1st Guards Regiment on Foot, and who during the campaign received the Iron Cross, says, under date 10th August, 1914: "A transport of 300 Belgians came through Duisburg in the morning. Of these, 80, including the Oberburgomaster, were shot according to martial law."

Matbern, of the 4th Company of Jägers, No. 11, from Marburg, states that at a village between Birnal and Dinant on Sunday, August 23d, the Pioneers and Infantry Regiment 178 were fired upon by the inhabitants. He gives no particulars beyond this. He continues:

"About 220 inhabitants were shot, and the village was burned. Artillery is continuously shooting—the village lies in a large ravine. Just now, 6 o'clock in the afternoon, the crossing of the Meuse begins near Dinant. All villages, chateaux, and houses are burned down during the night. It is a beautiful sight to see the fires all around us in the distance."

Bombardier Wetzel, of the 2nd Mounted Battery, 1st Kurhessian Field Artillery Regiment, No. 11, records an incident which happened in French territory near Lille on the 11th October: "We had no fight, but we caught about 20 men and shot them." By this time killing not in a fight would seem to have passed into a habit.

Diary No. 32 gives an accurate picture of what took place in Louvain: "What a sad scene—all the houses surrounding the railway station completely destroyed—only some foundation walls still standing. On the station square captured guns. At the end of a main street there is the Council Hall, which has been completely preserved with all its beautiful turrets; a sharp contrast: 180 inhabitants are stated to have been shot after they had dug their own graves."

The last and most important entry is that contained in Diary No. 19. This is a blue book interleaved with blotting paper, and contains no name and address; there is, however, one circumstance which makes it possible to speak with certainty as to the regiment of the writer. He gives the names of First Lieutenant von Oppen, Count Eulenburg, Captain von Roeder, First Lieutenant von Bock und Polach, Second Lieutenant Count Hardenberg, and Lieutenant Engelbrecht. A perusal of the Prussia Army List of June, 1914, shows that all these officers, with the exception of Lieutenant Engelbrecht, belonged to the First Regiment of Foot Guards. On the 24th August, 1914, the writer was in Ermeton. The exact translaiton of the extract, grim in its brevity, is as follows:

"24-8-14. We took about 1,000 prisoners; at least 500 were shot. The village was burned because inhabitants had also shot. Two civilians were shot at once."

Summary of Wrongful Acts.

We may now sum up and endeavor to explain the character and significance of the wrongful acts done by the German army in Belgium.

If a line is drawn on a map from the Belgian frontier to Liége and continued to Charleroi, and a second line drawn from Liége to Malines, a sort of figure resembling an irregular Y will be formed. It is along this Y that most of the systematic (as opposed to isolated) outrages were committed. If the period from August 4th to August 30th is taken it will be found to cover most of these organized outrages. Termonde and Alost extend, it is true, beyond the Y lines, and they belong to the month of September. Murder, rape, arson, and pillage began from the moment when the German army crossed the frontier. For the first fortnight of the war the towns and villages near Liége were the chief sufferers. From the 19th of August to the end of the month, outrages spread in the directions of Charleroi and Malines and reach their period of greatest intensity. There is a certain significance in the fact that the outrages round Liége coincide with the unexpected resistance of the Belgian army in that district, and that the slaughter which reigned from the 19th August to the end of the month is contemporaneous with the period when the Germany army's need for a quick passage through Belgium at all costs was deemed imperative.

Individual acts of brutality—ill-treatment of civilians, rape, plunder, and the like—were very widely committed. These are more numerous and more shocking than would be expected in warfare between civilized Powers, but they differ rather in extent than in kind from what has happened in previous though not recent wars.

In all wars many shocking and outrageous acts must be expected, for in every large army there must be a proportion of men of criminal instincts whose worst passions are unloosed by the immunity which the conditions of warfare afford. Drunkenness, moreover, may turn even a soldier who has no criminal habits into a brute, who may commit outrages at which he would himself be shocked in his sober moments, and there is evidence that intoxication was extremely prevalent among the German army, both in Belgium and in France, for plenty of wine was to be found in the villages and country houses which were pillaged. Many of the worst outrages appear to have been perpetrated by men under the influence of drink. Unfortunately little seems to have been done to repress this source of danger.

In the present war, however—and this is the gravest charge against the German army—the evidence shows that the killing of non-combatants was carried out to an extent for which no previous war between nations claiming to be civilized (for such cases as the atrocities perpetrated by the Turks on the Bulgarian Christians in 1876, and on the Armenian Christians in 1895 and 1896, do not belong to that category) furnishes any precedent. That this killing was done as part of a deliberate plan is clear from the facts hereinbefore set forth regarding Louvain, Aerschot, Dinant, and other towns. The killing was done under orders in each place. It began at a certain fixed date, and stopped (with some few exceptions) at another fixed date. Some of the officers who carried out the work did it reluctantly, and said they were obeying directions from their chiefs. The same remarks apply to the destruction of property. House burning was part of the program and villages, even large parts of a city, were given to the flames as part of the terrorizing policy.

Citizens of neutral States who visited Belgium in December and January report that the German authorities do not deny that non-combatants were systematically killed in large numbers during the first weeks of the invasion, and this, so far as we know, has never been officially denied. If it were denied, the flight and continued voluntary exile of thousands of Belgian refugees would go far to contradict a denial, for there

No Proof of Crimes by Belgians.

The German Government have, however, sought to justify their severities on the grounds of military necessity, and have excused them as retaliation for cases in which civilians fired on German troops. There may have been cases in which such firing occurred, but no proof has ever been given, or, to our knowledge, attempted to be given, of such cases, nor of the stories of shocking outrages perpetrated by Belgian men and women on German soldiers.

The inherent improbability of the German contention is shown by the fact that after the first few days of the invasion every possible precaution had been taken by the Belgian authorities, by way of placards and hand bills, to warn the civilian population not to intervene in hostilities. Throughout Belgium steps had been taken to secure the handing over of all firearms in the possession of civilians before the German army arrived. These steps were sometimes taken by the police and sometimes by the military authorities.

The invaders appear to have proceeded upon the theory that any chance shot coming from an unexpected place was fired by civilians. One favorite form of this allegation was that priests had fired from the church tower. In many instances the soldiers of the allied armies used church towers and private houses as cover for their operations. At Aerschot, where the Belgian soldiers were stationed in the church tower and fired upon the Germans as they advanced, it was at once alleged by the Germans when they entered the town, and with difficulty disproved, that the firing had come from civilians. Thus one elementary error creeps at once into the German argument, for they were likely to confound, and did in some instances certainly confound, legitimate military operations with the hostile intervention of civilians.

Troops belonging to the same army often fire by mistake upon each other. That the German army was no exception to this rule is proved not only by many Belgian witnesses but by the most irrefragable kind of evidence, the admission of German soldiers themselves recorded in their war diaries. Thus Otto Clepp, Second Company of the Reserve, says, under date of Aug. 22: "3 A. M. Two infantry regiments shot at each other—9 dead and 50 wounded—fault not yet ascertained." In this connection, the diaries of Kurt Hoffmann, and a soldier of the 112th Regiment, (diary No. 14) will repay study. In such cases the obvious interest of the soldier is to conceal his mistake, and a convenient method of doing so is to raise the cry of "francs-tireurs."

Atrocity Stories Encouraged.

Doubtless the German soldiers often believed that the civilian population, naturally hostile, had in fact attacked them. This attitude of mind may have been fostered by the German authorities themselves before the troops passed the frontier, and thereafter stories of alleged atrocities commited by Belgians upon Germans such as the myth referred to in one of the diaries relating to Liége, were circulated among the troops and roused their anger.

The diary of Barthel when still in Germany of Aug. 10 shows that he believed that the Oberburgomaster of Liége had murdered a Surgeon General. The fact is that no violence was inflicted on the inhabitants at Liége until the 10th, and no one who studies these pages can have any doubt that Liége would immediately have been given over to murder and destruction if any such incident had occurred.

Letters written to their homes which have been found on the bodies of dead Germans, bear witness, in a way that now sounds pathetic, to the kindness with which they were received by the civil population. Their evident surprise at this reception was due to the stories which had been dinned into their ears of soldiers with their eyes gouged out, treacherous murders, and poisoned food, stories which may have been encouraged by the higher military authorities in order to impress the mind of the troops as well as for the sake of justifying the measures which they took to terrify the civil population. If there is any truth in such stories, no attempt has been made to establish it. For instance, the Chancellor of the German Empire, in a communication made to the press on Sept. 2 and printed in the Nord Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung of Sept. 21, said as follows:

"Belgian girls gouged out the eyes of the German wounded. Officials of Belgian cities have invited our officers to dinner and shot and killed them across the table. Contrary to all international law, the whole civilian population of Belgium was called out, and after having at first shown friendliness, carried on in the rear of our troops terrible warfare with concealed weapons. Belgian women cut the thoats of soldiers whom they had quartered in their homes while they were sleeping."

No evidence whatever seems to have been adduced to prove these tales, and though there may be cases in which individual Belgians fired on the Germans, the statement that "the whole civilian population of Belgium was called out" is utterly opposed the fact.

Shooting Without Inquiry.

An invading army may be entitled to shoot at sight a civilian caught red-handed, or any one who though not caught red-handed is proved guilty on inquiry. But this was not the practice followed by the German troops. They do not seem to have made any inquiry. They seized the civilians of the village indiscriminately and killed them, or such as they selected from among them, without the least regard to guilt or innocence. The mere cry "Civilisten haben geschossen" was enough to hand over a whole village or district and even outlying places to ruthless slaughter.

We gladly record the instances where the evidence shows that humanity had not wholly disappeared from some members of the German army, and that they realized that the responsible heads of that organization were employing them, not in war but in butchery: "I am merely executing orders, and I should be shot if I did not execute them," said an officer to a witness at Louvain. At Brussels another officer says: "I have not done one hundredth part of what we have been ordered to do by the high German military authorities."

As we have already observed, it would be unjust to charge upon the German army generally acts of cruelty which, whether due to drunkenness or not, were done by men of brutal instincts and unbridled passions. Such crimes were sometimes punished by the officers. They were in some cases offset by acts of humanity and kindliness. But when an army is directed or permitted to kill noncombatants on a large scale the ferocity of the worst natures springs into fuller life, and both lust and the thirst of blood become more widespread and more formidable. Had less license been allowed to the soldiers, and had they not been set to work to slaughter civilians, there would have been fewer of those painful cases in which a depraved and morbid cruelty appears.

Two classes of murders in particular require special mention, because one of them is almost new, and the other altogether unprecedented. The former is the seizure of peaceful citizens as so-called hostages to be kept as a pledge for the conduct of the civil population, or as a means to secure some military advantage, or to compel the payment of a contribution, the hostages being shot if the condition imposed by the arbitrary will of the invader is not fulfilled. Such hostage taking, with the penalty of death attached, has now and then happened, the most notable case being the shooting of the Archbishop of Paris and some of his clergy by the Communards of Paris in 1871, but it is opposed both to the rules of war and to every principle of justice and humanity. The latter kind of murder is the killing of the innocent inhabitants of a village because shots have been fired, or are alleged to have been fired, on the troops by some one in the village. For this practice no previous example and no justification have been or can be pleaded. Soldiers suppressing an insurrection may have sometimes slain civilians mingled with insurgents, and Napoleon's forces in Spain are said to have now and then killed promiscuously when trying to clear guerillas out of a village. But in Belgium large bodies of men, sometimes including the burgomaster and the priest, were seized, marched by officers to a spot chosen for the purpose, and there shot in cold blood, without any attempt at trial or even inquiry, under the pretence of inflicting punishment upon the village, though these unhappy victims were not even charged with having themselves committed any wrongful act, and though, in some cases at least, the village authorities had done all in their power to prevent any molestation of the invading force. Such acts are no part of war, for innocence is entitled to respect even in war. They are mere murders, just as the drowning of the innocent passengers and crews on a merchant ship is murder and not an act of war.

Committee Amazed by Discoveries.

That these acts should have been perpetrated on the peaceful population of an unoffending country which was not at war with its invaders but merely defending its own neutrality, guaranteed by the invading power, may excite amazement and even incredulity. It was with amazement and almost with incredulity that the committee first read the depositions relating to such acts. But when the evidence regarding Liége was followed by that regarding Aerschot, Louvain, Andenne, Dinant, and the other towns and villages, the cumulative effect of such a mass of concurrent testimony became irresistible, and we were driven to the conclusion that the things described had really happened. The question then arose how they could have happened. Not from mere military license, for the discipline of the German army is proverbially stringent, and its obedience implicit. Not from any special ferocity of the troops, for whoever has traveled among the German peasantry knows that they are as kindly and good-natured as any people in Europe, and those who can recall the war of 1870 will remember that no charges resembling those proved by these depositions were then established. The excesses recently committed in Belgium were, moreover, too widespread and too uniform in their character to be mere sporadic outbursts of passion or rapacity.

The explanation seems to be that these excesses were committed—in some cases orered, in others allowed—on a system and in pursuance of a set purpose. That purpose was to strike terror into the civil population and dishearten the Belgian troops, so as to crush down resistance and extinguish the very spirit of self-defence. The pretext that civilians had fired upon the invading troops was used to justify not merely the shooting of individual francs-tireurs, but the murder of large numbers of innocent civilians, an act absolutely forbidden by the rules of civilized warfare.

In the minds of Prussian officers war seems to have become a sort of sacred mission, one of the highest functions of the omnipotent State, which is itself as much an army as a State. Ordinary morality and the ordinary sentiment of pity vanish in its presence, superseded by a new standard which justifies to the soldier every means that can conduce to success, however shocking to a natural sense of justice and humanity, however revolting to his own feelings. The spirit of war is deified. Obedience to the State and its War Lord leaves no room for any other duty or feeling. Cruelty becomes legitimate when it promises victory. Proclaimed by the heads of the army, this doctrine would seem to have permeated the officers and affected even the private soldiers, leading them to justify the killing of noncombatants as an act of war, and so accustoming them to slaughter that even women and children become at last the victims. It cannot be supposed to be a national doctrine, for it neither springs from nor reflects the mind and feelings of the German people as they have heretofore been known to other nations. It is a specifically military doctrine, the outcome of a theory held by a ruling caste who had brooded and thought, written and talked and dreamed about war until they have fallen under its obsession and been hypnotized by its spirit.

The doctrine is plainly set forth in the German Official Monograph on the usages of war on land, issued under the direction of the German Staff. This book is pervaded throughout by the view that whatever military needs suggest becomes thereby lawful, and upon this principle, as the diaries show, the German officers acted.

If this explanation be the true one the mystery is solved, and that which seemed scarcely credible becomes more intelligible though not less pernicious. This is not the only case that history records in which a false theory, disguising itself as loyalty to a State or to a Church, has perverted the conception of duty and become a source of danger to the world.

PART II.

Breaches of Usages of War.

Having thus narrated the offences committed in Belgium, which it has been proper to consider as a whole, we now turn to another branch of the subject, the breaches of the usages of war which appear in the conduct of the German army generally.

This branch has been considered under the following heads:

First—The treatment of noncombatants, whether in Belgium or in France, including—

(a) the killing of noncombatants in France;

(b) the treatment of women and children;

(c) the using of innocent noncombatants as a screen or shield in the conduct of military operations;

(d) looting, burning, and the wanton destruction of property.

Secondly—Offenses, committed in the course of ordinary military operations, which violate the usages of war and the provisions of The Hague Convention.

This division includes—

(a) killing the wounded or prisoners,

(b) firing on hospitals or on the Red Cross ambulances and stretcher bearers;

(c) abuse of the Red Cross or of the white flag.

Killing of Noncombatants.

The killing of civilians in Belgium has been already described sufficiently. Outrages on the civilian population of the invaded districts, the burning of villages, the shooting of innocent inhabitants, and the taking of hostages, pillage and destruction continued as the German armies passed into France. The diary of the Saxon officer above referred to describes acts of this kind committed by the German soldiers in advancing to the Aisne at the end of August and after they had passed the French frontier, as well as when they were in Belgian territory.

A proclamation (a specimen of which was produced to the committee) issued at Rheims, and placarded over the town, affords a clear illustration of the methods adopted by the German higher command. The population of Rheims is warned that on the slightest disturbance part or the whole of the city will be burned to the ground and all the hostages taken from the city (a long list of whom is given in the proclamation) immediately shot.

The evidence, however, submitted to the committee with regard to the conduct of the Germany army in France is not nearly so full as that with regard to Belgium. There is no body of civilian refugees in England, and the French witnesses have generally laid their evidence before their own Government. The evidence forwarded to us consists principally of the statements of British officers and soldiers who took part in the retreat after the battle of Mons and in the subsequent advance, following the Germans from the Marne. The area covered is relatively small, and it is from French reports that any complete account of what occurred in the invaded districts in France as a whole must be obtained.

Naturally soldiers in a foreign country, with which they were unacquainted, cannot be expected always to give accurately the names of villages through which they passed on their marches, but this does not prevent their evidence from being definite as to what they actually saw in the farms and houses where the German troops had recently been. Many shocking outrages are recorded. Three examples here may suffice, others are given in the appendix. A Sergeant who had been through the retreat from Mons, and then taken part in the advance from the Marne, and who had been engaged in driving out some German troops from a village, states that his troop halted outside a bakery just inside the village. It was a private house where baking was done, "not like our bakeries here." Two or three women were standing at the door. The women motioned them to come into the house, as did all three civilian Frenchmen who were there. They took them into a garden at the back of the house. At the end of the garden was the bakery. They saw two old men—between 60 and 70 years of age—and one old woman lying close to each other in the garden. All three had the scalps cut right through and the brains were hanging out. They were still bleeding. Apparently they had only just been killed. The three French civilians belonged to this same house. One of them spoke a few words of English. He gave them to understand that these three had been killed by the Germans because they had refused to bake bread for them.

Torturing a Captive.

Another witness states that two German soldiers took hold of a young civilian named D. and bound his hands behind his back, and struck him in the face with their fists. They then tied his hands in front and fastened the cord to the tail of the horse. The horse dragged him for about 50 yards and then the Germans loosened his hands and left him. The whole of his face was cut and torn and his arms and legs were bruised. On the following day one of his sisters, whose husband was a soldier, came to their house with her four children. His brother, who was also married and who lived in a village near Valenciennes, went to fetch the bread for his sister. On the way back to their house he met a patrol of Uhlans, who took him to the market place at Valenciennes and then shot him. About 12 other civilians were also shot in the market place. The Uhlans then burned 19 houses in the village, and afterward burned the corpses of the civilians, including that of his brother. His father and his uncle afterward went to see the dead body of his brother, but the German soldiers refused to allow them to pass.

A lance-corporal in the Rifles, who was on patrol duty with five privates during the retirement of the Germans after the Marne, states that they entered a house in a small village and took ten Uhlans prisoners and then searched the house and found two women and two children. One was dead, but the body not yet cold. The left arm had been cut off just below the elbow. The floor was covered with blood. The woman's clothing was disarranged. The other woman was alive but unconscious. Her right leg had been cut off above the knee. There were two little children, a boy about 4 or 5 and a girl of about 6 or 7. The boy's left hand was cut off at the wrist and the girl's right hand at the same place. They were both quite dead. The same witness states that he saw several women and children lying dead in various other places, but says he could not say whether this might not have been accidentally caused in legitimate fighting.

The evidence before us proves that, in the parts of France referred to, murder of unoffending civilians and other acts of cruelty, including aggravated cases of rape, carried out under threat of death, and sometimes actually followed by murder of the victim, were committed by some of the German troops.

Treatment of Women and Children.

The evidence shows that the German authorities, when carrying out a policy of systematic arson and plunder in selected districts, usually drew some distinction between the adult male population on the one hand and the women and children on the other. It was a frequent practice to set apart the adult males of the condemned district with a view to the execution of a suitable number—preferably of the younger and more vigorous—and to reserve the women and children for milder treatment. The depositions, however, present many instances of calculated cruelty, often going the length of murder, toward the women and children of the condemned area. We have already referred to the case of Aerschot, where the women and children were herded in a church which had recently been used as a stable, detained for 48 hours with no food other than coarse bread, and denied the common decencies of life. At Dinant 60 women and children were confined in the cellar of a convent from Sunday morning till the following Friday (August 28th), sleeping on the ground, for there were no beds, with nothing to drink during the whole period, and given no food until Wednesday, "when somebody threw into the cellar two sticks of macaroni and a carrot for each prisoner."

In other cases the women and children were marched for long distances along roads, (e. g., march of women from Louvain to Tirlemont, 28th August), the laggards pricked on by the attendant Uhlans. A lady complains of having been brutally kicked by privates. Others were struck with the butt end of rifles. At Louvain, at Liége, at Aerschot, at Malines, at Montigny, at Andenne, and elsewhere, there is evidence that the troops were not restrained from drunkenness, and drunken soldiers cannot be trusted to observe the rules or decencies of war, least of all when they are called upon to execute a preordained plan of arson and pillage. From the very first women were not safe. At Liége women and children were chased about the streets by soldiers. A witness gives a story, very circumstantial in its details, of how women were publicly raped in the market-place of the city, five young German officers assisting. At Aerschot men and women were deliberately shot when coming out of burning houses. At Liége, Louvain, Sempst, and Malines women were burned to death, either because they were surprised and stupefied by the fumes of the conflagration, or because they were prevented from escaping by German soldiers. Witnesses recount how a great crowd of men, women, and children from Aerschot were marched to Louvain, and then suddenly exposed to a fire from a mitrailleuse and rifles.

"We were all placed," recounts a sufferer, "in Station Street, Louvain, and the German soldiers fired on us. I saw the corpses of some women in the street. I fell down and a woman who had been shot fell on top of me."

Women and children suddenly turned out into the streets, and compelled to witness the destruction by fire of their homes, provided a sad spectacle to such as were sober enough to see. A humane German officer, witnessing the ruin of Aerschot, exclaims in disgust: "I am a father myself, and I cannot bear this. It is not war, but butchery." Officers, as well as men, succumbed to the temptation of drink, with results which may be illustrated by an incident which occurred at Campenhout. In this village there was a certain well-to-do merchant (name given), who had a good cellar of champagne. On the afternoon of the 14th or 15th August, three German cavalry officers entered the house and demanded champagne. Having drunk ten bottles and invited five or six officers and three or four private soldiers to join them, they continued their carouse, and then called for the master and mistress of the house:

Drunken Officer Shot Woman.

"Immediately my mistress came in," says the valet de chambre, "one of the officers who was sitting on the floor, got up, and, putting a revolver to my mistress's temple, shot her dead. The officer was obviously drunk. The other officers continued to drink and sing, and they did not pay great attention to the killing of my mistress. The officer who shot my mistress then told my master to dig a grave and bury my mistress. My master and the officer went into the garden, the officer threatening my master with a pistol. My master was then forced to dig the grave, and to bury the body of my mistress in it. I cannot say for what reason they killed my mistress. The officer who did it was singing all the time."

In the evidence before us there are cases tending to show that aggravated crimes against women were sometimes severely punished. One witness reports that a young girl who was being pursued by a drunken soldier at Louvain appealed to a German officer, and that the offender was then and there shot; another describes how an officer of the 32nd Regiment of the Line was led out to execution for the violation of two young girls, but reprieved at the request or with the consent of the girls' mother. These instances are sufficient to show that the maltreatment of women was no part of the military scheme of the invaders, however much it may appear to have been the inevitable result of the system of terror deliberately adopted in certain regions. Indeed, so much is avowed: "I asked the commander why we had been spared," says a lady in Louvain, who deposes to having suffered much brutal treatment during the sack. He said, "We will not hurt you any more. Stay in Louvain. All is finished." It was Saturday, August 29th, and the reign of terror was over.

Apart from the crimes committed in special areas and belonging to a scheme of systematic reprisals for the alleged shooting by civilians, there is evidence of offenses committed against women and children by individual soldiers, or by small groups of soldiers, both in the advance through Belgium and France as in the retreat from the Marne. Indeed, the discipline appears to have been loose during the retreat, and there is evidence as to the burning of villages, and the murder and violation of their female inhabitants during this episode of the war.

In this tale of horrors hideous forms of mutilation occur with some frequency in the depositions, two of which may be connected in some instances with a perverted form of sexual instinct.

Cutting of Hands.

A third form of mutilation, the cutting of one or both hands, is frequently said to have taken place. In some cases where this form of mutilation is alleged to have occurred it may be the consequence of a cavalry charge up a village street, hacking and slashing at everything in the way; in others the victim may possibly have held a weapon, in others the motive may have been the theft of rings.

We find many well-established cases of the slaughter (often accompanied by mutilation) of whole families, including not infrequently that of quite small children. In two cases it seems to be clear that preparations were made to burn a family alive. These crimes were committed over a period of many weeks and simultaneously in many places, and the authorities must have known or ought to have known that cruelties of this character were being perpetrated, nor can any one doubt that they could have been stopped by swift and decisive action on the part of the heads of the German Army.

The use of women and even children as a screen for the protection of the German troops is referred to in a later part of this report. From the number of troops concerned, it must have been commanded or acquiesced in by officers, and in some cases the presence and connivance of officers is proved.

The cases of violation, sometimes under threat of death, are numerous and clearly proved. We referred here to comparatively few out of the many that have been placed in the appendix, because the circumstances are in most instances much the same. They were often accompanied with cruelty, and the slaughter of women after violation is more than once credibly attested.

It is quite possible that in some cases where the body of a Belgian or a French woman is reported as lying in the roadside pierced with bayonet wounds or hanging naked from a tree, or else as lying gashed and mutilated in a cottage kitchen or bedroom, the woman in question gave some provocation. She may by act or word have irritated her assailant, and in certain instances evidence has been supplied both as to the provocation offered and as to the retribution inflicted:

(1) "Just before we got to Melen," says a witness, who had fallen into the hands of the Germans on August 5th, "I saw a woman with a child in her arms standing on the side of the road on our left-hand side watching the soldiers go by. Her name was G——, aged about 63, and a neighbor of mine. The officer asked the woman for some water in good French. She went inside her son's cottage to get some and brought it immediately he had stopped. The officer went into the cottage garden and drank the water. The woman then said, when she saw the prisoners, 'Instead of giving you water you deserve to be shot.' The officer shouted to us, 'March!' We went on, and immediately I saw the officer draw his revolver and shoot the woman and child. One shot killed both."

(2) Two old men and one old woman refused to bake bread for the Germans. They are butchered. (See above p. 46.)

(3) 23d August. I went with two friends (names given) to see what we could see. About three hours out of Malines we were taken prisoners by a German patrol—an officer and six men—and marched off into a little wood of saplings, where there was a house. The officer spoke Flemish. He knocked at the door; the peasant did not come. The officer ordered the soldiers to break down the door, which two of them did. The peasant came and asked what they were doing. The officer said he did not come quickly enough, and that they had "trained up" plenty of others. His hands were tied behind his back, and he was shot at once without a moment's delay. The wife came out with a little sucking child. She put the child down and sprang at the Germans like a lioness. She clawed their faces. One of the Germans took a rifle and struck her a tremendous blow with the butt on the head. Another took his bayonet and fixed it and thrust it through the child. He then put his rifle on his shoulder with the child up it, its little arms stretched out once or twice. The officers ordered the houses to be set on fire, and straw was obtained, and it was done. The man and his wife and the child were thrown on the top of the straw. There were about 40 other peasant prisoners there also, and the officer said: "I am doing this as a lesson and example to you. When a German tells you to do something next time you must move more quickly." The regiment of Germans was a regiment of Hussars, with cross-bones and a death's head on the cap.

Can any one think that such acts as these, committed by women in the circumstances created by the invasion of Belgium, were deserving of the extreme form of vengeance attested by these and other depositions?

Old Women and Children.

In considering the question of provocation it is pertinent to take into account the numerous cases in which old women and very small children have been shot, bayoneted, and even mutilated. Whatever excuse may be offered by the Germans for the killing of grown-up women, there can be no possible defense for the murder of children, and if it can be shown that infants and small children were not infrequently bayoneted and shot it is a fair inference that many of the offenses against women require no explanation more recondite than the unbridled violence of brutal or drunken criminals.

It is clearly shown that many offenses were committed against infants and quite young children. On one occasion children were even roped together and used as a military screen against the enemy, on another three soldiers went into action carrying small children to protect themselves from flank fire. A shocking case of the murder of a baby by a drunken soldier at Malines is thus recorded by one eye-witness and confirmed by another:

"One day when the Germans were not actually bombarding the town I left my house to go to my mother's house in High Street. My husband was with me. I saw eight German soldiers, and they were drunk. They were singing and making a lot of noise and dancing about. As the German soldiers came along the street I saw a small child, whether boy or girl I could not see, come out of a house. The child was about two years of age. The child came into the middle of the street so as to be in the way of the soldiers. The soldiers were walking in twos. The first line of two passed the child; one of the second line, the man on the left, stepped aside and drove his bayonet with both hands into the child's stomach, lifting the child into the air on his bayonet and carrying it away on his bayonet, he and his comrades still singing. The child screamed when the soldier struck it wit hhis bayonet, but not afterward."

Child Life Not Important.

These, no doubt, were for the most part the acts of drunken soldiers, but an incident has been recorded which discloses the fact that even sober and highly placed officers were not always disposed to place a high value on child life. Thus the General, wishing to be conducted to the Town Hall at Lebbeke, remarked in French to his guide, who was accompanied by a small boy: "If you do not show me the right way I will shoot you and your boy." There was no need to carry the threat into execution, but that the threat should have been made is significant.

We cannot tell whether these acts of cruelty to children were part of the scheme for inducing submission by inspiring terror. In Louvain, where the system of terrorizing was carried to the furthest limit, outrages on children were uncommon. The same, however, cannot be said of some of the smaller villages which were subjected to the system. In Hofstade and Sempst, in Haecht, Rotselaer, and Wespelaer many children were murdered. Nor can it be said of the village of Tamines, where three small children (whose names are given by an eyewitness of the crime) were slaughtered on the green for no apparent motive. It is difficult to imagine the motives which may have prompted such acts. Whether or no Belgian civilians fired on German soldiers, young children at any rate did not fire. The number and character of these murders constitute the most distressing feature connected with the conduct of the war so far as it is revealed in the depositions submitted to the committee.

Civilians as Screens.

We have before us a considerable body of evidence with reference to the practice of the Germans of using civilians and sometimes military prisoners as screens from behind which they could fire upon the Belgian troops in the hope that the Belgians would not return the fire for fear of killing and wounding their own fellow-countrymen.

In some cases this evidence refers to places where fighting was actually going on in the streets of a town or village, and to these cases we attach little importance. It might well happen when terrified civilians were rushing about to seek safety that groups of them might be used as a screen by either side of the combatants without any intention of inhumanity or of any breach of the rules of civilized warfare. But setting aside these doubtful cases, there remains evidence which satisfies us that on so many occasions as to justify its being described as a practice, the German soldiers, under the eyes and by the direction of their officers, were guilty of this act.

Thus, for instance, outside Fort Fléron, near Liége, men and children were marched in front of the Germans to prevent the Belgian soldiers from firing.

The progress of the Germans through Mons was marked by many incidents of this character. Thus, on the 22d of August, half a dozen Belgian colliers returning from work were marching in front of some German troops who were pursuing the English, and in the opinion of the witnesses they must have been placed there intentionally. An English officer describes how he caused a barricade to be erected in a main thoroughfare leading out of Mons, when the Germans in order to reach a cross road in the rear, fetched civilians out of the houses on each side of the main road and compelled them to hold up white flags and act as cover.

Another British officer who saw this incident is convinced that the Germans were acting deliberately for the purpose of protecting themselves from the fire of the British troops. Apart from this protection, the Germans could not have advanced, as the street was straight and commanded by the British rifle fire at a range of 700 or 800 yards. Several British soldiers also speak of this incident, and their story is confirmed by a Flemish witness in a side street.

On the 24th of August men, women, and children were actually pushed into the front of the German position outside Mons. The witness speaks of 16 to 20 women, about a dozen children, and half a dozen men being there.

Seven or eight women and five or six very young children were utilized in this way by some Uhlans between Landrécies and Guise.

A Belgian soldier saw an incident of this character during the retreat from Namur.

At the battle of Malines 60 or 80 Belgian civilians, among who were some women, were driven before the German troops. Another witness saw a similar incident near Malines, but a much larger number of civilians was involved, and a priest was in front with a white flag.

In another instance, related by a Belgian soldier, the civilians were tied by the wrists in groups.

At Eppeghem, where the Germans were driven back by the Belgian sortie from Antwerp, civilians were used as a cover for the German retreat.

Near Malines, early in September, about 10 children, roped together, were driven in front of a German force.

At Londerzeel 30 or 40 civilians, men, women, and children, were placed at the head of a German column.

One witness from Termonde was made to stand in front of the Germans, together with others, all with their hands above their heads. Those who allowed their hands to drop were at once prodded with the bayonet. Again at Termonde, about September the 10th, a number of civilians were shot by the Belgian soldiers who were compelled to fire at the Germans, taking the risk of killing their own countrymen.

At Tournai 400 Belgian civilians, men, women, and children, were placed in front of the Germans, who had then engaged the French.

The operations outside Antwerp were not free from incidents of this character. Near Willebroeck some civilians, including a number of children, a woman, and one old man, were driven in front of the German troops. German officers were present, and one woman who refused to advance was stabbed twice with the bayonet, and a little child who ran up to her as she fell had half its head blown away by a shot from a rifle.

Other incidents of the same kind are reported from Nazareth and Ypres. The British troops were compelled to fire, in some cases at the risk of killing civilians.

At Ypres the Germans drove women in front of them by pricking them with bayonets. The wounds were afterward seen by the witness.

Looting, Burning, Destruction.

There was an overwhelming mass of evidence of the deliberate destruction of private property by the German soldiers. The destruction in most cases was effected by fire, and the German troops, as will be sen from earlier passages in the report, had been provided beforehand with appliances for rapidly setting fire to houses. Among the appliances enumerated by witnesses are syringes for squirting petrol, guns for throwing small inflammable bombs, and small pellets made of inflammable material. Specimens of the last-mentioned have been shown to members of the committee. Besides burning houses the Germans frequently smashed furniture and pictures; they also broke in doors and windows. Frequently, too, they defiled houses by relieving the wants of nature upon the floor. They also appear to have perpetrated the same vileness upon piled up heaps of provisions so as to destroy what they could not themselves consume. They also on numerous occasions threw corpses into wells, or left in them the bodies of persons murdered by drowning.

In addition to these acts of destruction, the German troops both in Belgium and France are proved to have been guilty of persistent looting. In the majority of cases the looting took place from houses, but there is also evidence that German soldiers and even officers robbed their prisoners, both civil and military, of sums of money and other portable possessions. It was apparently well known throughout the German Army that towns and villages would be burned whenever it appeared that any civilians had fired upon German troops, and there is reason to suspect that this known intention of the German military authorities in some cases explains the sequence of events which led up to the burning and sacking of a town or village. The soldiers, knowing that they would have an opportunity of plunder if the place was condemned, had a motive for arranging some incident which would provide the necessary excuse for condemnation. More than one witness alleges that shots coming from the window of a house were fired by German soldiers who had forced their way into the house for the purpose of thus creating an alarm. It is also alleged that German soldiers on some occasions merely fired their rifles in the air in a side street and then reported to their officers that they had been fired at. On the report that firing had taken place orders were given for wholesale destruction, and houses were destroyed in streets and districts where there was no allegation that firing had taken place, as well as in those where the charge arose. That the destruction could have been limited is proved by the care taken to preserve particular houses whose occupants had made themselves in one way or another agreeable to the conquerors. These houses were marked in chalk ordering them to be spared, and spared they were.

Wanton Destruction by Fire.

The above statements have reference to the burning of towns and villages. In addition, the German troops in numerous instances have set fire to farmhouses and farm buildings. Here, however, the plea of military necessity can more safely be alleged. A farmhouse may afford convenient shelter to an enemy, and where such use is probable it may be urged that the destruction of the buildings is justifiable. It is clearly, however, the duty of the soldiers who destroy the buildings to give reasonable warning to the occupants so that they may escape. Doubtless this was in many cases done by the German commanders, but there is testimony that in some cases the burning of the farmhouse was accompanied by the murder of the inhabitants.

The same fact stands out clearly in the more extensive burning of houses in towns and villages. In some cases, indeed, as a prelude to the burning, inhabitants were cleared out of their houses and driven along the streets, often with much accompanying brutality—some to a place of execution, others to prolonged detention in a church or other public buildings. In other cases witnesses assert that they saw German soldiers forcing back into the flames men, women, and children, who were trying to escape from the burning houses. There is also evidence that soldiers deliberately shot down civilians as they fled from the fire.

The general conclusion is that the burning and destruction of property which took place was only in a very small minority of cases justified by military necessity, and that even then the destruction was seldom accompanied by that care for the lives of noncombatants which has hitherto been expected from a military commander belonging to a civilized nation. On the contrary, it is plain that in many cases German officers and soldiers deliberately added to the sufferings of the unfortunate people whose property they were destroying.

Killing Wounded Prisoners.

In dealing with the treatment of the wounded and of prisoners and the cases in which the former appear to have been killed when helpless, and the latter at, or after, the moment of capture, we are met by some peculiar difficulties, because such acts may not in all cases be deliberate and cold-blooded violations of the usages of war. Soldiers who are advancing over a spot where the wounded have fallen may conceivably think that some of those lying prostrate are shamming dead, or, at any rate, are so slightly wounded as to be able to attack, or to fire from behind when the advancing force has passed, and thus they may be led into killing those whom they would otherwise have spared. There will also be instances in which men, intoxicated with the frenzy of battle, slay even those whom, on reflection, they might have seen to be incapable of further harming them. The same kind of fury may vent itself on persons who are already surrendering; and even a soldier who is usually self-controlled or humane, may, in the heat of the moment, go on killing, especially in a general melée, those who were offering to surrender. This is most likely to happen when such a soldier has been incensed by an act of treachery or is stirred to revenge by the death of a comrade to whom he is attached. Some cases of this kind appear in the evidence. Such things happen in all wars as isolated instances, and the circumstances may be pleaded in extenuation of acts otherwise shocking. We have made due allowance for these considerations, and have rejected those cases in which there is a reasonable doubt as to whether those who killed the wounded knew that the latter were completely disabled. Nevertheless, after making all allowances, there remain certain instances in which it is clear that quarter was refused to persons desiring to surrender when it ought to have been given, or that persons already so wounded as to be incapable of fighting further were wantonly shot or bayoneted.

The cases to which references are given all present features generally similar, and in several of them men who had been left wounded in the trenches when a trench was carried by the enemy were found, when their comrades subsequently retook the trench, to have been slaughtered, although evidently helpless, or else they would have escaped with the rest of the retreating force. For instance, a witness says: "About Sept. 20 our regiment took part in an engagement with the Germans. After we had retired into our trenches, a few minutes after we got back into them the Germans retired into their trenches. The distance between the trenches of the opposing forces was about 400 yards. I should say about 50 or 60 of our men had been left lying on the field from our trenches. After we got back to them I distinctly saw German soldiers come out of their trenches, go over the spots where our men were lying, and bayonet them. Some of our men were lying nearly half way between the trenches." Another says: "The Germans advanced over the trenches of the headquarters trench, where I had been on guard for three days. When the Germans reached our wounded I saw their officer using his sword to cut them down." Another witness says: "Outside Ypres we were in trenches and were attacked, and had to retire until reinforced by other companies of the Royal Fusiliers. Then we took the trenches and found the wounded, between 20 and 30, lying in the trenches with bayonet wounds, and some shot. Most of them, say three-quarters, had their throats cut."

Killed Under White Flag.

In one case, given very circumstantially, a witness tells how a party of wounded British soldiers were left in a chalk pit, all very badly hurt and quite unable to make resistance. One of them, an officer, held up his handkerchief as a white flag, and this "attracted the attention of a party of about eight Germans. The Germans came to the edge of the pit. It was getting dusk, but the light was still good, and everything clearly discernible. One of them, who appeared to be carrying no arms, and who, at any rate, had no rifle, came a few feet down the slope into the chalk pit, within eight or ten yards of some of the wounded men." He looked at the men, laughed, and said something in German to the Germans who were waiting on the edge of the pit. Immediately one of them fired at the officer, then three of four of these ten soldiers were shot, then another officer, and the witness, and the rest of them. "After an interval of some time I sat up and found that I was the only man of the ten who were living when the Germans came into the pit remaining alive, and that all the rest were dead."

Another witness describes a painful case in which five soldiers, two Belgians and three French, were tied to trees by German soldiers apparently drunk, who stuck knives in their faces, pricked them with their bayonets, and ultimately shot them.

We have no evidence to show whether and in what cases orders proceeded from the officer in command to give no quarter, but there are some instances in which persons obviously desiring to surrender were nevertheless killed.

Firing on Hospitals or Ambulances.

This subject may conveniently be divided into three sub-divisions, namely, firing on—

(2) Ambulances.

(3) Stretcher bearers.

Under the first and second categories there is obvious difficulty in proving intention, especially under the conditions of modern long-range artillery fire. A commanding officer's duty is to give strict orders to respect hospitals, ambulances, &c., and also to place Red Cross units as far away as possible from any legitimate line of fire. But with all care some accidents must happen, and many reported cases will be ambiguous. At the same time when military observers have formed a distinct opinion that buildings and persons under the recognizable protection of the Red Cross were wilfully fired upon, such opinions cannot be disregarded.

Between 30 and 40 of the depositions submitted related to this offense. This number does not in itself seem so great as to be inconsistent with the possibility of accident.

In one case a Red Cross depot was shelled on most days throughout the week. This is hardly reconcilable with the enemy's gunners having taken any care to avoid it.

There are other cases of conspicuous hospitals being shelled, in the witnesses' opinion, purposely.

geant Major, makes a suggestion which appears plausible, namely, that the German gunners use any conspicuous building as a mark to verify their ranges rather than for the purpose of destruction. It would be quite according to the modern system of what German writers call Kriegsräson to hold that the convenience of range-finding is a sufficient military necessity to justify disregarding any immunity conferred on a building by the Red Cross or otherwise. In any case, artillery fire on a hospital at such a moderate range as about 1,000 yards can hardly be thought accidental.

(2) As to firing on ambulances, the evidence is more explicit.

In one case the witness is quite clear that the ambulances were aimed at.

In another case of firing at an ambulance train the range was quite short.

In another a Belgian Red Cross party is stated to have been ambushed.

On the whole we do not find proof of a general or systematic firing on hospitals or ambulances; but it is not possible to believe that much care was taken to avoid this.

(3) As to firing on stretcher-bearers in the course of trench warfare, the testimony is abundant, and the facts do not seem explicable by accident. It may be that sometimes the bearers were suspected of seeing too much; and it is plain from the general military policy of the German armies that very slight suspicion would be acted on in case of doubt.

Abuse of the Red Cross.

There are several accounts of fire being opened, sometimes at very short range, by machine guns which had been disguised in a German Red Cross ambulance or car; this was aggravated in one case near Tirlemont by the German soldiers wearing Belgian uniform.

Witness speaks also of a stretcher party with the Red Cross being used to cover an attack, and of a German Red Cross man working a machine gun.

There is also a well-attested case of a Red Cross motor car being used to carry ammunition under command of officers.

Unless all these statements are willfully false, which the committee sees no reason to believe, these acts must have been deliberate, and it does not seem possible that a Red Cross car could be equipped with a machine gun by soldiers acting without orders. There is also one case of firing from a cottage where the Red Cross flag was flying, and this could not be accidental.

On the whole, there is distinct evidence of the Red Cross having been deliberately misused for offensive purposes, and seemingly under orders, on some, though not many, occasions.

Abuse of the White Flag.

Cases of this kind are numerous. It is possible that a small group of men may show a white flag without authority from any proper officer, in which case their action is, of course, not binding on the rest of the platoon or other unit. But this will not apply to the case of a whole unit advancing as if to surrender, or letting the other side advance to receive the pretended surrender, and then opening fire. Under this head we find many depositions by British soldiers and several by officers.

In some cases the firing was from a machine gun brought up under cover of the white flag.

The depositions taken by Professor Morgan in France strongly corroborate the evidence collected in this country.

The case numbered h 70 may be noted as very clearly stated. The Germans, who had "put up a white flag on a lance and ceased fire," and thereby induced a company to advance in order to take them prisoners, "dropped the white flag and opened fire at a distance of 100 yards." This was near Nesle, on Sept. 6, 1914. It seems clearly proved that in some divisions at least of the German army this practice is very common. The incidents as reported cannot be explained by unauthorized surrenders of small groups.

There is, in our opinion, sufficient evidence that these offenses have been frequent, deliberate, and in many cases committed by whole units under orders. All the acts mentioned in this part of the report are in contravention of The Hague Convention, signed by the Great Powers, including France, Germany, Great Britain, and the United States, in 1907, as may be seen by a reference to Appendix D, in which the provisions of that convention relating to the conduct of war on land are set forth.

Committee's Conclusions.

From the foregoing pages it will be seen that the committee have come to a definite conclusion upon each of the heads under which the evidence has been classified.

It is proved—

(i) That there were in many parts of Belgium deliberate and systematically organized massacres of the civil population, accompanied by many isolated murders and other outrages.

(ii) That in the conduct of the war generally innocent civilians, both men and women, were murdered in large numbers, women violated, and children murdered.

(iii) That looting, house burning, and the wanton destruction of property were ordered and countenanced by the officers of the German Army, that elaborate provision had been made for systematic incendiarism at the very outbreak of the war, and that the burnings and destruction were frequent where no military necessity could be alleged, being indeed part of a system of general terrorization.

(iv) That the rules and usages of war were frequently broken, particularly by the using of civilians, including women and children, as a shield for advancing forces exposed to fire, to a less degree by killing the wounded and prisoners, and in the frequent abuse of the Red Cross and the white flag.

Sensible as they are of the gravity of these conclusions, the committee conceive that they would be doing less than their duty if they failed to record them as fully established by the evidence. Murder, lust, and pillage prevailed over many parts of Belgium on a scale unparalleled in any war between civilized nations during the last three centuries.

Our function is ended when we have stated what the evidence establishes, but we may be permitted to express our belief that these disclosures will not have been made in vain if they touch and rouse the conscience of mankind, and we venture to hope that as soon as the present war is over, the nations of the world in council will consider what means can be provided and sanctions devised to prevent the recurrence of such horrors as our generation is now witnessing.

WITNESS STIRS UP COLONEL

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, May 12.—William Barnes trained his battery of heavy guns upon the forces of Colonel Roosevelt in the Barnes-Roosevelt libel trial here today and the bombardment almost threw the Colonel's followers into a panic.

Although they had scarcely recovered from the blow given by Justice William S. Andrews yesterday in ruling out all of the Albany printing ring evidence, the Colonel and his lawyers had to meet many new attacks, and the day ended in gloom for them and correspondingly great joy for the Barnes crowd. William M. Ivins, chief of the Barnes counsel, felt so sure of his case that, after examining eight witnesses, he excused three others and will probably let still more go tomorrow.

As the only thing left in the Colonel's case as showing justification of the alleged libel is the charge that Mr. Barnes and Charles F. Murphy formed a corrupt or improper alliance to prevent the Republican legislators from interfering with Mr. Murphy's selection of a United States Senator in 1911, Mr. Ivins brought all his ingenuity to bear upon demolishing this last line of defense. The eight witnesses he called, in the order of their appearance, were: Elon R. Brown, President pro tem of the Senate; ex-State Senator Edgar Truman Brackett, William J. Wollman of the brokerage firm of J. S. Bache, John W. Hutchinson of the Republican State Committee, Assemblyman Alfred E. Smith, ex-Assemblyman Frederick W. Hammond, Thaddeus C. Sweet, present Speaker of the Assembly, and ex-Governor Benjamin B. Odell. The three witnesses excused were William Church Osborn, Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, The McManus, and Herbert Parsons.

The Senatorial fight of 1911 was fought all over again during the day. The testimony of Mr. Brown, Mr. Wollman, and Mr. Brackett bore heavily upon his part of the case, and they denied in the strongest terms that any such combination as alleged by the defense was made to elect Leader Murphy's candidate. They denied over and over again that Mr. Barnes had tried to influence their votes in any way. The most they would admit was that Mr. Barnes had conferred with them about the possibility of switching the Republican legislators from their own candidate, Senator Chauncey M. Depew, to a candidate favored by the so-called insurgent Democrats, and they took the sting out of this testimony by saying that Mr. Barnes insisted that if such a candidate was agreed upon it must be one who was strongly anti-Tammany. They also denied that Mr. Barnes ever tried to dominate the party.

To vary the proceedings Mr. Ivins tried to break down the testimony of the Colonel's witnesses on other matters, particularly that relating to the charge that Mr. Barnes, in order to head off the Franchise Tax bill, which Mr. Roosevelt while Governor was intent upon signing, had accepted campaign contributions from Democratic as well as Republican representatives of corporations. He had specified Anthony N. Brady and Robert Pruyn of Albany as being two who had made such contributions, and ex-Governor Odell, who was Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Republican State Committee at the time, and had charge of the finances, testified that neither to his knowledge made any contributions.

A Get-Together Conference.

The most important testimony of the day, from a spectacular standpoint, was given by Mr. Hutchinson. He told of a conversation he had with the Colonel at the Harvard Club on July 15, 1914, shortly after the Colonel returned from his South American trip and a few days before he issued his alleged libelous article. Mr. Hutchinson said he had gone to the Colonel with a plea that he help bind up the wounds of the Republican Party and agree upon a candidate for Governor. The witness said that he had made the appointment with the Colonel through the latter's secretary and this is what he said took place:

"I went to talk with Mr. Roosevelt in regard to the Gubernatorial situation. There had been talk of the Colonel being the nominee himself of the Progressives. I told him that the issues which divided the party in 1912 were no longer being considered by the people, that the recall, the initiative, and referendum were not being discussed and that the only thing the people were interested in was prosperity.

"I told him that we ought to get together. Mr. Roosevelt replied that that was so; that we ought to get together on a candidate and that he had the intention of agreeing upon some candidate. Mr. Roosevelt then said that he could go after President Wilson in his Pittsburgh speech on the President's foreign policies and tear him to pieces. He said the Republicans had no one else who could do it and they would have to have him. He said that after what happened at the Chicago Convention he wouldn't stand for Barnes and that the Republican Party was not big enough to hold both of them."

The Colonel's face fell as the witness told of this conversation and several times he shook his head and excitedly talked with his counsel.

The ruling out of the printing testimony, although a big setback for the Colonel, as it destroyed most of the extensive fabric he had reared to prove that he was justified in calling Mr. Barnes what he did, will shorten the trial materially. Mr. Ivins expects to finish his case this week, and this includes the testimony of Mr. Barnes himself. Then summing up probably will take place on Monday, and the case may go to the jury on Tuesday night.

Senator Brown of Jefferson County was the first of the Barnes witnesses this morning. He said that Thomas C. Platt was State leader of the Republican organization from the time the witness entered politics until 1904, when he was succeeded by Governor Odell, who held the reins for two years, until the election of Governor Hughes.

"Who succedeed Governor Odell as State leader?" asked Mr. Barnum.

"Colonel Roosevelt," promptly replied the witness. "He continued actively as leader until shortly after the close of his Presidential term, when he left the country. He came back and won out with his candidate at the State Convention in 1910. He named the candidate for Governor and continued his leadership until after the election."

Lawyer William L. Barnum, who conducted the examination, then plunged into the senatorial fight and asked Senator Brown if he had taken part in it. Mr. Brown replied that he had and he was allowed to tell of a conversation he had with Mr. Barnes in February, 1911.

"I went to Mr. Barnes," said the witness, "and told him that two or three days before I had met Thomas Mott Osborne at the University Club in New York and that he said there was a great chance for me to do a patriotic duty. He said he wanted to have the Republicans unite with Independent Democratic legislators on the election of a United States Senator. He suggested John N. Carlisle of Watertown, my law partner, as being the right kind of a man and he asked me to use my offices to see if his election could not be brought about.

"I took the suggestion to Mr. Barnes for his consideration and Mr. Barnes said it was an important suggestion and that he would consider it. He said he couldn't say that it would be feasible, as he didn't know what the attitude of the Republican senators would be, but he would find out and let me know if anything could be done."

The witness said that a few days later Mr. Barnes telephoned for him to go to Albany and he did so. He said he had several conferences with Mr. Barnes regarding the Senatorial fight thereafter.

"Mr. Barnes," the witness went on, "told me that in his opinion conditions were ripe for the election of a United States Senator by a combination of Republican and independent Democrats, but that it must be a candidate who would not be identified with Tammany Hall.

"Mar Barnes requested me to confer with Mr. Osborne, which I did. Later I told Mr. Barnes that Mr. Osborne had assented. Mr. Barnes told me that the Republicans would not accept Mr. Carlisle because they could not feel sure that if elected he would not train with Tamany Hall."

Knew Of No Agreement.

"Did you hear or know of any agreement between Mr. Barnes and Mr. Murphy in relation to the United States senatorship at that time?" asked Mr. Barnum. "I did not," replied Mr. Brown.

Mr. Bowers then took the witness in hand.

Q.—Did you tell Mr. Barnes that you told Mr. Osborne that the Republican vote could be delivered to a man like Thomas Mott Osborne? A.—Substantially, yes.

Q.—Had Mr. Barnes told you that the Republican vote could be delivered to Mr. Osborne? A.—Substantially, yes, and hopefully all.

Q.—You say Mr. Odell was State leader in 1905. Now, how do you determine State leadership? A.—I take universal consent; nothing else.

Q.—You say Mr. Roosevelt became a State leader? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Did he advocate the nomination of Governor Hughes? A.—He controlled it by giving an order in the form of a request.

Q.—What did he do? A.—I believe he sent a letter. Mr. Root said he had one in his pocket.

Q.—Do you mean to say that the President of the United States sent a message to the New York State Convention ordering it to nominate Charles E. Hughes? A.—That's what he did in 1906.

Q.—When did Mr. Barnes become State Chairman? A.—In January, 1911.

Q.—Do you remember any other State Chairman having written a letter dictating to the legislators of his party, a letter ordering them or advising them how to vote? A.—I do not.

After Mr. Bowers had asked the witness some questions about the appointment of committees which Justice Andrews said were not important Mr. Brown gave way to ex-Senator Brackett.

Getting down to the Senatorial fight Mr. Brackett said that he had received a telegram from Senator Depew offering to withdraw his name. He then told of a meeting in the City Hall of the Senators on the day after the Capitol fire. When Mr. Bowers offered an objection, Mr. Ivins said that he hoped to prove that the action of the Republican legislators was spontaneous, and that Mr. Barnes had nothing whatever to do with the work of the legislators.

At the afternoon session Mr. Brackett was asked to tell of a conference he had wth Mr. Barnes regarding the Senatorship stuation.

"Mr. Barnes," sad he, "wanted to have the question settled, as he promised to meet Franklin D. Roosevelt that afternoon and tell hm whether the Republicans could be marshalled behnd some independent Democrat.

"Mr. Merritt, Republican leader in the Assembly, could not he sure that every Republican in the Assembly would vote for a Democrat—that if they had to vote for a Democrat at all, it would be one of their own choosing."

"Did you have any talk with Mr. Barnes as to his own position?"

"I do not recall. His position was that if it could be done he was willing."

Asked if he had been in favor of joining with the Democrats to elect Mr. Osborne or some other Independent candidate, the witness said:

Independent Army All Generals.

"My recollection is that from the beginning I had been feeling out Independent Democrats to see if anything could be done. My impression was that they couldn't unite on any one themselves. I asked Frank Roosevelt to write out some names, but the rest of his Independent brigade wouldn't stand for it. I figured that they were all generals without any subjects."

"Did Mr. Barnes ever try to influence your course of conduct?"

"No, sir," replied the witness emphatically, looking straight at Colonel Roosevelt.

"Was there any agreement between Mr. Barnes and Mr. Murphy in reference to the vote of the Senatorship?"

"I never knew of any," the witness replied with emphasis.

William J. Wollman, the next witness, is a member of the firm of J. S. Bache & Co., brokers, and it was at his office that William Loeb, Jr., testified he had a conversation with Mr. Barnes during the Senatorship fight, in which Mr. Barnes, according to Mr. Loeb, said that he could not interfere for the election of an Independent Democrat because he had a working agreement with Mr. Murphy. John J. Adams, assistant counsel for Mr. Barnes, brought out the statement from Mr. Wollman that the conversation did not take place until after the election of President Wilson in 1912—a year and a half after the Senatorialship fight was settled.

The witness said that Mr. Loeb was taking luncheon with him at his office shortly after the Presidential election of 1912, and that Mr. Barnes sent in his card. He said he asked Mr. Loeb if he cared if Mr. Barnes joined them, and Mr. Loeb said he did not. He said Mr. Loeb and Mr. Barnes then talked together for three-quarters of an hour. Mr. Bowers on cross-examination tried hard to make the witness admit that he was mistaken in his dates, but it was futile, although he admitted that Mr. Loeb had called at his office another time, in 1913.

Assemblyman Alfred E. Smith spent five minutes on the stand. He was Majority Leader of the Senate in the Senatorial fight in 1911. He said he voted for William F. Sheehan right up to the time the Democrats switched to Justice O'Gorman.

"Do you know of any combination between Mr. Barnes and Murphy that effected that election?" Mr. Barnum asked.

Justice Andrews sustained Mr. Bowers's objection.

"Did you ever hear of any bargain or agreement between Mr. Barnes and Mr. Murphy affecting that election?" asked Barnum.

The witness was not allowed to answer this either and he was excused.

Fred W. Hammond of Syracuse and present clerk of the Assembly was asked this question:

"Did you have any instructions from Mr. Barnes or any one representing him as to how you should vote for United States Senator?"

"I did not," he replied.

Thaddeus C. Sweet, present Speaker of the Assembly, testified that Mr. Barnes gave him no instructions as to how he should vote and that he did not know of any arrangement between Mr. Barnes and Mr. Murphy.

Odell Made No Promises.

Ex-Gov. O'Dell was then called.

"Were you the dominant leader of the party in the State?" Mr. Ivins asked.

"I don't know," replied Mr. Odell with a laugh in which Justice Andrews and the audience joined.

After considerable argument as to the right of Mr. Ivins to examine the witness on campaign contributions the witness was asked.

"Was any contribution made to the state campaign by Mr. Brady?"

"Not to my knowledge," replied Mr. O'Dell.

"Was there any made by Mr. Pruyn?"

"Not to my knowledge."

"Was there any contribution made by any individual or any corporation accompanied by a request for protection?"

The Justice ruled this question out, but asked the witness this one:

"Did you make any promise to any corporation?"

"No," replied the witness.

Mr. Bowers, on cross-examination, asked the witness if the reports of contributors during those years were on file.

"Books were kept and they were destroyed," replied Mr. Odell.

The witness said that Democrats may have contributed to the Republican fund individually, but he didn't know of any. He admitted that the Mutual Life Insurance Company, the New York Life, the Equitable, and the Metropolitan Street Railway contributed.

"I suppose all members of the state committee took a hand at getting contributions?" Mr. Bowers asked.

"No, sir. Senator Platt attended to it mostly," the Ex-Governor replied, and that ended his cross-examination.

The Court adjourned until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

MAYOR IS ENJOINED BY TAXI COMPANY

City Officials Are Forbidden by Court to Enforce the Public Hack Ordinance.

TO ARGUE CASE TOMORROW

Haverty's Corporation Charges That New Regulation Robs It of Its Most Profitable Trade.

John W. Browne, counsel for the Haverty's Taxicabs, Incorporated, obtained from Supreme Court Justice Crane of Brooklyn yesterday a temporary injunction restraining the Mayor, the Commissioner of Licenses, and all other public officials from enforcing their own construction of the public hack ordinance. The court issued an order directing the city officials to appear tomorrow and show cause why the injunction should not be made permanent.

In order to discover whether a taxi was public or private an amendment to the ordinance provided that all public taxis should carry taximeters and that the chauffeur's seat should be only wide enough for him.

Thereupon the Haverty company removed the taximeters from their taxis used in private service. The need of being careful was impressed upon the company because Magistrate Murphy fined several chauffeurs of the Mason-Seaman company $50 each for violations of the ordinance. In cases of violation not only the chauffeurs, but the taxi also could be fined $50, making a total of a $100 fine for each violation. Mr. Browne said that under the city's construction of the ordinance none of the companies is in a position to take advantage of the best paying service. He added:

"The amendment, as construed by the city, amounts to a practical confiscation of our property. We serve the Belmont and Murray Hill hotels, a number of clubs, many physicians, and a large number of private families who want to put their own footman on the box with the chauffeur. If we are forced to shorten the chauffeur's seat so that he only can occupy it we will be deprived of at least half of our income at the increased rate which the private service willingly pays. We have more than 250 charge accounts, and we claim the right to make any contract with these customers that is satisfactory to both.

"Under the amendment as the city sees it we could be summoned to court for failing to observe its provisions in our private service and fined. Of course no business could stand up under such an imposition. The Yellow Taxicab Company has 550 taxis, 700 of them running as private conveyances. On Friday night the company withdrew all of these machines. We have fifty taxis for private service, for which we charge 80 cents a mile instead of 50 cents. Under the injunction all of these taxis may be restored to service.

"In the argument on Friday we will try to show that taxis used for private service ought not to be classed with the public hacks that wander about the streets looking for fares. There is a distinct difference between the two forms of service."

COURT GIVES JOB BACK.

Rosenthal, Dropped by Travis, Protected by Civil Service.

Julius Rosenthal, who said he was removed from his job as the legal examiner and investigator in the Transfer Tax Bureau because he had won the antagonism of Governor Whitman, and sued for reinstatement, has won his case. Supreme Court Justice Weeks yesterday signed an order directing that Mr. Rosenthal be reinstated. To sustain his claim that he was removed for political reasons, Mr. Rosenthal said that when Controller Travis dismissed him he said:

"I am not going to argue with the Governor about the matter. He has demanded your removal and I have followed his instructions."

Mr. Travis made an affidavit denying that any such conversation occurred. He said Rosenthal was removed because the lace he held was considered a sinecure and superfluous. Justice Weeks found that the place was in the classified civil list and that it had not been abolished.

Did Not Ask to Move Sick Cattle.

Dr. Simon F. Flexner of the Rockefeller Institute said last night the published report that the Directors of the new Institute Laboratory for Animal Pathology, to be established near Princeton, had asked a permit from the New Jersey Board of Health which would allow the bringing of diseased cattle from all parts of the State to the laboratory was incorrect. Dr. Flexner said the permit asked for would allow the members of the laboratory staff to treat infected cattle wherever an outbreak of disease occurred, but that it was not contemplated to bring diseased cattle to the institution from other parts of the State. The Director of the new laboratory will be Dr. Theobald Smith, formerly of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Breed is Chairman of the committee. E. V. Douglas was elected Secretary and S. C. Mead of the Merchants' Association Treasurer. Sub-committees were appointed.

County Court Judge Humphrey adjourned until next Monday the trial of John Vincent Ward for an attack on Miss Caroline Gresh in her home, 504 Grand Avenue, Astoria, last Jan. 4, when he found yesterday that the trial of Harry Scanlon on a similar charge brought by Mrs. Clara Ellert had begun before Supreme Court Justice Scudder. Both youths are sons of local politicians and both have been tried before, the juries disageeing.

POWDER IN SHOES AS WELL AS GUNS

Foot-Ease to Be Added to Equipment of Hospital Corps at Fort Wayne.

Under the above heading the Detroit Free Press, among other things says: "The theory is that soldiers whose feet are in good condition can walk further and faster than soldiers who have corns and bunions incased in rawhide.

The Government's foot powder order is regarded as the last word in the scientific outfitting of the defenders of the flag."

The English, French and Allied Troops constantly make use of Allen's Foot-Ease. This foot powder, shaken into the shoes of soldiers, has long been in use in the German army, and Uncle Sam's adoption of this form of treating and easing the feet, is in line with the expressions heard daily for more than twenty-five years, in all parts of the world, from millions of people who are shaking Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder for the feet, into their shoes, or using it in the foot bath, as the only practical and lasting treatment for easing and absolutely preventing sore feet. It can be obtained from dealers everywhere for 25c. or a trial package will be sent by mail free if you write to Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y., U. S. A.

ASKS $87,600 FOR TEACHERS

School Board Wants Aldermen to Provide for Promotions.

The Board of Education yesterday decided to ask the Board of Aldermen to appropriate $87,600 to pay the 1,056 teachers who will be promoted next September.

Louis B. Pink, Chairman of the Special Committee on Community Centres, presented its report. He said it wanted the schools to belong to the people and to be used by them. He said it favored the appointment of a committee having full charge of the matter. Francis P. Cunnion, Chairman of the Committee on Care of Buildings, advised the board to go slowly. Some of the persons permitted to use the buildings after school hours, he said, smoked and did about as they pleased. The buildings were jammed to the doors when a dance was on, but lectures were neglected. He wanted it shown what good is being done by community centres. Parochial and private schools did not find it necessary to keep open for dances.

On motion of Rupert B. Thomas the whole matter was referred to the Executive Committee.

It was decided to create the position of assistant director of cooking.

James A. Gamble, janitor of Public School 14, the Bronx, was found guilty of charges of neglect of duty and was dismissed.

Dr. William H. Maxwell was again absent. He is still confined by illness to his home.

CHESTER SUED FOR $50,000.

George Randolph Chester, creator of the Wallingford Stories, has beeen sued in the Supreme Court by the Colonial Motion Picture Corporation for $50,000 for alleged breach of contract. The plaintiff says that on May 1 it made a contract with Mr. Chester for the exclusive right of making motion pictures of his stories, that it paid him $1,000 on account of royalties at the rate of 10 per cent. on the gross earnings of the films, and that it was agreed the films were to be distributed throughout the United States.

Mr. Chester, according to the complaint, told friends he did not intend to keep the contract, and later told the plaintiff the contract would result in Cohan & Harris suing the plaintiff because they had the rights to the play of "Get Rich Quick Wallingford." Mr. Chester has since refused to permit the plaintiff to use his stories. The plaintiff says it has spent $4,000 in getting ready for making the films.

Millicent Evans, a moving picture actress, has sued the plaintiff for failing to keep an agreement to pay her $105 a week for a year to act in the Wallingford plays.

Rae Tanzer Again Pleads Not Guilty

Rae Tanzer appeared yesterday before Judge Augustus N. Hand in the Federal District Court, and pleaded not guilty to the indictment found against her for perjury. She was then continued in the $5,000 bail, to which she was admitted on the indictment charging her with having used the mails to defraud. The indictment charges that in the perjury trial of Fredrick D. Safford, the hotel clerk of Plainfield, N. J., she herself committed perjury by swearing that James W. Osborne was with her at a time when he was in Providence.

MORE FAKE RIPPER LETTERS

"Ripper" scares and fake "ripper" letters kept neighborhoods in this city and the vicinity in excitement again yesterday. Inspector Faurot, in charge of the search for the murderer of children, said at the Second Branch Detective Bureau last night, however, that the hard work of himself and the men under him had ended in repeated disappointments. He said, though, that they are now making an investigation which gives some promise of clearing up the case.

Gertrude Foster, 18 years old, was arrested yesterday for sending a letter signed "The Ripper" to her employer, Mrs. Mildred Schooler, 961 Simpson Street, the Bronx, threatening Mrs. Schooler's children. The girl confessed that she had written the note.

The Flushing postal authorities made public yesterday a postal card which had been stopped there on Tuesday afternoon because it was signed "The Ripper." It was addressed "Mrs. Andrews, Locus Street, Flushing," and threatened her children.

Frank Fizi, 38 years, a ladies' tailor, of 157 Dupont Street, Brooklyn, was held without bail for further examination today by Magistrate Levy in Yorkville Court after he had been identified by Helen Manning, 4 years old, of 257 Avenue C, as the man who had attacked her in the hallway of the tenement house at that address on Sunday night.

John Bowman of Troy, N. Y., who was arrested on Tuesday night for exhibiting a razor to children in Battery Park and saying that he was going to kill some one, was put under $300 bonds to keep the peace by Magistrate Handy in the Tombs Court yesterday. In the same court Salvio Pelescia, of 178 Sullivan Street, charged with annoying girls, was held in $500 bail for examination tomorrow.

Many women hurried to the Broadway Public School, at Hackensack, N. J., for their children yesterday after a "ripper" scare had been started, but they were reassured.

Jacob Rugg, a clerk, 50 years old, of 235 East Nineteenth Street, was arrested by Policeman Adams of the East Twenty-second Street Station, last night on the charge of annoying children in Stuyvesant Park.

MONTIMAGNO TRIAL HALTED.

Not Enough Talesmen to Complete Jury in Political Murder Case.

The trial of Gaetano Montimagno for the murder of Michael Giamari, a Tammany district captain, growing out of a political feud in the Second Assembly District, was halted yesterday because of the lack of talesmen to complete the jury. Eleven men were in the box when Clerk Penney announced that the panel was exhausted.

"Are there any men who did not answer their summons as talesmen?" Justice Davis asked.

"Yes. Four or five did not appear."

"Notify all of them that unless they can offer proper excuses they will be fined $100 each," said the Justice.

A new panel of fifty was ordered drawn, and the trial was adjourned to tomorro mornwing.

Before dismissing court Justice Davis warned the jurymen not to allow any one to talk to them about the case. "If any one approaches you and even indirecly refers to the case," he said, "find out their names and addresses and report the occurrence to me."

GIVES CITY MORE MEN IN ASSEMBLY

STRIKE AT LAWS' DELAYS

Two Proposals for Court Reforms—Cullinan Urges a Novel Cigarette Smokers' Census.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 12.—Ex-Borough President Haffen of the Bronx introduced in the Constitutional Convention today an amendment providing for more adequate representation for New York City in the Assembly. Under the Haffen amendment New York City would have seventy-four representatives in the Assembly instead of sixty-three, as at present. The representation of some up-State counties is decreased. The total number of Assemblymen, however, would be increased from 150 to 168.

The amendment proposes these changes in the representation of the five counties included in the City of New York: New York, 30 instead of 31; Kings, 27 instead of 23; Bronx, 9 instead of 4; Queens, 6 instead of 4; Richmond, 2 instead of 1; net increase, 11.

An educational qualification for the exercise of the right to vote is provided in an amendment introduced by Gordon Knox Bell, a Republican delegate from New York City. Under his amendment voters must be able to read and write the English language. There is no doubt that the amendment will encounter serious opposition in the convention.

Under the terms of an amendment introduced by Patrick W. Cullinan, a Republican delegate-at-large, a new section of Article VII. would prohibit the Legislature from voting any gratuity or pension, payable out of the State Treasury, except by refferring the matter to a referendum at a general election.

Adolph J. Rodenbeck, of Rochester, one of the Republican delegates-at-large, introduced several amendments to reform court procedure, cut red tape and obviate the law's delays. One amendment confers on the Justices of the Appellate Divisions the right to make, and amend rules to govern, practice, and procedure in the courts. The rules must be certified by the Governor within ten days of their adoption and the Governor has the power to annul any rule. The Justices, however, by a two-thirds vote may overrule the Governor provided the action is taken within thirty days. The proposed amendment would not prevent the Legislature from passing laws to govern procedure not covered by the rules.

Another amendment provides for the appointment by the Justices of the Appellate Division, of a Supreme Court Justice to prepare statistics and exercise general supervision over the business of the Courts throughout the State. The two amendments aim to introduce in this State the British court system.

Attacks Printing Waste.

Mr. Rodenbeck also introduced an amendment, the purpose of which is to stop waste in printing, growing out of the imperfect drafting of bills introduced in the Legislature. This amendment provides for the appointment of a Legislative Counsel by the Governor with the consent of the Senate, who to act as a censor on the form of legislative measures, but not on their substance. The amendment prohibits the introduction of any bill, except by a standing or select committee of the Legislature until it has been approved by the Legislative Counsel.

The Governor and the heads of State departments will have a voice in the deliberations of the Legislature if the amendment introduced today by Israel T. Deyo, Republican delegate from Broome County, is adopted. Their amendment gives the Governor the right to introduce administration bills by message and provides that when such bills are considered the Legislature may invite the Governor and heads of departments to be present for the purpose of explaining the measures. The amendment also provides for an increase in the salary of the Governor from $10,000 to $20,000.

Louis M. Martin of Clinton County introduced an amendment which would make it unconstitutional to form a labor union composed of the employes of more than one employer. The amendment authorizes the employes of any firm or corporation to form a union of their own and deal with their employer as a unit in matters of mutual concern or interests. It makes it unlawful for the union to punish any member far failure to comply with its rules, for acting in an individual capacity, or speaking his mind freely.

Business corporations, under another amendment introduced by Mr. Martin, would be prohibited from accumulating a surplus or from directly or indirectly using their funds to obtain control of another corporation. The amendment prohibits business corporations from issuing bonds or preferred stock or from issuing any stock which does not represent money or property. The Public Service Commissions receive power to appraise the value of such property. The amendment provides for an annual distribution of profits.

Both the Martin amendments were introduced "by request." Lemuel E. Quigg introduced a resolution providing for the appointment of a committee of seven members to report to the convention on the method of submitting proposed Constitutional amendments to the people this Fall.

Proposes Novel Census.

A census of cigarette smokers in the prisons and State institutions will be taken if a resolution introduced in the convention today by Mr. Cullinan is adopted. Mr. Cullinan was Excise Commissioner for many years. He told the convention that if he could have his way there would be a State tax on manufacturers and dealers in cigarettes.

The resolution calls on the Superintendent of Prisons, the State Board of Charities, and the State Hospital Commission to ascertain the number of inmates in institutions under their respective supervision and control and how many of them have been inveterate cigarette smokers. When he obtains the information he is seeking Mr. Cullinan will frame a proposal providing for a tax on cigarettes.

"I do not think we begin to realize how many people have been sent to prison or to the insane asylums or the poor houses by the excessive smoking of cigarettes," Mr. Cullinan said. "It is time we see to it that the State gets some revenue from a traffic which adds so enormously to the burden of the taxpayers for maintenance of mad houses, poor houses and jails."

The Public Utilities Committee this afternoon gave a hearing on a proposed amendment making the Public Service Commissioners constitutional officers and the two boards bi-partisan bodies. Frederick C. Stevens of Jamestown, former Chairman of the up-State Public Service Commission, opposed the plan.

"The regulatory laws of this State have not been sufficiently developed to warrant us in grafting them on the body of the Constitution," said Mr. Stevens. "To make the commissions bi-partisan would merely tend to drag them into politics."

Former Chairman William H. Willcox of the Commission for the First District has been invited to appear before the committee at a hearing next week. It is the conseusus here that the convention will do nothing to increase the powers of the commissions.

CITY URGES REFORMS.

Four Greatly Needed, Says Polk—Home Rule First.

Corporation Counsel Polk announced yesterday the four reforms which the city was urging upon the attention of the Constitutional Convention. In the first place, it was asking, he said, for a constitutional change which would obtain for the city as complete home rule as was compatible with the necessary functions and authority of the State Government.

In fighting for this, Mr. Polk said, New York was co-operating with the other large cities of the State. There is a general realization that cities must have a larger control of their internal administration if they were to be governed efficiently.

In the second place, the city desired protection against being compelled to contribute more than its fair share to the State taxes. This could be accomplished by a proper equalization of the assessed valuations throughout the State.

Moreover, Mr. Polk asks that the Constitution forbid the taxing of any community for an object from which it has no benefit unless the tax has been submitted to a vote of the entire people of the State. New York thus would escape paying $1,400,000 for the repair of town roads and other local improvements.

The third point raised by Mr. Polk deals with the investment of New York City outside its limits for its water supply. It amounts to $165,000,000, and not only is the investment forced to bear an unjust share of local taxation, but under the present Constitution, the Legislature can make any disposition of this property it sees fit. Such a great municipal investment as this, the Corporation Counsel said, should have as much protection as a similar investment of private capital.

Finally Mr. Polk pointed out that the city was not properly represented at Albany. While the average ratio of Assemblymen to population was one to 50,000, in New York City it was one to 75,000, and while the average of Senators to population was one to 180,000, it was in New York City, one to 227,000. Through inequitable apportionments there were districts in the city which, he said, were ten times as populous as some of the up-State districts. Thus Schuyler County, with its 14,004 people, has as much representation in the Assembly as the Twenty-third Assembly District of New York, with 156,652 people, and Yates County with 16,842, has as much weight in the Assembly as the Thirty-second Assembly District of the Bronx with 131,248. Resolutions embodying these reforms are to be presented to the convention.

DEFENSE OF DERNBURG.

George S. Viereck Attacks Those Who Would Silence the Doctor.

George Sylvester Viereck, publisher of The Fatherland, gave out a statement yesterday in reply to the attacks on Dr. Bernhard Dernburg. In part, he said:

"England's alliance with Russia is Russianizing the British press. Shall it also Russianize the United States? The allied press hysterically demands that the right of free speech be denied to Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, the most eloquent exponent of the German cause in the United States. Because they cannot answer his arguments they would send him into exile.

Cut off, her wires severed, Germany was without a spokesman in the United States. Her able Ambassador, gagged and bound by the red tape of office, was not in the position to break anew from day to day the web of deceit spun by the British spider. Mr. Herman Ridder and other Americans of German descent could speak for themselves, they could speak for twenty million Germans and Americans in the United States; they could not speak for Germany. Dr. Bernhard Dernburg was the only man who could present the case of the German people to the American people.

"He, Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, still is the only German spokesman, not bound by diplomatic etiquette, whose voice is heard. For still the cables are cut. Still the American Government unneutrally exercises a censorship over the German wireless, while placing no restriction whatsoever upon British cables. Still British warships, contrary to the laws of nations, stop German mails to this country. How then shall the voice of one hundred and twenty million Teutons be heard, if not through Dr. Dernburg?

"If we have silenced the one man who can speak freely yet with authority in our midst, who knows into what unwise action, in spite of the wise restraint of President Wilson, the people of the United States may be led by false information? Then, if mischief happens, how shall the German people ever forgive the United States, who choked the voice of Germany's only spokesman, in the supreme crisis that has faced her since she was cradled in blood and iron?

"President Wilson in his fine speech delivered in Philadelphia, has urged American citizens not to think of themselves in 'groups.' His warning should be addressed primarily to American champions of Great Britain. No pro-German ever proposed the incorporation of the United States into the German Empire. The British propaganda distinctly avows that such is its ultimate object. Andrew Carnegie has distinctly said so. Professor Beer, writing in The Forum for this month, makes a similar admission.

"Who put the hyphen in German-American except the rabid pro-Allies and their American propaganda? Shall the rift in our citizenship, already serious, be made irreparable by an act of wanton injustice? Fortunately the destinies of this country are in safer hands than in those of erratic, third-term demagogues and irresponsible scribblers."

WIRELESS HEROES LIVE IN MEMORIAL

City Accepts Cenotaph and Drinking Fountain in Battery Park.

McANENY'S FEELING WORDS

Acting Mayor Says Brave Men Are Appropriately Remembered by Greatest Port in the World.

The memorial drinking fountain and cenotaph at Battery Park, erected to the wireless operators who perished at sea in their line of duty, was formally presented to the City of New York yesterday afternoon by Fred B. Daiziel, Chairman of the Committee of the Maritime Association.

The centotaph was draped with the Stars and Stripes and crowned with a laurel wreath, and the chairs of the guests were roped off with laurel also. Four sailors from the Navy Yard were present with two buglers, who blew "Taps" when the unveiling took place.

The Rev. Dr. Nehemiah Boynton, vice-president of the American Seamens' Friends Society, who pronounced the invocation, made reference to the Lusitania disaster in which the two wireless operators lost their lives an dalso referred to the present grave situation, arising from it.

Mr. Daiziel in presenting the fountain to Acting Mayor McAneny, spoke of the fidelity to duty of the wireless heroes at sea and specially mentioned Jack Phillips, who lost his life on the Titanic and in memory of whom the Fund was started by the New York Times in April, 1912, after the disaster.

In accepting the fountain on behalf of the city, Mr. McAneny said:

When the wireless telegraph was first invented we looked upon it as a great boom to commerce, and, of course, as an additional safeguard to human life on the sea. But few of us foresaw to what extent it offered an opportunity for a new and peculiarly appealing kind of heroism. The first spectacular instance of heroism on the part of wireless telegraph operators was the performance of Binne on the Republic, when that vessel was the victim of a collision a few years ago. Happily, the hero of that event did not have to sacrifice his life, since aid reached the stricken vessel in good time to save him along with the passengers and crew. But the wireless telegraphers upon other wrecked vessels have not been so fortunate. You have on your beautiful shaft here of the names of ten men who have given their lives for others, and the black space remaining is a melancholy reminder that perhaps other names will have to be added.

Monument to Brave Men.

New York City owes its pre-eminence mostly to its tradition as a port. We are now the greatest port in the world, and we shall be much greater. Searfaring men should always have a strong appeal for New Yorkers. Therefore, it is particularly fitting that monuments such as this should be dedicated here in Battery Park; and I, as the acting head of the New York City Government, take pride in registering an official tribute to the memory of these brave men.

At the conclusion of his speech Mr. McAneny gave the fountain over to the care of Park Commissioner Cabot Ward, who then turned the water on and the unveiling took place. The audience of more than 500 stood uncovered in the rain while "Taps" was sounded.

Among those present was James Coffin Perkins of Philadelphia, a missionary to India and the father of Donald Campbell Perkins, wireless operator who was lost on the steamship State of California on Aug. 15, 1915, on the Pacific Coast, and the parents of Ferdinand Kuehn, who was lost on the steamship Monroe on Jan. 30, 1914.

Others present were Dock Commissioner Smith, Surveyor Rush, Lewis H. Pounds, Borough President of Brooklyn; Joseph P. Morrell, President of the Maritime Association; Bridge Commissioner Kracke, John Bottomley, Vice President of the Marconi Company of America; Shipping Commissioner Quinn, Louis H. Junod, Counsul from Switzerland; Ernesto Solorzano, Consul General of Nicaragua; Henry M. Seeley, Superintending Steamboat Inspector; William Lawrence Bottomley, the architect of the memorial, and many prominent in shipping circles.

The Wireless Heroes.

The names inscribed on the cenotaph are George C. Eccles, Stephen F. Szczepanek, Jack Phillips, Lawrence Prudhunt, Donald Campbell Perkins, Clifton J. Fleming, Harry Fred Otto, Adolph J. Svenson, Ferdinand Kuehn, and Walter E. Reker.

The names of the wireless operators who went down with the Lusitania, Robert Leith and D. McCormick, will be added later.

R. A. CHANLER RETURNS.

Had Been with His Brother, Who Is Ill in Paris.

Robert A. Candler, former husband of Lina Cavalieri, the opera singer, returned yesterday on the French liner Rochambeau from Paris, where he has been nursing his brother, William Astor Chanler, who has been seriously ill. He said that his brother had improved very much in health and was steadily recovering. Mr. Chanler added that there were several well-known New Yorkers now serving in the auxiliary corps of the French Army.

Dr. Henry H. N. Lyle, Chief Surgeon of the American Unit Hospital, supported by Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, also arrived on the Rochambeau for a vacation. The Whitney hospital, he said, was doing great work and was always filled to capacity.

The Rochambeau brought seventy fishermen on their way back to their homes at St. Pierre Miquelon after serving in the French Army. Several of them had been wounded, but they were all in good spirits and proud of the uniforms which they wore on the ship.

HOBSON WOULD CHECK WILSON

Sends a Message Asking for a Court of Inquiry on Lusitania.

Special to The New York Times.

WATERBURY, Conn., May 12.—Ex-Congressman Richmond P. Hobson gave out tonight a telegram he had just sent to President Wilson. His message said:

"Press dispatches foreshadow as part of your pending communication to Germany a demand for guarantees of security of American lives on enemy merchant vessels in submarine warfare. I would respectfully and earnestly urge that simultaneous request be made upon Great Britain to revoke instructions to British merchant vessels to ram submarines and request made upon all belligerents to insure nonresistance of their merchant vessels when challenged by submarines entitling them to immunity for lives on board, as dictated by humanity. Otherwise our demand would not comply with spirit of international law for merchant vessels instructed to attack delicate submarines with ram are effectly war vessels toward them and not entitled to warning from them or to immunity of lives on board.

"Permit me to urge that you order a naval court of inquiry upon loss of American lives on Lusitania and regularly establish the facts for ourselves upon which responsibility can be definitely placed for the tragedy and apparently unnecessary loss of life, following precedent in destruction of the Maine.

"Before inaugurating a course leading toward an ultimatum and rupture with a friendly nation that has expressed sorrow and regret about which our chief information comes from enemy sources interested in embroiling us in war, clearly we should be scrupulously within principles of international law applied reasonably to the new mode of warfare, and our facts should be established by impartial investigation.

"Permit me also to urge you to assemble the officials of legislative and executive branches enumerated in bill establishing council of national defense to lay plans for orderly procedure, efficient and without waste, for developing our national defense without reference to existing crisis, to be ready with matured recommendations when Congress assembles.

"It is needless for me to add that as a Government and a people who have looked with such forbearance upon Japan's action in China and England's actions on the high seas, we would do ourselves little credit by blustering about blood and iron before the one belligerent that cannot strike back at us."

BERLIN EXPECTS NO TROUBLE.

Officials Confident of Maintaining Friendship with America.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 12.—A Berlin dispatch to the Chicago Daily News toway says:

"Senator William J. Stone's statement concerning the Americans lost on the Lusitania has made an excellent impression in Berlin, where it is believed that it best represents the American attitude. Official circles are confident that when the American people know the full details of the Lusitania affair nothing will be found to mar the friendly relations between their country and Germany.

"The whole situation is overshadowed by the Italian war cloud, the relations with that country being exceedingly difficult. Although there are hopes of a peaceful solution, the general impression is that the possibilities of a war with Italy are far more vital to the empire than the danger from the American difficulty. The public is exceedingly calm concerning both.

"The warning issued before the Lusitania sailed still stands, say the German officials, against all other hostile ships. The only safe course for Americans, they state, is to take neutral ships to neutral ports without passing through the war zone.

"The vigor of the submarine activity will increase rather than slacken, according to the German officials, who say that England should convoy her passenger ships. If the Lusitania had been accompanied by dreadnoughts, they say, they would have been glad to destroy them instead of the liner.

FROHMAN EXECUTOR NEEDED

Brother to Ask Appointment That Business May Be Continued.

Within the next day or two Daniel Frohman will make application to the Surrogate to be appointed administrator of the estate of his brother, Charles Frohman, who was a victim of the Lusitania disaster. Mr. Frohman left no will, and in order to enable his business to go on without interruption the application for the appointment of an administrator will be made at once. It is understood that Mr. Frohman will then ask Alf Hayman, John D. Williams, and his brother's other business associates to continue in charge of his activities.

Although Mr. Frohman had more important stars under his management than any other one producer, he never had a written contract with any of them. Upon his death his verbal agreements with them ended, so the future of the institutions he built up depended largely on whether these players would continue to be identified with the Frohman enterprises. It is understood that most of the stars, including Maude Adams, have agreed to continue under the management of the successors of their late chief. Mr. Frohman had made plans for the majority of them for the coming season, and these will be fulfilled. As told in THE TIMES last Sunday, the Frohman office is so well organized that it would go on almost automatically for some time.

An evening newspaper yesterday printed a statement which it alleged had been made to it on good authority that Mr. Frohman's estate would prove to be worth upward of $350,000. It was said at the Frohman offices last night that no authority was known there for such a statement. Mr. Hayman had said previously that Mr. Frohman had died a compratively poor man.

REJOICING OVER MAURETANIA

German Naval Circles Proud Over Stopping Her Sailing.

GENEVA, Switzerland, (via Paris,) May 13.—News that the Cunard line had cancelled the sailing of the steamer Mauretania for New York caused joy ind pride in German naval circles, according to dispatches received in Basel tonight from Rhine towns.

One German newspaper is quoted as saying that it is "pleased to find that the Americans have begun to realize that the German Navy means business now."

M'CUNES ARE ROBBED OF $25,000 IN GEMS

$7,500 IN CASH OVERLOOKED

Mine Owner of Peru and New York Calls in Private Detectives to Aid in Recovering Property.

Thieves got $25,000 in diamonds, jewelry, and cash in the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond McCune on the third floor of the house at 135 West Seventy-ninth Street, by climbing a fire-escape and entering through a bathroom window sometime between 1 o'clock and dawn Tuesday morning. Mr. and Mrs. McCune did not discover the robbery until they awoke after 8 o'clock, although the robbers entered their bedroom and gathered up most of their loot there. After the police had worked a day on the case private detectives were called in yesterday to assist in recovery of the valuables. A reward has also been offered.

Mr. McCune, who is a civil engineer and mine owner in Peru, with offices at 17 Battery Place, returned a few days ago from Peru ill with malaria, and was awake until late Monday night, and his wife remained up with him until 12:25. When they awoke the next morning they saw dirty imprints of two hands on the door casing near the head of their bed, as if one of the thieves had leaned there to peer into the room and at the sleepers.

Finger prints were on a cabinet and a chiffonier, clearly outlined in dirt and rust, which evidently got upon the hands of the robbers in going up the iron fire escape. Mrs. McCune, before retiring, shoved a roll of bills between the chiffonier top and cover, from which she had taken money to give to her maid, who does not live in the apartment.

"There was $7,500 in money under the chiffonier cover which we had just drawn from the Harriman Bank for stock investment," said Mrs. McCune yesterday. "The marks of the dirty fingers of the thieves were all over this cover, but they did not get this money. They also overlooked a box of unset diamonds and pearls in a bureau drawer."

Here is the list and partial description of the valuables taken: Gold mesh bag, set with five emeralds and six diamonds, valued at $4,500; double collar pearl necklace with diamond pendant, $15,000; gold and diamond-set card case; diamond pendant, $2,500; three-stone white diamonds gold ring, set with three white diamonds; a sapphire and diamond ring, $1,000; platinum and diamond-studded gold watch, other pieces of jewelry and $80 in cash from Mr. McCune's clothing.

Mr. and Mrs. McCune were in Paris when the war started. They went to Peru to see his mines on the Maranon River. Mrs. McCune, who says she was the first foreign woman to reach that place, rode on a mule 150 miles from the end of the railway at Cerro de Pasco. She returned here ahead of her husband and was at the Waldorf when she rented the apartment in West Seventy-ninth Street. Mr. McCune is the son of A. W. McCne, of Salt Lake City, who is one of the owners of the Cerro de Pasco copper mines, in which Henry C. Frick, J. P. Morgan, the late J. Pierpont Morgan, Frederick Vanderbilt, D. O. Mills and others were interested.

Mr. McCune, who returned here with his Superintendent, Charles McHenry, is associated with the Peruvian Government in the building of the Government railroad from the head waters of the Amazon to the Pacific.

Mrs. McCune said last night she had been told by representatives of the owners of the apartment house that there had been other robberies there. The Superintendent, William Toussaint, declined to discuss this report.

Why Not Go the Whole Figure?

According to dispatches from Pinville, Ky., a negro condemned to death was permitted to hear his own funeral sermon preached before being hanged. Why not go a step further, allow him to receive all the flowers, write his own epitaph, and then see his wife married again?—Kansas City Star.

Costly Pasturage.

Pasture rates in Kansas this Summer will be $8 a head, according to reports among Central Kansas stockmen. If prices for feed and pasture continue to climb it will be cheaper for the steers to patronize boarding houses.—Kansas City Star.

TORPEDO FLOTILLA COMPLETES FLEET

Warships in the Hudson Lined Up Ready for Review by the President.

JACKIES' BIG SHOW TONIGHT

10,000 Will Enjoy Themselves at Madison Square Garden—Officers Guests of Seamen's Institute.

Three divisions of the Atlantic Torpedo Flotilla, under command of Captain William S. Sims, U. S. N., whose flag flies from the scout cruiser Birmingham, arrived in the Hudson yesterday and anchored in single column on the New Jersey side of the river opposite the battleships. With the arrival of the destroyers the naval mobilization of 1915 is complete and the fleet is lined up exactly as it will be next Monday afternoon, when it will be reviewed, at anchor, by President Wilson.

The ships arriving yesterday were, in addition to the flagship Birmingham, the destroyers Warrington, Henley, Burrows, Patterson, Paulding, Trippe, Fanning, Beale, Jarvis, Jenkins, Jouett, Cassin, and MacDougal.

Yesterday was the one quiet day on the program of the fleet's visit to New York. About 10,000 bluejackets and marines received shore leave and they spent the afternoon for the most part at the theatres and at the ball games. The big show for the enlisted men comes tonight, when about 10,000 of them will go to Madison Square Garden to witness a vaudeville show, to be followed by a series of boxing bouts in which several well-known professionals will appear, among them Jim Coffey, the Irish champion, "Young" Ahearn, "Battling" Levinsky, and "Sailor" Fritz.

For the first time since the arrival of the fleet last Saturday Riverside Drive was not crowded with sightseers yesterday afternoon, as a drizzling rain kept the crowd indoors. For the same reason there were fewer visitors to the ships than on any of the previous days.

Schley's Old Flagship Due Today.

An interesting arrival expected today is the old armored cruiser Brooklyn, Schley's flagship at the battle of Santiago. The Brooklyn has been completely overhauled and is soon to leave for Asiatic waters to relieve the Saratoga as the flagship of the Asiatic fleet.

In the land parade next Monday, which will be reviewed by President Wilson from a stand in front of the Public Library, Fifth Avenue and Forty-second Street, there will be a battalion of bluejackets and one company of marines from each of the sixteen battleships. The men will be formed into regiments, each regiment under command of a battleship Captain. Every band in the fleet will appear in the parade. The sailors and marines are scheduled to begin to pass the reviewing stand at 10:30 A. M.

The line of march will be through Twenty-fifth Street east to Fifth Avenue and north in Fifth Avenue to Fifty-seventh Street. At Fifty-seventh Street the line will be west to Broadway, then north to Seventy-ninth Street, and thence west to the naval landing at the foot of Eightieth Street.

The officers of the fleet were the guests yesterday afternoon of the Board of Managers of the Seamen's Church Institute of New York, in order that an opportunity might be given them to inspect the work which the institute is doing among the sailors of the merchant marine. Among the hostesses were Mrs. F. Ashton de Peyster, Mrs. Edward N. Breitung, Mrs. Elbert H. Gary, Mrs. Hamilton Fish, Mrs. Seth Low, and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

McAneny Entertains Officials.

Acting Mayor George McAneny gave a dinner to Admiral Fletcher and a limited number of naval and army officers and city officials at his home, 19 East Forty-seventh Street, last night. Those present, in addition to Admiral Fletcher, were Major Gen. Leonard Wood, Senator O'Gorman, Rear Admiral Mayo, Boush and Coffman, Admiral Usher, commandant of the Brooklyn Navy Yard; Captain H. McL. D. Huse, chief of staff of the Atlantic Fleet; Captain Gordon Johnson, U. S. A., aid to General Wood; W. Butler Duncan, Acting Chairman of the Mayor's Reception Committee; Theodore Rousseau and Mortimer L. Schiff, respectively Secretary and Treasurer of the committee; Commander S. L. Sawyer, Controller Prendergast, Collector of the Port Malone, Corporation Counsel Polk, Dock Commissioner Smith, and Police Commissioner Woods.

The fleet will be submitted to an aerial bombardment such as it has never before received, on Saturday night, according to Henry S. Thompson, Chairman of the Mayor's Sub-Committee on Illumination. The aerial attack, which, of course, is a friendly one, has been planned by the Illumination Committee, composed of Henry S. Thompson, Nicholas F. Brady, Arthur Williams, Percy Pyne, 2d, and William Johnson. A number of barges will be moored shortly after dusk from 115th to 120th Street, and from their decks will be set off hundreds of aerial bombs and rocket bombs, each one of which will emit as many as twenty terrific explosions. On the Drive at 117th and 119th Streets the Seventh and Twenty-third Regiment bands will play during the evening.

Charles H. Sherrill, Chairman of the Religious Committee of the Mayor's Committee for the Entertainment of the Fleet, announced yesterday that his committee had arranged with the Bible Society to distribute 25,000 Bibles to the men of the fleet. The branches of the Young Men's Christian Association where information with reference to religious matters is given to the men of the fleet announced yesterday that they had received more than 6,000 inquiries from bluejackets and marines.

On Sunday night, at the Newsboys' Home, there will be a meeting for sailors who used to be newsboys, presided over by one of the officers of the fleet.

A dance for the officers of the fleet, which was largely attended, was held in the old frigate Granite State at the foot of West Ninety-ninth Street last night. The dance was given under the auspices of the Manhattan Naval Battalion, whose headquarters the Granite State is.

NAVAL FLIER BURIED HERE.

Ensign Stolz Was Victim of Accident to Hydroaeroplane at Pensacola

The funeral of Ensign Melvin Lewis Stolz, attached to the Navy's aviation corps, and who met death a week ago at Pensacola, through an accident to a hydroaeroplane he was experimenting with, was held yesterday from the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Simon Stolz, 610 Riverside Drive.

There was an escort of naval officers, former associates of the Ensign, as well as an escort of sailors, from the Navy Yard in Brooklyn. The cortege passed down Riverside Drive and thence to Broadway and Fifty-ninth Street, where the escort took leave of the body.

The services were attended by comrades of Ensign Stolz from his own class of 1910, United States Naval Academy, and there were members of the classes of 1908, 1909, 1911, 1912, 1913, and 1914. The interment was in Mount Neboht Cemetery, Cypres Hills.

Texan Protest.

We read of a beautiful Michigan woman who has been known for thirty years as the best cook of her county getting married at the mellow age of 47. If she had lived in Texas she would have been married thirty years ago, even if it had been necessary for a bold idolator to chloroform her and drag her to the altar.—Houston Post.

DESCRIBES WANTON RUIN BY GERMANS

QUAKERS IN RELIEF WORK

Many from England Aiding the Peasants of the Marne to Rebuild and Plant.

The ruthless methods of warfare employed by the Germans in the north of France are described at first hand in a letter just received by Mrs. Edith Woodman Burroughs, a sculptor of Flushing, L. I., from Roger Frey, now at La Source on the Marne, in France, assisting in the relief work there. Mr. Frey, of whom Mrs. Burroughs executed a bas-relief portrait, tells of the dangers confronting the relief workers on their passage from England to France, when, he writes, lifeboat facilities for only 120 persons were provided, although the ship carried 500 passengers. In his letter Mr. Frey says:

"Imagine the country here an absolute heap of ruins, but much more ruined than Pompeii; still crowded with inhabitants, 300 stacked like herrings in this hotel, and the rest in their cellars, often full of water; yet still managing to dress like the incurable bourgeois they are. Then the Casino itself, filled with about thirty young Quakers, mostly from the North of England, blunt, but immensely virtuous, and working like niggers at building huts, nursing, taking blankets and necessities to the people, and giving them seed for their potagers, (garden plots.)

The roads are everywhere absolutely deserted, except for the innumerable motor cars of the said Quakers, who rush from one village to another as the cases of necessity and want come in.

"We had a frightful journey out, fifteen hours to Paris, and most of the time waiting with a horde of Belgians and Italians, and God knows what, waiting for strings of officials to examine our papers on a four and one-half hours' sea passage. Five hundred passengers and lifeboats for 120, and the knowledge that a submarine could and would blow us up at any moment. It would have been a ghastly scene, and I'm glad we missed them.

"Here the whole countryside is a scene of desolation. 'Please don't let good pacifists talk about the inevitable horrors of war. The destruction here has been highly organized, deliberate and, as far as I can see, entirely wanton, showing no kind of military purpose.

"The Germans become entirely inexplicable to me, except as a case of collective madness. They burned most of these villages the moment they got here, leaving only the houses they wanted for their staff quarters. They pumped petroleum all over the houses and they scattered little squares of celluloid. Then they shot out a flame a yard big and set light to everything. The houses are like this all down the village street—only the chimneys standing, not a foot of the outside wall.

"I've never seen anything like this. It beats all one could imagine—and why? I can't make it out. The old people here who knew 1870 told all the people that all would be well if they stayed; but they were simply driven for days and nights in front of the German troops, old women among them dropping dead after three days without food.

"Now, if the Germans break through, there won't be a soul to receive them, they really have reduced war almost to sheer barbarism. It's no use being indignant with them, but the facts ought to be known, and not glossed over as common warfare.

"I must go now to take seeds around. I'm glad I came. It's better than the misery of London. All they do is to worry there."

DENIES A GERMAN STORY.

No British Warships Damaged by Their Consorts, London Says.

LONDON, May 11.—The British Official Press Bureau today denied a statement dated Berlin, May 9, officially circulated through the German wireless stations and received by the Marconi Company, to the effect that on the night of April 7-8, British warships off the coast of Norway engaged one another in the darkness.

"According to a letter which came into our possession regarding the North Sea fight which is said to have taken place," said the German wireless dispatch, "the British battleship Superb is said to have been sunk and the cruiser Warrior is said to have been sinking without the German navy having suffered any loss. On Friday, the 9th of April, a number of cruisers are said to have arrived in a badly damaged condition. The Lion was very badly damaged. Official reports say nothing of all this.

"Similar reports have come to hand from reliable neutral sources to the effect that a number of badly damaged and slightly damaged ships had reached English ports for repairs. The manner in which they had been damaged has been left unexplained.

"An especially large number of damaged ships ran into the Tyne. A damaged cruiser was towed into the Tyne. A ship of the Lion type with a starboard list and with her aft funnel missing was towed into the Firth of Forth.

"The silence of the Admiralty on all this is easily to be understood. As the German navy took no part in any fighting on the night in question, and as a fight with neutral vessels is out of the question, a battle can only have taken place between ships of the British fleet which did not recognize each other in the darkness."

"The Secretary of the British Admiralty," says the Press Bureau, "states that there is not a word of truth in this fabrication. It is, however, interesting as a mark of the anxiety of Germany at the present moment to make an impression on neutral States."

GRASS-GREEN FOR GERMANS

Ghent Factories Are Turning Out New Summer Uniforms.

THE HAGUE (Via London), May 11.—The German troops will be clothed in orange-green uniforms during the Summer months, according to private information received here from Ghent, where a large factory is said to be working day and night making the new clothing. Field grey will be the color worn again in next Winter's campaign, for which the Germans are making great preparations, according to the stories of people arriving in Holland.

The German War Department, it is asserted, has ordered many kinds of new materials, including medical stores, and intrenching tools sufficient to last until the end of December. The original belief of Berlin, it is asserted was that the campaign would be concluded at the latest in August of this year.

Capt. Watkins Weds Ruth Bliss.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Miss Ruth Bliss, daughter of Mrs. George Bliss of this city, and Captain Lewis Hayes Watkins, U. S. A., were married this afternoon at the residence of the bride's mother on Bancroft Place. Only a family party attended the ceremony at which the Rev. Eugene Mc Donnell, S. J., of St. Aloysius's Church officiated. The only attendants were Miss Ruth Jones and Captain James A. O'Connor, U. S. A. George Bliss, Jr., gave his sister in marriage. Both bridegroom and best man were in full dress uniform. Following a reception to which one hundred or more guests were asked, Captain Watkins and his bride left for Cleveland, Ohio, where the former is on temporary duty. Later they will go to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.

SUNDAY CONVERTS 400 BLUEJACKETS

500 Sailors and Marines from the Fleet in Hudson River Visit the Tabernacle.

F. J. SHEPARD PLANS TRIP

Navy Men Received with Demonstrations of Great Enthusiasm by an Audience of 12,000.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, N. J., May 12.—Billy Sunday turned his twelve-inch guns on the United States Navy tonight and bombarded the boys in blue so hard that out of the 500 who came to Paterson in a special train to hear him, 400 sailors and marines from the great fleet anchored in the Hudson River came up the sawdust trail, and, after shaking hands with Sunday, took their seats on the mourners' benches. The double column of bluejackets and marines marching up the aisle toward the platform was an impressive sight, and when the applause died out Sunday smiled and said:

"Thank you, Lord, and thank you, boys, for making this one of the most memorable sights in the history of our nation."

The sailors, whose visit had been arranged for by Finley J. Shepard, Chairman of the Sailors' Entertainment Committee, arrived at the Erie Station in their special train shortly before 6 o'clock and marched in a body to the restaurant opposite the tabernacle, where they had supper as Sunday's guests. They entered the tabernacle in a body and took ktheir seats about fifteen minutes before the service commenced.

Homer Rhodeheaver, Sunday's choir leader, introduced the representatives of Uncle Sam to the audience, and for five minutes the cheering, whistling and handclapping fairly shook the great gospel shed. Sunday was delighted over the fact that the sailors had come to hear him. He leaped from the platform and ran down the aisle to their section. When he reached the head of the delegation, "bang" went a flashlight, and one of these camera men who are always on the job "shot" him. When Sunday returned to the platform he said:

"That one was only a harmless explosion. No one dares to bombard our boys with a real explosion."

The house went wild again, and the sailors gave Sunday three hearty cheers.

Stating that he was "glad he was near enough to salt water to be able to talk to the sailor boys from Uncle Sam's boats," Sunday told the ushers to pass the boys by when it came time to take the collection. However, as Sunday expressed it, "the boys didn't want the people to think 'em tightwads,' and when the ushers failed to pass the tin pans to them, several started around with their hats and carried their offering into the Treasurer's office.

A verse of "America" was sung, and Rhodeheaver played a medley of "Yankee Doodle," "Dixie," and "The Star-Spangled Banner" on the trombone, while the audience of nearly 12,000 stood and waved handkerchiefs. In answer to "Rodey's" question, fifty sailors raised their hands to show that they had heard the evangelist before.

Sunday worked at top speed and was coatless throughout the meeting. In his closing prayer he spoke of President Wilson, saying:

"Bless the President in these trying times and give him the power to make a wise decision, but—whatever his decision, we'll stand by him and back him up to the last ditch. My country, may she ever be right, but right or wrong—my country."

Another delegation at the night meeting consisted of 2,000 members of the Masonic lodges of Paterson and vicinity.

In addition to the 400 sailors there were 200 civilians who hit the trail, making a total for theday of 600.

Sunday's sermon was on the subject "How shall we escape?" and he said that he was preaching to those who knew they were doing wrong but had not yet started to do right. He said that religion produced happiness, and that without religion men could not secure the happiness of life. He added:

"It doesn't make any difference whether hell-fire is eternal or whether it is a figure of speech used by God to show how awful we will be punished. You don't want to go to hell to find out whether it's eternal or not, do you?

"If you were on a sinking ship, and the last life boat was leaving, you couldn't afford to neglect to avail yourself of it, but there are men in hell tonight simply because they waited too long and didn't have time to accept salvation."

In the afternoon Sunday met a delegation from Minneapolis, Minn., who came to extend him a call to hold a revival in that city. The callers reported that the churches were practically lined up solidly for him. He did not give them a definite promise but said that if minor details could be arranged he would probably come to Minneapolis in April or May, 1917. However, he said that the result of the visit of the Chicago delegation tomorrow morning might have some bearing on the date of his Minneapolis visit.

Collections today amounted to $782.57 and were turned over to the Charity Organization Society.

There was a delegation of 500 members of the Passaic County W. C. T. U. at the afternoon meeting. They sang a number of their favorite temperance songs and appeared to enjoy Sunday's discourse on "Positive vs. Negative Religion." Sunday said to the white ribboners:

"I've already said a few things about booze, but next Sunday I expect to give it the knock-out."

SUNDAY WARNS STUDENTS.

Speaks at Drew Theological Seminary on True Religion.

Special to The New York Times.

MADISON, N. J., May 12.—The students of Drew Theological Seminary had an opportunity this morning to see Billy Sunday in action. Accompanied by "Ma" Sunday and a few friends the evangelist drove over from Paterson and addressed the students in the chapel of the seminary.

They were told there were several kind of ministers, "and you fellows will get in a rut if you preach anything but the true gospel." Ministers these days, said Sunday, are too much for theory, and people have become disgusted with formalism and ritualism.

SWINDLERS LOSE APPEALS.

Sells of Books De Luxe and Oil Stocks Must Serve Sentences.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals confirmed yesterday the sentences passed in the District Court upon James J. Farmer and Colonel William J. Hartley for using the mails to defraud in connection with the books-de-luxe swindle, and they will now have to pass two years in the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta. It also dismissed the appeals of Archie L. Wisner and John J. Meyers, who were sentenced to six years at Atlanta for swindles in connection with the sale of oil and mining stocks. Meyers was also sentenced to pay a fine of $10,000.

Hartley is under custody in Bellevue Hospital, suffering from gout. Farmer surrendered himself yesterday to Marshal McCarthy and was taken to the Tombs, pending his removal to Atlanta.

In the course of the decision in the case of Wisner and Meyers, Judge Lacombe took occasion to reflect upon the length of the trial and the amount of evidence which the Government had piled up.

"It is a most unfortunate practice," he said, "to multiply counts, to marshal a large number of defrauded persons to give testimony as to scores of single offenses to show intent, when, as will be seen from subsequent references to the testimony, guilt in act and in intent is readily provable by documents, about whose issue or signature by the defendants there can be no doubt."

The defendants had brought forward the conduct in court during the trial of Assistant United States District Attorney Arnold as one reason for their appeal, on the ground that he was objectionable in cross-examining one of the defendants. Judge Lacombe had this to say:

"No amount of heat generated by the irritation of a long trial will excuse counsel for phrasing his questions so that each one is an insult, and when this is done counsel should be sharply reproved. Such treatment, instead of prejudicing the defendant's case, is calculated to excite the sympathy of the jury."

Meyers and Wisner, who were on bail, are now in the Tombs.

Things Women Don't Do.

Our attention has been called to the fact that we never saw a baldheaded woman. Well, what of that? There are a good many things we never saw. We never saw a woman sit on a dry goods box and surround herself with a sea of tobacco spit sprayed through her teeth. We never saw one go fishing with a bottle of bait in her hip pocket, sit on the damp ground and go home drunk at night. We never saw a woman yank off her coat, spit on her hands, and swear she could lick the biggest man in town. Come to think of it, there are a good many things we never saw a woman do, and don't want to, either.—Gower (Mo.) Enterprise.

The Climber.

"Are you making much social progress?" asked the intimate friend of a newly rich man.

"Oh, yes," answered the millionaire. "I've been playing the game for a year and I estimate that I am about six feet nearer the inner pale of society and about six miles nearer the poorhouse than I was when I started."—Baltimore Sun.

Scranton's New Idea.

By way of decorating Scranton "exteriorally," Director Hayes of the Public Works Department proposes to stuff all the ashes into abandoned coal mines. This will also, he says, keep the mines from caving in, and thus benefit Scranton "interiorally." We're for Director Ward, hygienically, beautifully, and linguistically.—Syracuse Post-Standard.

Big Improvement.

"Do you believe the world is getting better or worse?"

"Better."

"What reason have you for thinking so?"

"Our baby has cut all his teeth, and it's nearly three weeks now since we've been kept up all night with him."—Judge.

O. F. FLEISCHMANN ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

Son of Man Who Founded the Bread Line Shoots Himself in the Holland House.

HIS BIGGEST DEAL, HE SAYS

Cousin of Ex-Mayor of Cincinnati Gives False Name Before Wounding Himself Mortally.

Within two hours of the time when he had confided to a business associate that he was about to close the biggest deal in his life, Otto F. Fleischmann, President and Director of the Fleischmann Vehicle Company, a $25,000 concern, with an office at 515 East Eightieth Street, went to the Holland House at Thirtieth Street and Fifth Avenue yesterday morning, registered under another name, and attempted suicide. He is now in the prison ward at Bellevue Hospital with a bullet in his body just above the heart. Late in the afternoon, after an X-ray examination, the surgeons said that he owuld probably die.

The wounded man is a son of the late Louis Fleischmann, who conducted the Fleischmann Bakery, and among whose philanthropies was the "bread line" which he established years ago at Eleventh Street and Broadway. Otto F. Fleischmann is 34 years old and unmarried. He lived with his brothers, Charles R. Fleischmann, Director of the Century Holding Company; Raoul H. Fleischmann, President of the Continental Export Company, and his mother and sister at 4 West Seventy-seventh Street. He is a cousin of Julius Fleischmann, a former Mayor of Cincinnati.

Shortly after noon yesterday officials of the Holland House called up Police Headquarters and notified those in charge that a guest had shot himself. About the same time Policeman Squassoni of the West Thirtieth Street Station, on duty near the hotel, was notified. He found Mr. Fleischmann fully dressed, lying on the floor of his room and in great pain. He was bleeding from a wound above his heart and by his side was a pistol. Dr. J. Otto Stack, the hotel physician, was attending the wounded man.

Begs Policeman to Help Him.

"Can't you do something for me?" Mr. Fleischmann cried to the policeman. "I want to end my life. I am tired of it all and I want to end it."

When questioned by Squassoni Mr. Fleischman said that he had shot himself because he had been ill and did not want to live longer.

Mr. Fleischman had registered at the hotel and had been assigned to room 281 under the name of Louis J. Bernhardt of Montreal. He carried with him a suitcase which contained a bathrobe, a box of cartridges, a revolver, and some toilet articles. After arriving at the hotel it is believed that he merely took off his hat, opened the suitcase, took out the revolver, loaded it, and shot himself as soon as he thought the bellboy who escorted him to the room had got well away. No one heard the report of the pistol, so far as the police could ascertain. A woman servant passing the room heard the wounded man groan and notified the office. This note was found on the dresser in the room:

I am very sorry for the trouble I am causing. I have no relatives in this country, only distant relatives in Montreal. You will find about $200 in my pocket. Please use it all, after deducting for the room, to give me a decent burial.

LOUIS J. BERNHARDT.

Mr. Fleischmann was taken to Bellevue Hospital in an ambulance by Dr. Small of the New York Hospital. While waiting for the surgeons to operate, he begged Policeman Squassoni to help him again. He said he was suffering terribly.

"I could help you much better," said Squassoni, "if you would tell me the truth about yourself. I want to send for your relatives."

After protesting for a time that he had no relatives, Mr. Fleischmann cried out: "Good Heavens, can't you help me? I am Otto F. Fleischmann. I live with my brother at 4 West Seventy-seventh Street."

Then he said that his brother Charles could be found at the office of the Century Holding Company, 1,128 Broadway.

Mr. Fleischmann's relatives were notified, and soon several members of his family arrived at Bellevue. It was learned that Otto Fleischmann left his home about 9:30 o'clock and went to the office of the Fleischmann Vehicle Company. He stayed there only a short time. Before he left he turned to Isadore Rothschild, of the office staff, and said that he was going out to close the biggest deal of his life. Mr. Fleischmann had lived for years abroad, and recently when he returned it was said he brought back with him a substantial government contract. Mr. Rothschild said Mr. Fleischmann seemed in good spirits, but acted peculiarly. After his visit to the hospital, Charles R. Fleischmann made this statement:

"In order that no garbled reports may appear in the newspapers I wish to state that Otto F. Fleischmann was up to five years ago connected with the Fleischmann's Vienna Model Bakery, Incorporated, but at that time he retired owing to ill health, and has not not been active in business since. He has been spending the intervening time in Europe, principally England, returning to this country because of present conditions abroad. Mr. Fleischmann lived with his mother, Mrs. Louis Fleischmann, at 4 West Seventy-seventh Street. I can assign no reason for his act, except that his continued ill-health had preyed to such an extent on his nerves as to temporarily affect his mind."

PLANS HIS TYPHUS FIGHT.

Gen. Gorgas Outlines Methods to be Used in Serbia.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Plans for the elimination of typhus fever in Serbia, and its possible permanent disappearance as a menace to the armies of the world, were outlined today by Major Gen. W. C. Gorgas, Surgeon General of the United States Army, who wiped out yellow fever and malaria in Havana and the Panama Canal Zone, in a statement to the Serbian Agricultural Relief Committee of America. General Gorgas is now considering an offer by the Rockefeller Foundation to go to Serbia to take charge of the fight against the plague.

"One of the most necessary moves, if typhus is to be stamped out, is the return of the families now held in the congested districts to their farms," said General Gorgas. "Typhus is a disease of filth, and filth is the product of congestion. Little headway can be made when people have to wear the same clothes for months, and when they are huddled together, infested with vermin. These people must be gotten back to the open country and rehabilitated on their farms before much progress can be made.

"Great care must be taken in sending the Serbian farmers and their families back to their homes, in order that the infection is not carried with them. Each newly infected district becomes a point of radius for the spread of the disease.

"With the people distributed over a larger area, the problem of the physicians and sanitary experts becomes one of extermination of the body louse, which is the carrier of typhus fever. The human body is practically the only habitat of the parasite. If the people are rid of it typhus will disappear. It is no easy matter to clear such a large district as exists in Serbia of these insects. Keeping constantly at it is the only way.

"I am greatly interested in the work of Dr. Harry Plotz, of New York, who has discovered the typhus germ. He is now able to administer his antitoxin in doses that are harmless. It remains for actual experience to show exactly the right dose. When this is learned, I look for typhus to disappear as a menace just as typhoid has done."

Less Diaphanousness.

We don't know whether it's because the styles have changed or because we can't see so well without our glasses as we did, though we hope the former is the correct explanation, but we certainly haven't seen right through as many fashionable young ladies who happened to get between us and the light as we had up to this time last year.—Ohio State Journal.

Why Make It Worse!

"It is my theory," writes an Independence literary critic, "that the world in general feels badly enough without reading Hall Caine's novels."—Kansas City Star.

Ironical.

It always sounds sort of ironical when the home paper announces that the newly married couple will make their home for the present with the bride's parents and hastens to add that their many friends wish them every possible happiness.—Ohio State Journal.

MATTY WINS HIS FIRST GAME OF SEASON—YANKS DOWN CLEVELAND—COLLEGE BASEBALL

GIANTS FIND REDS HARD TO SUBDUE

Mathewson Pitches His First Victory of Season—Scare in Ninth.

Manager McGraw of the Giants sent a war note to the whole National League yesterday which read: "You just keep off my Giants." Yesterday at the Polo Grounds Manager Charley Herzog and his Cincinnati Reds headed by Mr. McGraw's advice and profited by it. Sure, the Giants won 6 to 5.

For some days past it has been the favorite pastime of certain teams to pick on the Giants and lead them along ruthlessly and then beat them. Manager McGraw decided yesterday that this habit should stop. And stop it did. In carrying out his purpose McGraw elected the old master Chris Mathewson to do the trick. It is with great pleasure that it is here recorded that the old master was up to his job. Just like the Matty of old he balked the Reds when they threatened on the bases. But the whole gist of the matter is they couldn't beat him. It was Matty's first victory of the year.

Let the enemy threaten and let them try to discourage the Giant's best efforts, but after all what does it matter if Big Six is in there and he is right? They almost tipped him over, those Reds did in the ninth yesterday, but never mind, the old boy was in there pitching to the end and did not falter. As you understand it the Big Train can still pitch regardless of the pessimistic predictions of the I-Know-It-All.

Regardless of the ancient ability of old Tommy Leach, regardless of the old-time strategy of ex-Manager Charley Dooin, regardless of the advice of the crippled Manager Charley Herzog, the Giants won; yes and won nobly.

Outside of the many sailors there, few people were present to McGraw's clan duck back into the win column. Those who were there, however, looked on in admiration and gave a shout of joy to the "under dog" as he bobbed up and came into his own. Next to a winner New York fans like a loser who can forget it and come back strong. The Giants did that yesterday.

The Giants seemed like themselves in the first inning when with two down Lobert doubled and went to third when Fletcher was safe on Groh's error. Then the Giants caught Cincinnati asleep and Lobert scored on a double steal. It reminded old times of bygone days. In the second inning, the Giants got another tally. Brainerd doubled to left and scored when reliable George Burns, you know Burnsie, singled and sent the runner home.

In the third inning Cincinnati made a bold bid for the game. With two out Gene Dale the young Red pitcher made a hit. So did Wee Tom Leach. Who came up but Heinie Groh and slammed a hom run to the exit in right field, which accounted for three runs.

In the sixth, the Giants tied the score. Fletcher singled, went around on a couple of outs and counted when our old friend Jack Murray of 10th Street banged out a single and sent Fletcher home. Then in the seventh, the Giants acted natural again. "Burnsie" made a three-bagger and Larry Doye walked. Lobert singled, scoring Burns and Fletcher singled, scoring Larry. Fair enough. On Brainerd's out at first, Lobert romped home.

That was enough for New Yor, despite the fact that the Reds got fussy in the ninth. In that session, Joe Wagner singled, and Olson and Wingo "died" without a struggle. Right then, Tom Clarke of Corona, L. I., engineered a single and scored Wagner. Von Kolnitz, batting for Young Gene Dale, smashed out a single and scored Clarke. Too late. The score:

Harry Lord to be Club Owner.

CHICAGO, May 12.—Harry Lord, third baseman, who unceremoniously quit the White Sox over night last August, plans to buy a half interest in the Portland (Me.) team and to join Hugh Duffy in its management. Lord interviewed President Comiskey of the White Sox today, and the latter promised that Lord should have his unconditional release as soon as his deal with Duffy was consummated.

YANKEES IN THE BRONX.

Some Men Were Seen Digging Up There, Hence the Report.

Those on the inside of American League affairs, and many not members of the inner circle, have been interested in the report that the Yankees will locate in the Bronx after their stay at the Polo Grounds comes to an end, probably next year. According to rumor, the Ruppert-Huston organization will make its next home on some Astor property which extends for almost half a mile along Westchester Avenue, from Clason Point Road. For six months workmen have been filling in this property, and according to one of the directors of the work it will take another year before the grounds will be suitable for building purposes. It was stated by Ban Johnson the other day that the Yankees have another year to play at the Brush Stadium.

One of the formen of the Astor job stated yesterday that it had been intimated to him that the grounds were being prepared for the erection of a baseball stadium, but he also heard that the property would be turned into building lots. One street has already been cut across the big plot, and he said he believed another was contemplated. If this thoroughfare is cut across the ground a baseball field will be out of the question, for there would be only about 300 feet between the two streets.

Westchester is quite some distance from the heart of New York City, and for that reason some baseball men think it inadvisable for the Yankees to go up that far, but the transportation facilities are excellent. The park would be only ten minutes from the Simpson Street subway station by street car line, and about a year after the plant would be completed there would be a subway line (elevated at this point) running past the entrance. This line is now in course of construction. Then there is the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, which also passes within ten minutes' ride of the grounds.

When the leveling of the property is completed it will be an ideal site for a baseball park.

YANKS GET LATE START, BUT WIN

Four Runs in Seventh Enough to Defeat Cleveland—Triple Play.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 12.—A triple play, a three-base hit by native son Peckinpaugh and a two-base heave at what someone calls the psychological moment, were features of the second games of the Yankees' series here, which was won by New York, 4 to 2.

By the perversity of the fate, the man who engineered the triple play was the same who helped to toss victory into the discard—Roy Wood. It was his wild throw on an easy chance in the seventh that started New York toward victory. It was he who made a triple play possible and halted another rally of the Yanks. Likewise, Wood had a chance to win fame for a few days in the ninth when with two men on bases he got the opportunity to "hit 'er out," but he failed.

For six innings Walker, a recruit pitcher, kept the scoreboard boy busy hanging up ciphers. The Indians had two runs and they looked pretty big. Then came the seventh inning, bringing with it an abundance of trouble for Walker and heaps of joy for Wild Bill, whose smile refused to fade despite reverses.

Nunamaker singled. Warhop fanned and Maisel sent a puny roller toward second. Wood retrieved the ball while Walker ran to cover first. Then Wood threw it ten feet over Walker's head and the ball halted at the grandstand. This put runners on third and second bases, but they did not stay long, for at this point Peck inserted his mighty swat along the third-base line that netted three bases. He scored a minute later when Walke runcorked a wild pitch. Then High drew a pass and was sent home on Pipp's out and Cook's single. Hartzell walked, but Boone kindly ended the long inning with a fly to Turner.

The Yanks got a good start in the eighth only to be halted by a triple play. Nunamaker got his third single, and when Harhop hit to Walker someone on the New York bench yelled: "Throw to second." Walker did, and, of course, both runners were safe. Then Boone hit the ball a mighty smash and it sailed toward right field. But Wood leaped up and made the catch. He only had to step on first and throw to second and the side was out. Mitchell pitched the final round for Cleveland and got away safely, though he was rather wild.

The Indians drew first blood in the second inning through good base running by Graney. With one man out Mickey doubled and started for third on the hit-and-run signal. Wood delivered with a single and Graney scored. The other run for the Indians was also due to daring work on the bases. Turner doubled to start the fourth and was sacrificed to third. When Jackson dropped the ball between the pitcher and third base Turner started for home. He beat Maisel's throw by a hair, making a successful headfirst dive. Smith batted for Walker in the eighth, but filed out. In the ninth with one out Chapman and Jackson singled, but neither Graney nor Wood could solve Warhop's underhand curves and proved easy outs. The score:

Gainer Humbles His Old Mates.

DETROIT, May 12.—A rally in the fifth inning, which Gainer, a former Tiger, led with a home run, gave Boston a 4 to 1 victory over Detroit here today. Gainer's drive over the left field wall tied the score. Two singles and two errors followed, giving Boston two more tallies. Shore was effective with men on bases. Manager Jennings in the fourth inning protested that Shore was pitching the "emery ball," but the umpires declared he was not. Score:

YALE HALTED QUICKLY.

Dartmouth, Hitless Until Eighth, Then Turns In and Beats Elis.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 12.—Dartmouth's eighth and ninth inning rallies pulled that team from the short end of a 3 to 0 score to a victorious 5 to 4 finish. Pumpelly had no speed left when the eighth began and should have been relieved. He had pitched hitless baseball up to this inning. Then three singles and Hunter's missed throw at the plate allowed two tallies to score. Bush muffed Legore's throw in the ninth. Thielscher was hit and Pumpelly allowed the ball to roll away in tagging Paine, Murphy scoring. Way was here substituted, but Wanamaker, who started the hitting in the eighth, pounded two tallies home with a single, winning the game.

Yale bravely rallied in the ninth, Rhett pounding a triple to centre, Castles, batting for Easton, scoring Rhett with a double. Bush was passed and Hunter hit what would have been a single, tieing the score, but Harry Middlebrook, running for Castles, collided with the ball and dashed Yale's hopes.

Dartmouth's fielding was errorless. Yale's fielding game was the raggedest of the season, although Legore and Lou Middlebrook started brilliant double plays. Yale pounded Parrott for earned runs in the third and sixth innings. Easton's long running catch of Perkins's hit in the third was spectacular. Rain fell during the last two innings. The score:

Another Victory for West Point.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., May 12.—Sarcka, the Army's southpaw "plebe" pitcher, stood off Holy Cross in fine style today, and although a bit unsteady at times, the Army's youngster got through with a victory at 5 to 2. It is Sarcka's fourth straight victory and the cadets' thirteenth win in a row. McCarthy was pounded hard by the Army hitters and the cadets' scoring total would have been greater except for some wild base running. Carroll's home run in the second gave Holy Cross a momentary lead. The visitors scored again in the fourth on two passes, a steal, and a drawn throw. Oliphant and Bradley hit safely in the cadets' half of the second and Prichard's double scored both. Hobbs scored in the third on Oliphant's hit over second. Bradley's home run to the score board scored Oliphant from second in the eighth. The visitors fielded loosely throughout. The score:

Tigers Routed in Seventh.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 12.—Princeton's defence collapsed in the seventh inning of today's game with Williams, and the visitors won by a score of 10 to 3. Up to that time Link had been able to check his opponents, Princeton leading by a score of 3 to 2. With the bases full, Swain laced a line drive to centre field which Driggs misjudged, and three runners scored. There were two out when Swain's hit came, but before Link could settle down Williams had scored two more runs. The visitors got a total of eight hits in this inning.

The Tigers suffered another relapse in the eighth when errors, combined with hard batting, brought in three additional Williams runs. Swain's timely hitting was the feature of the play, the Williams third baseman driving in six of his team's runs. The score:

FORDHAM BEATS OLD RIVAL NOTRE DAME

Playing in a steady light rain the Fordham baseball team came from behind in the ninth inning yesterday and in a sensational finish nosed out the Notre Dame team by a score of 6 to 5. Incidentally the Maroon collegians spoiled a record, Notre Dame having won fourteen games in a row. Up until yesterday the Indian collegians had won every game played at Fordham in the last ten years. While Walsh got his strikeouts working at times, the Bronx collegians bunched their hits which included two home run wallops. Martin had the visitors popping up, the fast work of McGovern holding down the score.

Notre Dame started the scoring in the third. Martin passed Ellwood while Carroll dropped a drive by Cochran. Bergman sacrificed Ellwood to third and Dugan's hit started a noutburst of wild throwing by the Maroon's that ended when all three runners had scored.

Fordham evened it up in the next frame. Carroll started with a home run hit to centre. Keeinan and Berrigan hit safely, both scoring on Ellwood's error. Notre Dame apparently cinched the game in the sixth when an error, two hits and a steal brought in two more runs, but Fordham came back strong in the ninth. Berrigan singled and reached second on Martin's sacrifice. McGovern then came through with another homeer. The winning run came when Ellwood's error put Sharkey on third. Kiernan then smashed one to shortstop and reached first safely after the eror by Bergman, Sharkey scoring the run that beat the Indian team. The score:

Villanova Beats Manhattan, 3 to 2.

In a game that was played in the driving rain at Van Nest Oval yesterday, Villanova beat Manhattan College, 3 to 2. It was a very evenly matched and hard fought game. Villanova scored all its runs in the first inning on a home run, a two-bagger, and a misjudged line drive. After that O'Connor pitched air-tight ball, striking out ten of the Philadelphians and holding them to two hits for the remainder of the game. Manhattan scored in the second on a three-bagger by Downing and a wild pitch and again in the seventh on a two-bagger by Barry, a wild pitch, and an infield hit by Houlihan. Sheehan also pitched a nice game, being especially good in the pinches. The score:

WINTER LEAGUE DINES.

Cup Presented to Racquet and Tennis Club, Winners of Pennant.

Members of the Interclub Baseball League officially laid aside their gloves, bats, and baseballs until next season last night at the annual dinner of the organization held at the Hotel Brevoort.

After the banquet the silver cup, representing the league championship, was presented to George L. Wrenn, Captain of the Racquet and Tennis Club team, the winner of the title for the Winter of 1914-15. Arthur Branwell, the official umpire, who has held that position throughout the season, in spite of the systematic nagging from losing teams, was also presented with a trophy.

E. Pierrepont Hicks of the Calumet Club, Chairman of the league, presided at the dinner. All the six clubs were represented by nearly fifty persons.

Several startling features had been arranged for the entertainment of the diners. But the moving pictures were most enthusiastically received, as they were a reproduction of some of the games played during the Winter. Nearly all the players were recognized, and they were roundly applauded if the particular play upon the screen was remembered.

The dinner was informal and no speeches were allowed which lasted longer than it would take J. H. Mellick to run from the home plate to first base. In accepting the cup presented to him, the umpire, after thanking the league, also said he was glad to be there and alive, as frequently during the season his life had been threatened, but having come through the Winter without being assaulted and abused more than the average indicator holder he was doubly thankful.

The six clubs in the league are: Racquet and Tennis, Calumet, Knickerbocker, Union, University, and the Twelfth Infantry officers.

In the afternoon the final game of the season was played upon the grounds at Fifth Avenue and Seventy-second Street. The idea of the contest was to commemorate the inception of the league, which was started in 1913. As near as possible the two teams representing the Racquet and Tennis and the Calumet Clubs were the same as played against each other in the opening game two years ago, when the grounds were in East Thirty-first Street.

The game was full of features and replete with startling plays. It ended in favor of the Racquet and Tennis Club by the score of 8 to 5.

The winners opened up on Hicks from the start and when the smoke had cleared away had two runs to their credit in the first inning. The Calumets obtained one in their half of the innings. After this both pitchers tightened up and there was no further scoring until the third inning, when the winners added one more to their total.

But the real fireworks came in the fourth, when the Racquet and Tennis players developed a sensational batting streak and the Calumet fielders went all to pieces. Hicks took a balloon ascension and his support left much to be desired. In fact at this period the game almost ended in a "riot." J. L. Lowell and C. R. Schultz were accused of "thowin' de game" by their teammates; and nothing short of lynching would have followed had it not been for the presence of Judge Corrigan, who played first base.

His Honor decided in favor of the defendants, and the four runs were put on the official score. Later in the game both Schultz and Lowell were reinstated in good standing, through their wonderful baserunning. J. H. Mellick played a fine game at third—when he was there. Occasionally he got lost.

Only seven innings were played. The Calumets wound up in a blaze of glory, as they scored three runs at their last time at bat. Every one on the team contributed hits. The line-up follows:

Calumet—A. M. Aten, c.; E. P. Hicks, p.; J. E. Corrigan, 1b.; E. R. Schultz, 2b.; W. A. Greer, ss.; J. H. Nellick, 3b.

HARVARD PULLS OUT VICTOR

Football Men on Nine Defeat Pennsylvania in Long Game 6 to 5.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 12.—Harvard and University of Pennsylvania played an in-and-out game of baseball on Soldiers' Field today, the teams going for two and a half hours, but the Crimson finally winning 6 to 5. The Quakers got away with a two-run lead against Whitney, but Harvard tied the score in the third and got a lead of two runs for itself in the fifth. Meanwhile Frye had replaced Whitney in the box, and Penn tied the score in the seventh. Harvard then went ahead a point in the eighth, only to have Armstrong of Penn hit a home run off Eddie Mahan in the ninth, again tieing the score. In Harvard's last inning, however, the football players got going, and the game was brought to a sudden close when Charley Brickley opened with a two-bagger after Abbott's sacrifice, and danced home with the winning run when Ned Mahan drove a clean hit to right field. The score:

WORCESTER RECORD BROKEN

Academy Boys Lose to Harvard Freshmen, First Time in Two Years.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 12. — A record of thirty-nine games without defeat, including two full seasons, was broken today, when the Worcester Academy baseball team lost to the Harvard Freshmen, 2 to 0. It was the Harvard entering class team of 1912 which last won from the Academy nine. Haas, the Worcester pitcher, struck out sixteen men today, but his work was undone when Boyden cracked out a home run with a man on base. Hitchcock allowed Worcester only two hits.

N. Y. U. and C. C. N. Y. in Game.

New York University will resume home baseball again today when the Violet team plays the City College nine in the annual game on Ohio Field. Last year the game went to the Violet, and with the improvement in the team as evidenced by the victory over Wesleyan at Middletown on Tuesday the University Heights men hope to repeat. Hagbloom will probably do the twirling for New York University.

Columbia Oarsmen Resting.

Coach Rice's oarsmen have rested since the Child's Cup race, and will probably continue it until the United States fleet moves away. The Columbia men rowed in good form after their little mishap of fouling a course flag, and Rice is not at all discouraged. He will spend the time now while the course is interferred with by the fleet in working with the junior eight and the freshmen. Training has been let down to the extent that the men sleep at home instead of in Furnald quarters, but they still are at the training table. Naumer, who rowed No. 2 last year, and is now unable to practice because of his work at the Physicians and Surgeons College, will join the crew as soon as his examinations are finished. He has been keeping in training by practice spins on the river in a double shell, and will have little trouble in fitting into the present squad. His experience will add greatly to the efficiency of the blades.

DODGERS VANQUISH BRESNAHAN'S CUBS

Visitors' Errors Prove Costly and Robins Have No Difficulty in Winning.

The Dodgers go great in the mud. If a kind Providence would send rain every day to Ebbets Field the Robins might win a championship. What matters it if the "umps" Rigler and Hart did spoil their best uniforms and that the fans who braved the inclement weather were so dampened in spirit that they couldn't get by with a cheer, even when Brooklyn was winning, Robbie is perfectly satisfied for the boys across the bridge took a sweet revenge on the savage Cubs, dosed them with some of their own medicine, and won by a score of 11 to 5.

And the Cubs—well they were about as cheerful as ghosts. They presented the game to the Dodgers in the second inning in the hope that Rigler or Hart might take pity and end it after four and a half innings. The umpires, however, were not benevolently inclined, and nine innings went by in a teeming rain storm. Errors were as glaring as candles on a Christmas tree, but the Dodgers let the Cubs do all of the shining in this respect.

The Brooklyn players started right out in the first inning to show that they liked the day. O'Mara drew a pass and scored when Cheney interfered with Williams throw to the plate, after Stengel had singled to centre. Stengel took second on the play and went to third when the ball got past Archer. A sacrifice fly by Wheat brought in the other run. In the next inning, errors by Cheney, Good and Fisher, and four hits by Schultz, McCarty, Pfeffer, and Wheat accounted for five Brooklyn runs. The Cubs were completely in the air, the wet ball bothering them a lot and several of the errors, all of which were costly, would probably never have been made under good weather conditions. In the fifth Myers doubled and went to third on a hit by Getz to right. Archer's wild throw let Myers come home.

Two runs were scored in the seventh as a result of two passes, a sacrifice, and singles by Stengel and Cutshaw, O'Mara and Stengel crossing the plate. In the eighth Wheat made a three-base hit and scored on Myers's single past Fisher.

The Cubs scored in the second after a double and two infield outs, and in the next on a double by Fisher, an error and a single by Saier. Fisher again scored in the fifth, and in the ninth Schulte drove the ball over the right field fence for a homer. Saier doubled and scored on Williams's single to right. The score:

Chevrolet's Wonderful Little Car.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 1.—Louis Chevrolet, America's greatest racing sensation, has arrived on the scene of the next Indianapolis 500-mile race with the queerest looking car, a Cornelian.

Hardly larger than a baby carriage, it weighs only 1,000 pounds, and carries a motor of only 103 cubic inches piston displactment, smaller than the smallest Ford. The car has practically no unsprung weight, even the differential being mounted on the chassis, and the drive taken through a series of universal joints. The machine is also minus a frame, the weight simply being carried by the body, which is a single sheet-steel shell. Its speed is estimated at 100 miles an hour.

What Chevrolet will do with this car in competition is the question of the racing world today. Being able to go through the 500-mile grind without a stop for gasoline, oil, or tires, it should rank with the largest cars in the field as favorable.

NEW STUDENT MEMBERS.

Watt, Benson, and Franklin on Columbia Undergraduate Committee.

The three new student members of the Columbia Undergraduate Committee on Athletics were announced last night at the second annual open meeting of the association in Gemot Hall. They are R. W. Watt, '16; R. Benson, '16 S, and R. D. Franklin, '16. They will serve for one year with the other seven members, three of whom are members of the faculty and three alumni. C. H. faculty members are Dr. George Meylan, Frank A. Dickey, and Frank Fackenthal. With Mr. Mapes, Arthur Alexander rand William Simms serve for the alumni.

Only about twenty members appeared, largely due to the rain and the fact that examinations begin almost immediately. Although this annual meeting was inaugurated last year because of many objections to the way in which the affairs of the association were run and because of general agitation for a change, there was little objection raised last night. There was a general discussion of the year in athletic circles.

Graduate Manager Fisher reported that the $1,200 deficit of last year's crew had been largely paid off through campus and alumni subscriptions. Football came in for discussion, and it was generally agreed by Mr. Fisher, Dr. Meylan, and Chairman Mapes that the addition of football games to the year's attractions next year would serve to increase interest in athletics and care for deficits which might arise in other sports.

Daly Defeats Poggenburg.

Maurice Daly defeated J. Fred Pogenburg at 18.2 balkline billiards last night at his billiard academy, Forty-ninth Street and Broadway, by the score of 200 to 161. Daly's best individual efforts were 45 and 34, and his average 15 5-13. The former amateur champion made the high run of the evening, 72, but only averaged 13 2-13. Daly will play William Gershell tonight.

FOREIGN CYCLISTS ARRIVE.

Seres, Moretti, and Ellegaard to Ride at Sheepshead Bay.

Arriving a day late the French liner Rochambeau docked yesterday after a perilous trip from Bordeaux, having on board the first arrivals from the war zone of the bicycle riders who are to perform at the Sheepshead Bay Velodrome, which will open May 22. George Seres of France, Caesar Moretti of Italy and Thorwald Ellegaard of Denmark made up the party of riders.

Seres, who speaks seven languages, including English, was spokesman for the party, and said that when they learned of the Lusitania disaster after being a few days out from the French coast there was consternation among the passengers, fearing that the Rochambeau might meet with the same fate.

"I am surprised to see so much about the war printed in the papers papers print very little war news, and nothing about the big battles that take place along the fighting fronts. They keep the people in ignorance of what is going on to suppress the excitement. We had a mif scare the first day out, when one of the passengers sighted a submarine with a strong glass, but the captain water we were in were fully protected, and that it was an English submarine we saw on scouting duty."

The riders encountered considerable trouble in getting their heels and tires aboard the Rochambeau on account of the strict requisition laws. M. Nazo, the leading pacemaker of Europe, refused to sail with the party owing to the illness of his wife, but will take the next boat.

Vermont Wins Track Meet.

BURLINGTON, Vt., May 12.—The University of Vermont won in the track meet with Middlebury College, 69 to 57, today.

NOTES FOR THE ATHLETES.

Howard Berry, the University of Pennsylvania freshman who won the all around competition at the Penn relay carnival two weeks ago, will not compete in the pentathlon at the Thomas J. Lynch Association games to be held Sunday afternoon at Celtic Park. Berry promised to take part in the meet, but received notification from the Penn athletic authorities that it is against the rules for a university man to compete on Sunday. There will be no lack of interest in the event, however, for seventeen men are entered. Among them is Pat O'Connor of the Pastime Athletic Club, who has been training for two months for the decathlion championship at the Panama-Pacific Exposition. The 200-yard handicap will mark the first outdoor appearance of Alvah Ceyer, the Metropolitan sprint champion. Jack Eller will accept three yards' start from Meyer in this race. Lawson Robertson's "whales," McDonald, Ryan, and McGrath, will show their wares in the 35-pound weight throw.

Abel Kiviat, the national mile champion of the Irish-American A. C., will start outdoor work next week. As this may be his last season in competition the young miler plans to make it his best, and he will take a crack There should be a number of fine races between Kiviat and Mike Devanney of the Millrose A. A., the sensation of the board floor season.

All registered tyros are invited to compete in the "Greenwich Village Modified Marathon" for novices, which will be contested on the morning of May 31. Silver cups will be awarded the first five men, and a special team prize will be presented to the winning club. Entry blanks can be obtained from Arthur Johnson & Co., 45 John Street, and L. J. Madden, 434 Hudson Street.

Jim Duncan, who holds the world's record for throwing the discus from a seven-foot circle, is again in training, and expects this year to eclipse his best throw of 145 feet 9¼ inches. He will attempt a new record at the Lynch Association games at Celtic Park on Sunday. Duncan some time ago left the Bradhurst Field Club, and his next colors will undoubtedly be those of the Irish-American A. C.

JUDGE HOUGH RULES AGAINST FIGHT FILM

Ridicules Law That Prevents Pictures of Bouts and Permits Fights.

Judge Hough refused yesterday in the Federal District Court to permit the admission into this country of the film pictures of the boxing contest in London in which Freddie Welsh won the lightweight championship from Willie Ritchie. In doing so, however, he intimated that it was ridiculous to prevent the mere pictures of a contest that was absolutely legal in many of the States being transported in interstate commerce, and expressed the opinion that the courts had not done themselves much credit by the decisions they had rendered concerning boxing contests.

The court itself entered into a discussion of what a prizefight was, and in the course of its opinion, said:

"Less than 200 years ago most persons would have understood 'prizefighter' to be one who fought with a sword for a prize or wager, and James Figg was well known as a fencer or broadswordsman before he became by use of his fists the first champion of England (Encyclopedia Britannica.) Nor did the earlier use of the word soon pass. As mentioned in some of the dictionaries it was used by Smollett as meaning one skilled with the sword as late as 1784, and seventy years later it appeared as dialect in 'Tom Brown's Schooldays at Rugby.'

"This piece of history sufficiently shows how the meaning of even so narrow a word as 'prizefight' may change. In Murray's New English Dictionary it is now defined as 'a public contest between prizefighters; a boxing match for money,' and a 'prizefighter' is defined as 'a professional pugilist or boxer, who fights publicly for a prize or stake.'

"These considerations led Judge Hough to rule that although Frank S. O'Neil had contended that the Welsh-Ritchie fight was merely a boxing match, it was impossible to hold that the use of another name had changed the substance of the fight.

"Both Ritchie and Welsh," said the Judge "were professionals. If the modern dictionary definitions be accepted, it is impossible for me to say what they did was not a modern prize fight, even though it may be admitted that the wearing of gloves and the limiting of the number of rounds would have prevented its acceptance as a prize fight fifty years ago.

"It is, therefore, concluded that according to the modern acceptance of the phrase the Ritchie-Welsh affair was a prize fight, and it was beyond question an encounter of pugilists."

So, although the court held that the United States law was so peculiar that in one sense a pugilistic encounter might take place under the conditions that the statute outlined between men who had never fought with fists before, it could not see its way clear to admit the films of the London fight, since it came within the technical scope of the Sims law. Speaking of this law, Judge Hough said:

"It is undoubtedly a somewhat ridiculous result that a thing lawful in many, if not most, of the States cannot be pictorially represented in any State of the Union, if such pictorial representation requires interstate or foreign transportation. This, however, is a matter for Congress and not at all for the courts."

To this the Judge added that the few court decisions on the matter of prize fights in this country had been productive of so many diverse definitions, that it was evident that careful legislation on the subject was necessary. The decisions, he declared, were not at all creditable, and should have informed Congress of what was likely to happen to any statute dealing with prizefighting, unless legislative rather than judicial definitions were trusted.

NEW YORK BOXERS ACCUSED

SAN FRANCISCO, May 12.—Arthur Kaufman of Brooklyn, national amateur champion middleweight boxer, and Matty Herbert and Arthur Nack of New York City suspended from their amateur standing today by George James, local representative of the Amateur Athletic Union Registration Committee. James has begun an investigation of an alleged demand for money for the men's appearance at an exhibition here.

A letter was received by the Olympic Club trainer here, signed "New York Champs," asking for $100 for expenses, $35 for Herbert and $35 to the winner and $10 to the loser for appearance of the men at a club event.

BOXING IN CUBA LEGAL.

Supreme Court at Havana Decides Status of Sport on Island.

HAVANA, May 12.—That the holding of prize fights in Cuba is legal was decided today by the Supreme Court. The court rendered this decision in dismissing a test complaint against Governor Bustillo of Havana Province, charging that he was guilty of an infraction of the law by personally attending the recent fight between Jess Willard and Jack Johnson.

Coffey to Box at Brighton Beach.

Jim Coffey, the Roscommon Giant, who recently defeated Al Reich, has been signed to box on Decoration Day in the arena of the Brighton Beach Sporting Club at the Brighton Beach race track. Under the articles of agreement Coffey agrees to box any heavyweight selected by the club management not later than noon oMnday.

NOTES FOR THE BOXERS.

Joe Welling, the Western lightweight, who is matched to box Johnny Marto at the St. Nicholas Rink tomorrow evening, will have a real test of his punching ability when he steps into the ring. Welling will have to have a very powerful punch in either hand to drop the east side lightweight. One of the other ten-round bouts will bring together Tommy Gavigan, the Cleveland middleweight, and Sailor Robinson, middleweight champion of the United States Navy.

The card arranged by Matchmaker McArdle of the Fairmont A. C. for Saturday evening consists of three ten-round bouts. Dick Peaters will engage Gene Moriarty of Syracuse; Marty Cross, brother of Leach Cross, will tackle Jack Curley, and Denny McFadden will face Banty Sharp.

Manager Fordon of the 135th Street A. C. has scheduled the following ten-round bouts for tomorrow night. Irvin Margolies, the amateur champion, and Billy Meyers, Jack White and Wee Barton, and Eddie Sherman and Willie Andrews.

Saturday night will be Navy night at the Irving A. C., with two ten-round bouts between the best men in the heavyweight and middleweight division of the visiting fleet. In the main bout Jack Keating of the U. S. S. Alabama, who is the holder of the heavyweight championship belt of the navy, will box Sam Taylor, holder of the Atlantic Fleet belt. These men have engaged twice in bouts, and each holds a win. In the other ten Jack Smith of the U. S. S. Arkansas and holder of the middleweight championship belt, will face a tough proposition in Jack Rock of the U. S. S. Michigan, and contender for the belt.

The New Polo A. A. of Tarlem will stage four star ten-round bouts tomorrow night. In the first ten-rounder Young Sullivan of the west side, and Andy Caddell of the east side will clash. In the second Buddy Ryan of the Bronx will face Sailor George Volk of the United States Navy, and in the third ten-rounder Paul Rack of New Jersey will exchange punches with Johnny Lewis of the east side. In the final ten-round bout Jimmie Allen of Westchester and Frankie Adams of the east side will be the principals.

Young Brown, who recently returned from a successful trip in Canada, has been matched to box Frankie Callahan at the Broadway Sporting Club of Brooklyn on May 29. Brown and Callahan have agreed to weigh 135 pounds ringside. The match between these two lightweights has been hanging fire for two months, and after wrangling all day Jean Wiseamantle signed both boxers for his club.

BELMONT HORSE WINS.

Danger Rock Shows Speed in Taking Newmarket Stakes.

LONDON, May 12.—August Belmont's American-bred 3-year-old Danger Rock was the winner of the Newmarket Stakes of a mile and a quarter this afternoon from a field of six other starters. It was a very clever victory over Letfly, considered up to this time the best horse in England, and the victory will make him a very eligible candidate for the Derby and the St. Leger, for which he is being pointed by Watson, who trains the Belmont string. Danger Rock is a son of Rock Sand and Delusion, and was bred at Mr. Belmont's nursery stud in Kentucky.

Danger Rock is a brother to Defendum, a 4-year-old now, and a colt that was particularly well thought of as a 2-year-old by Mr. Belmont, although it failed to train up to expectations. This year another of the same breeding will bear the silks of the Chairman of The Jockey Club in Delancey, a good-looking bay colt that Heldreth is fitting at Belmont Park.

Delusion, the dam of Danger Rock, Defendum, and Delancey, is a daughter of Meddler and Faithful, and was bred by the late William C. Whitney, being only thirteen years old now. She traces on the dam's side to the stock of the elder Belmont, and is bred along the same lines as Lady Violet, one of the most successful of the matrons at the Nursery Stud. Faithful was a daughter of Longfellow and Miss Primrose, a daughter of The Ill Used. Through Longfellow she is close kin to the best racing families in America, and it would be hard to find more desirable blood lines on both sides of the Atlantic than Rock Sand and Delusion.

WHITNEY 2-YEAR-OLDS FAST

Five Races Won by Broomstick Youngsters This Season.

Racing in the East has been madked by the wonderful success of the two-year-olds owned by Harry Payne Whitney, the majority of which were sired by Broomstick. This high-class stallion has headed the list of winning sires fo rthe last two seasons, and the start he has made this year indicates that he will enjoy that honor again in 1915. Of the more important two-year-old events run in Maryland, five of them have been won by the Whitney youngsters, all of which were the get of Broomstick.

It is said that the best are still in reserve, and the stable should play a very important part during the racing year in the big stakes for juveniles which will be run on the metropolitan tracks.

Among some of the best which have already been shown are Regina, a daughter of Broomstick and Queen of Hearts, which won the Lassie Stakes at Havre de Grace. In this event the winner ran a half a mile in 47 4-5 to beat Celandria. This time equals the track record established by George Smith earlier in the meeting.

Bromvale and Vermont are two others from the Whitney stable which are particularly promising. Broomvale, as the name suggests, is a son of Broomstick and Greenvale, while Vermont is by Broomstick out of Yankee Girl. Broomvale won its start in the same race and Vermont was third. The latter showed a wonderful turn of speed, and undoubtedly will be heard of when racing starts at Belmont Park. Two or three of these youngsters have been entered in selling races and disposed of by Trainer Simons, but they have all done well under their new owners.

The recent signing of the contract for the services of James Grath, a clever young rider from the West, has given the Whitney establishment a good lightweight jockey. So far he has had a deal of success during the Maryland meetings, and it is more than probable James Rowe will take him for his division of the stable when the racing starts around the metropolitan circuit.

The steeplechases which have been run in Maryland so far ths season have not as yet uncovered anything startling in this picturesque branch of the spoet. The races have been mostly for young jumpers that are showing steady improvement as the season advances. The most conspicuous has probably been M. Daly's Garter. This gelding has the makings of a first-class jumped. Garter's time in the events in which it has run has been fast and the horse is very sure-footed.

THREE LEHIGH RECORDS.

South Bethlehem Athletes Defeat Stevens Tech in Dual Meet.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTH BEHTLEHEM, Penn., May 12.—Three Lehigh track records fell during the meet with Steven's Institute this afternoon which Lehigh won by a score of 73 points to 39.

These new records were made by Morrisey in the 220-dash, by McGrath in the two-mile run and by Grumbach in the shot-put. The meet was run off during a slight rain.

Lehigh took nine firsts and three seconds. Grumbach and Good were high point scorers for Lehigh and Hoinkes for Stevens Institute. The events were closely contested despite the one-sided score.

REFEREE STOPS RINK BOUT IN EIGHTH

Billy Roche Sends Chip and Clabby Out of Ring for Continued Stalling.

Referee Billy Roche won the boxing argument at St. Nicholas Rink last night between Jimmy Clabby of Indiana and George Chip of Newcastle, Penn. In the eighth round of the bout Mr. Roche became so exasperated because the aforesaid Chip and Clabby would not fight as if they meant it that he stopped the bout and sent all the men folks home. Also the few women folks who were there.

Mr. Roche, being right in thering with the boxers, had a better opportunity of detecting whether they were boxing then any one who occupied expensive seats. Both Chip and Clabby at times left themselves wide open, and at these moments neither seemed ambitious enough to take advantage of the opportunities, so Referee Roche naturally got the impression that the boys were stalling. Evidently Referee Roche was right. Of the three men in the ring Billy Roche was the best.

Of course Mr. Chip and Mr. Clabby put up a huge protest when Roche stopped their bout. Both acted as if they might be posing for the movies. They both went on record that they had been scrapping for all they were worth, but as it happened, they were both wrong.

M. Clabby of Hammond, Ind., with his curly hair, his lithe, sinewy body, looks for all the world as Kid McCoy did when he was in his prime. There is no getting away from it, Clabby is a clever young man with his fists. The trouble was that last night he was too clever. When George Chip, who's only asset in the boxing game is his punch, pretended to slam Clabby on the open jaw with his right in full flight, and Clabby only smiled, Referee Roche and everybody in the crowd got wise.

It is seldom that anybody gets hit full flush on the jaw and retaliates with a smile. In last night's bout there were too many smiles and too few punches. It didn't take a detective to see that it was all wrong.

Clabby started out in the first few rounds like a master. He worked so fast and so neatly that it would seem that it was his purpose to give Mr. Chip a boxing lesson. He jumped in and out from the Pennsylvania slugger like a Russian ballet dancer. Then Chip began to find openings big enough to drive a hay wagon through. He slammed Clabby on the jaw and head and in the body, and Clabby didn't even wink an eyelash. That proves they didn't hurt. After several rounds of this work the referee decided that neither of these middleweights was trying, so he stopped it in the eighth round. Nobody blames Roche. He was.

JAMAICA BAY RACING.

Motor Boat Cruise Around Long Island to be Feature This Year.

The Yacht Racing Association of Jamaica Bay has made a decided change in the racing schedule this season. In former years nearly all the races were held on Sunday, but this season many of the open contests will be held on Saturday.

The most important event for the Jamaica Bay tars is the race around Long Island for cruising motor boats, which is to be held on July 3. The start will be made off the Rockaway Point Yacht Club, and the course will take the craft around the island, finishing at the club. Another race is to the Old Orchard Shoal on July 11. This contest will be for wind-jammers. Following a movement started this season on Gravesend Bay, the Jamaica Bay Corinthians have invited the Gravesend Bay yachtsmen to take part in this and other races held under their auspices.

The association also plans an open power boat race around Staten Island that will start on Aug. 22. In addition to the special events, practically every club will give at least one open race meet. The first regatta will be sailed on Sunday, June 20, under the auspices of the Old Orchard Yacht Club. The schedule for the Summer follows:

June 30, Old Mill Yacht Club; July 3, Rockaway Point Yacht Club; July 10, Belle Harbor Yacht Club; July 11, Old Orchard race and Tamaqua Yacht Club; July 17, Jamaica Bay Yacht Club; July 18, Motor Boat Club; July 24, Canarsie Yacht Club; Aug. 1, Bergen Beach Yacht Club; Aug. 8, Bay View Yacht Club; Aug. 15, Diamond Point Yacht Club; Aug. 22, round Staten Island race, and Sept. 12, Sea Gull Yacht Club.

GRANT DEFEATS SHAFER.

Fast Play on Wet Courts in Bronx Tennis Championship.

Two of the leading members of the Seventh Regimental tennis team furnished the feature contest yesterday in the Bronx championship tennis tournament on the courts of the Bedford Park Lawn Tennis Club, when Wylie C. Grant defeated C. G. Shafer in two hard-fought sets at 6-3, 14-12. Considerable interest was manifested in the match, which attracted a fair gallery in spite of the unpleasant weather. Grant's height and reach were of great assistance to him, but notwithstanding these advantages he was forced to the limit to win. Grant captured the first set rather easily, but Shafer brought off some dazzling shots in the second set and kept pace with his opponent. It was not until twenty-four games had been played that Shafer lost his service and with it the match. The defeated man put up a plucky exhibition.

In spite of the rain several matches were decided in the doubles championship. Crowley and Behr were the only doubles winners of the day. The pair defeated Raymond and Gillespie at 6-3, 8-6 in the first round and won from King and Bassford at 6-2, 6-2 in the second contest. The summary:

Bronx Men's Singles Championship.—Third Round—A. L. Bigone vs. Frederick C. Baggs, 6-3, 4-6, 7-7, unfinished.

Fourth Round—Wylie C. Grant defeated C. G. Shafer, 6-3, 14-12.

Men's Doubles Championship.—First Round—Frederick C. Baggs and Voshell defeated Spaeth and Adams, 6-0, 8-6; Reimer and Steinacher defeated Weiseltier and partner by default; Crowley and Behr defeated Raymond and Gillespie, 6-3, 8-6.

Second Round—Clarkson and Walker defeated Hooker and partner by default; Smith and Cragin defeated Hoffman and M. E. Fox 6-0, 6-2; Crowley and Behr defeated King and Bassford, 6-2, 6-2; Grant and Shafer defeated Nolan and Brinckerhoff by default.

MISS WAGNER LOSES TENNIS TITLE MATCH

A double victory for Miss Molla Bjurstedt, the National indoor champion, and a double defeat for Miss Marie Wagner, former indoor title holder, were the outstanding features of the play in the Metropolitan tennis championship for women yesterday on the West Side Tennis Club courts at Forest Hills, L. I. While the former result was anticipated by those who have followed the fortunes of the young Norwegian champion in this country the defeat of Miss Wagner was one of the surprises of the tournament.

Miss Bjurstedt won her way into the semi-final round by a victory over Miss Anne Sheafe, the 18-year-old player from the Longwood Cricket Club of Boston, and played her usual brilliant game. Lack of experience had much to do with the defeat of Miss Sheafe. Both contestants played fast and hard, but the Boston girl was wild and drove many balls out of court. The champion brought into play all her experience and outmaneouvred her opponent, who succeeded in holding Miss Bjurstedt on even terms up to the seventh game in the second set, when she lost her service.

Mrs. Barger-Wallach was responsible for the elimination of Miss Wagner in the singles competition. The former champion was badly off her game and scored only two games in the match. Mrs. R. A. Pope, who defeated Miss Carona Winn 6-1, 6-2, will play Mrs. Wallach at 11 o'clock this morning and one hour later Mrs. Marshall McLean, who won from Miss Helen Simpson, 6-1, 6-1, will face Miss Bjurstedt.

Miss Wagner and Miss Clare Cassel, the doubles title holders, were defeated by Miss Bjurstedt and Miss Florence Ballin, 3-6, 6-4, 6-2, in the second round of the doubles. Miss Bjurstedt received good support from her partner, but the champion covered twice as much territory as Miss Ballin and made seemingly impossible shots. Miss Wagner and Miss Cassel won the first set and made a bold bid for the second before their opponents really settled down. From this point the title holders were unable to break through the splendid defense of the opposing pair and after taking the second set the latter swept the champions off their feet in the third.

Miss Theodore Cassebeer and Mrs. C. N. Beard upset form by defeating Mrs. B. Briggs and Mrs. Frederic Schmitz, 6-4, 6-4, in the first round of the women's doubles. They were unable to hold their advantage in the second round and lost a well fought contest to Mrs. Marshall McLean and Mrs. A. G. Miles at 8-6, 6-2 in the second. The summary:

Women's Metropolitan Lawn Tennis Championship Singles.—Semi-final Round—Mrs. R. A. Pope defeated Miss Carona Winn, 6-1, 6-2; Mrs. Barger-Wallach defeated Miss Marie Wagner, 6-1, 6-1; Miss Molla Bjurstedt defeated Miss Anna Sheafe, 6-3, 6-1; Mrs. Marshall McLean defeated Miss Helen Simpson, 6-1, 6-1.

Women's Doubles.—Second Round—Mrs. Theodore Cassebeer and Mrs. C. N. Beard defeated Mrs. B. Briggs and Mrs. Frederic Schmitz, 6—4, 6—4.

Third Round—Miss Miriam Blagden and Miss E. C. Lindley defeated Miss Helen Simpson and Miss Edna Shepard, 6—2, 10—8; Mrs. McLean and Mrs. A. G. Miles defeated Mrs. Cassebeer and Mrs. Beard, 8—6, 6—2; Miss Florence Ballin and Miss Molla Bjurstedt won from Mrs. G. de Gersdorff and Mrs. Blanchard by default; Miss Clare Cassel and Miss Marie Wagner defeated Miss Louise Witherbee and Miss Hilah French, 6—4, 6—2.

Semi-final Round—Miss Molla Bjurstedt and Miss Florence Ballin defeated Miss Clare Cassel and Miss Marie Wagner, 3—6, 6—4, 6—2.

OUIMET WINS GOLF IN RAIN.

B. Warren Corkran Defeated in Final of Baltimore C. C. Tourney.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., May 12.—Playing in a steady downpour of rain, Francis Ouimet of the Woodland Golf Club defeated B. Warren Corkran, Country Club, here today in the final of the Baltimore Country Club's annual Spring invitation golf tournament by the score of 4 up and 3 to play. The national champion played a consistent game throughout the afternoon, his driving and putting being of the highest order.

In the upper half Ouimet was paired with R. E. Worthington of Shawnee, and while the champion won, 2 up, he was forced to play at the top of his game, for at the fifteenth hole the Philadelphian had held him quite safe. However, Ouimet, by several excellent drives, went into the lead and finally won out.

It was a brilliant twenty-foot putt on the eighth green that won the match for Ouimet over Corkran. He followed this up with some more brilliant play on the ninth hole, and removed all doubts when he captured the hole with four against Corkran's seven.

E. M. Taft, another Woodland player, also took home a trophy with him when he defeated F. A. Savage of the Baltimore Country Club in the finals of the third defeated eights.

The annual championship tournament of the New York Athletic Club will be held over the links of the Fox Hills Golf Club on June 7, 8, and 9. Provision has been made for three sixteens. Coincident with the qualifying round on the first day will be a medal play handicap, and an innovation will be a special handicap for men of not less than 50 years of age.

Next Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday the annual championship tournament of the Eastern Interscholastic Golf Association will be held over the links of the Wykagyl Country Club, near New Rochelle. Entries should be sent to Filmore K. Robeson, Rawling School, Pawling, N. Y. The tournament is open to all preparatory schools, Philip Carter is the champion, and Robeson recently came through a brilliant field at Pinehurst and won the North and South title.

Princeton and Yale will clash in a team match at the Greenwich Country Club on Saturday. Both singles and foursomes will be in order.

S. Clifton Mabon, secretary of the University Club Golf Association, announced yesterday that the semi-annual tournament of the organization will be held next Wednesday at the Ardsley Club. A thirty-six-hole medal play handicap is called for, prizes being offered for the best scores in both the double and single rounds.

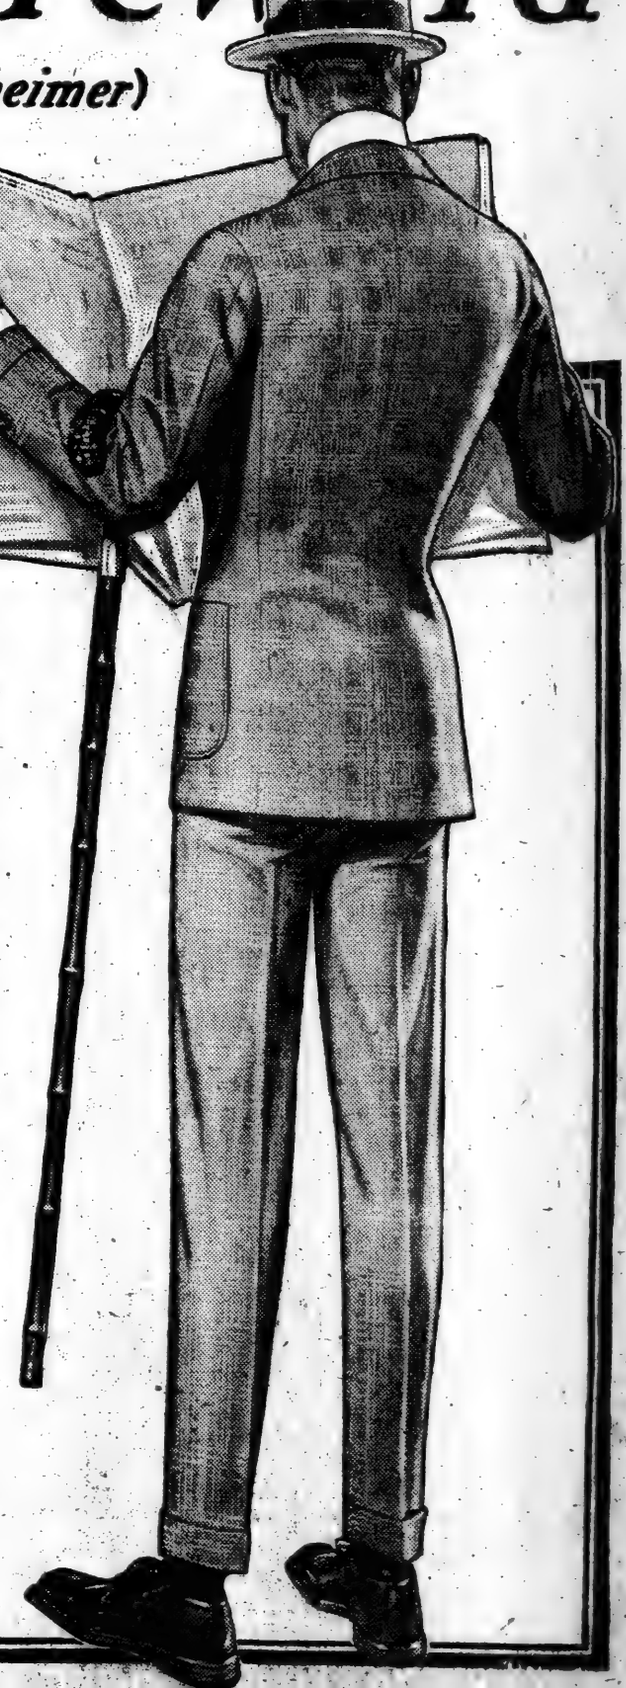
The Foreward

(By the House of Kuppenheimer)



SPRING Clothes — again fashion favors the Kuppenheimer man!

The body-shaped lines of the new style put more emphasis than ever on clothes that fit.

You difficult men who stoop slightly or carry the head forward—here is the Kuppenheimer FOREWARD model, designed especially to fit you perfectly without alteration.

You know better than we can tell you how often with ordinary clothes your collar has a tendency to kick out at the neck or sag too low at the back. You know, too, that alterations attempted at such pivotal points as the collar and shoulder often throw the whole coat out of balance and destroy the style effect.

The FOREWARD is made for men of all ages; men of regular figure, short, tall and stout men. And in various young men's models.

It comes in a wide range of fabrics, cut in the advanced Spring styles.

The FOREWARD is an original Kuppenheimer achievement, and is only found in the work of this House and in the stores of dealers who sell Kuppenheimer Clothes.

Prices—$20 to $40

Kuppenheimer Clothes are sold by a representative store in nearly every Metropolitan center of the United States and Canada. Your name on a post card will bring you our Book of Fashions.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S DECISION.

The nation has heard with deep satisfaction of the President's resolve to demand of Germany reparation for past wrongs and guarantees that they shall not be repeated. He has formed his conclusion, not in haste or in heat, but after calm deliberation. In the action he is to take, and in any further action that may be required, he will have the confidence and the united support of the American people. We believe that in respect to the immediate occasion for the demand he makes no further action will be required, that the President's note and the German reply will not extend but will diminish the area of war. The basis for this belief is found in the declaration of the German Government, transmitted to Ambassador GERARD, of its policy with respect to American and other neutral ships within the so-called war zone and in the North Sea. It is not the policy declared by Germany in February, it is a new policy, the announcement of an intention to respect the law of nations concerning war at sea.

The document calls for careful reading and some statements are made to which exception will at once be taken. We are told that "the most definite "instructions have been repeatedly is-"sued to German war vessels" to avoid attacks upon neutral ships guilty of no hostile act. That leaves the case of the Cushing and of the Gulflight to be explained only on the well-nigh impossible theory that the commanders of German ships in the air and on the sea have disobeyed orders repeatedly given. The statement that submarines have dealt with neutral ships carrying contraband "solely according to the rules of international "law applying to prize warfare" is equally at variance with fact. But the vital point is that while in the German Admiralty declaration of Feb. 4 it was declared that Germany would disclaim all responsibility for "any unfortunate accidents" that might befall neutral vessels within the war zone, the German Government now announces that it "will unreservedly recognize its responsibility" for such "unfortunate accidents" and will express its regrets and pay damages without awaiting the action of a prize court. There is the further assurance that if the result of an investigation in such cases is not satisfactory, Germany will refer the question to an international commission, constituted according to Chapter 3 of The Hague Convention of 1907 "for "the peaceful solution of international "disputes."

While this note has no direct bearing upon the destruction of the Lusitania, having evidently been prepared before that lamentable occurrence, it gives evidence of a new spirit on the part of Germany, the abandonment of the policy of "frightfulness," of a resolve to carry on the war in a more humane disposition and in obedience to the rules of international law. Inasmuch as that is precisely what the President's note will demand, this German communication justifies the hope, and we think the belief, that the reply will be one of satisfactory compliance.

The President, according to the summary of his note given out in Washington last night, will demand in the name of international law that Germany respect the established rules of maritime warfare. He will further demand an assurance or guarantee that hereafter unarmed merchant vessels carrying noncombatants be visited and searched when encountered on the high seas by the German navy and passengers and crew transferred to a place of safety before any prize is destroyed. The inhuman conduct of the German naval commander who sank the Lusitania without warning, as we have more than once pointed out, has made this demand imperatively necessary. The protection of our Government extends to American citizens wherever they may be. For our own safety and theirs, in honor and self-respect, we could not do less than make this demand upon Germany, her reasonable compliance will make it unnecessary for us to do more.

It is well that the President is to make his protest and demand "in the "name of international law." The thoughtless, the irresponsible, and those who would excuse the most odious crimes, have been saying that this war has destroyed international law. That is a pestilent doctrine. International law exists, it is unconquerable, it has been observed with general fidelity by most of the belligerents. It has become our duty to remind those who disregard it that the law of nations is still a binding force, that it has penalties correlative to its obligations. The President is well advised, too, in his resolve to make Germany and the Germans understand that these assaults upon our flag and the butchery of so many American men, women, and children have aroused an intense feeling among the people of the United States. The intensity of that feeling can hardly be exaggerated in any representation we may make. And we believe that the German Government and the German people will be sobered by a full understanding of how deeply we have been stirred by their lawless acts and that they will put a curb upon the savagery of VON TIRPITZ and the military caste.

The people's full confidence in the President is to be justified. He will in no sense misrepresent them. His note will give no provocation to war, its whole purpose will be to avert misunderstandings that might sever friendly relations. He is with conscience, with sincerity, and with firmness seeking to avert the great calamity of war, without involving us in the greater calamity of invoking the reproach of supine toleration of unbearable wrongs.

GERMAN ATROCITIES.

The newspapers of the United States have published only a small part of the reports they have received since the beginning of the war of atrocities committed by German soldiers upon innocent non-combatants, men, women, and children, in Belgium and France. Publication has been declined, for one reason because the reports were too horrible for belief, for another because they were unsupported by satisfactory evidence.

Proof that German soldiers were guilty of cruel and dreadful atrocities now comes to hand in the report of the Bryce Commission which we publish today. The Commission examined great numbers of witnesses, it accumulated and conscientiously sifted a mass of evidence. The names of its members, with that of the former British Ambassador at Washington at the head of the list, which includes the names also of Sir FREDERICK POLLOCK, well known in this country by his law lectures; of Sir EDWARD CLARKE, Sir ALFRED HOPKINSON, and other men of high character and standing, sufficiently attest the trustworthiness of the findings now reported.

There is matter for sober reflection and deep concern among the German people in this report. The committee finds that there were in many parts of Belgium deliberately and systematically organized massacres of the civilian population; that "innocent civilians, both men and women, were "murdered in large numbers, women "violated and children murdered"; that the looting and burning of houses and the wanton destruction of property "were ordered and countenanced by the officers of the German Army," and that these crimes were committed "in pursuance of a set purpose." The committee declares that "the purpose "was to strike terror into the civilian "population and dishearten Belgian "troops so as to crush beyond resist-"ance and extinguish their spirit of "self-defense." The detailed accounts of murder, torture, mutilation, and outrage given by the committee make dreadful reading, they are shocking, they would be altogether beyond belief were they not so well attested. This is the German military policy of "frightfulness."

That the report of the Bryce Commission appears at this time, with the affair of the Lusitania in suspense between the United States and Germany, is a mere coincidence. The document was finished several weeks ago, and sent by mail to this country for release on May 13.

WILSON, ROOSEVELT, TAFT.

Never before in our history have two past Presidents on the same day expressed their opinions about the duty of the actual President under conditions now enlisting the eager attention of all. The views of the past Presidents are so different that it is well that both should be expressed, for both are representative of large classes of opinion. It would be lamentable if it could be said hereafter that any useful counsel was repressed, or that any action was taken without consideration of it. Mr. TAFT expressed that point of view. Mr. ROOSEVELT was of the opinion that the time for thought was past and that the time for action had arrived. "Within twenty-four hours" he would stop commerce with Germany and encourage commerce with the Allies. Those are characteristic views, the thought of a man of action, accustomed to prompt decisions, and sometimes with good results. They find a responsive chord in the minds of many like him. The nation could not do without this class of citizen. Armies could not be raised or battles fought without them. But seldom, if ever, are the leaders of charges chosen for their wisdom in council. There have been Generals who were statesmen, as excellent in peace as in war, but there is not now living in any land the man who has demonstrated both qualities of leadership. Neither King, Czar, nor President is leading the councils of both war and peace.

Mr. TAFT's counsel is more Presidential and less military. A President is a trustee for all the people, not a leader of policy because it is personally approved. Mr. TAFT is so far from pressing his personal opinion that he urges support of the President; he does not criticise his action, or suggest what it should be. Mr. TAFT should command unanimous support of himself in his support of the President. War by a divided country would be a calamity. One fortunate enough to command the popular ear might cause war. The President alone can bring about a solution without war. The right result without war is preferable to the right result with war. Whoever thinks that must prefer the manner of Mr. TAFT to the manner of Mr. ROOSEVELT, even though there may be admiration for Mr. ROOSEVELT's energy and sympathy with his sentiments. Mr. TAFT is no more a weakling than Mr. ROOSEVELT. Mr. TAFT also thinks that there are worse things than war, but he is not in a hurry for war for that reason. Delay for deliberation cannot alter the record or lessen the effect of the final decision. If the United States has been outraged the wrong will not be the less redressed because reparation comes after a time. Instant action is not of the essence of our policy. There are other times and ways of enforcing accountability than by force. The President's way is the wiser way, if only it succeeds, and it cannot be said to have failed until it is tried. To adopt the worse way when there is a better is not the act of a wise man or of a trustee making a decision for an entire people.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Letters to the editor of THE TIMES on the sinking of the Lusitania have greatly exceeded all previous experiences with that kind of spontaneous expression. For physical reasons we have been unable to print more than a small fraction of the number received. In so doing the aim has been to give each line of argument its relative weight, but it has occurred to us that some general survey of so large a body of current opinion, of which perhaps hardly 5 per cent. can be published, together with an analysis of its content, would be both interesting and important.

The most notable single fact is that when the whole of the correspondence is considered under the two broadest classifications, namely, pro-German and anti-German, the proportion of pro-German letters is very small, hardly one in twenty. It was a little higher at first, before the fact that the Lusitania was unarmed had been absolutely established and while yet the full extent of the horror and the sinister implications of the "warning" issued by the Imperial German Embassy were unrealized. Thus, at first, that the passengers had been warned before sailing was insisted upon as an exculpating fact, but each day it has been emphasized less, and at the same time the ratio of pro-German to anti-German letters has fallen. It might be thought that under ordinary conditions pro-German letters would constitute a small proportion of the communications addressed every day to the editor on the subject of the war, but that has not been the case. On the contrary, our German and German-American correspondents have hitherto been very industrious. It must be significant, therefore, that their letters on the sinking of the Lusitania have been so few and for the most part so futile that the problem has been how to give their arguments the space to which, as against the others, they were entitled. That feeling of sheer exultation which is alleged to exist has not been expressed at all.

The pro-German arguments are easily summarized, in the order of their frequency and importance, as follows: That Great Britain alone was to blame, her undertaking to starve 70,000,000 German people having forced Germany to adopt desperate measures; that as the submarine is a new instrument of warfare, with hitherto unappreciated possibilities, no existing rules apply; that the Lusitania was carrying munitions of war to the Allies to kill Germans with, and that Germany could not stop them by any other means; that if Great Britain were in Germany's position she would do the same things, and that noncombatants had no right to be on an enemy's vessel carrying contraband. The truth, as everybody knows or may learn from a chronological study of events, is that Great Britain's undertaking to starve Germany, besides being a proper act of war under the rules, was a measure of retaliation. Germany had previously declared her unacceptable and extra-legal "war zone" and had announced the beginning of her submarine warfare against British shipping. It is true that the submarine is a new instrument of war, but to insist, therefore, that war requires new definitions, and that pending their formulation Prussian frightfulness may be substituted for international law, is to assume that there can be new definitions of humanity.

Letters falling into the anti-German classification require to be subdivided into groups. The largest is that which, with a degree of restraint quite remarkable, considering the vivid horror of the act itself, expresses confidence in the Administration and a resolute willingness beforehand to support it in what measures it may decide to take to obtain full reparation. All of the writers in this group hope that such measures will fall short of war. The second largest anti-German group is that which agrees with Mr. WICKERSHAM. It holds that aggressive measures should be adopted, that Congress should be summoned to appropriate a large sum of money to be spent upon "preparedness," and that diplomatic relations with Germany should be severed. This group merges gradually into a third, which is inclined to attack the President for inaction, and is very impatient for something to be done. There is then the war group, wanting war as something we owe to civilization, and thinking generally with Mr. ROOSEVELT. It is not a large group, no larger than that which wants peace at any price. There are, of course, a great many letters that might be called nonpartisan. Some of them are purely emotional. Others are in a spirit of discussion, considering the ethics of war in the light of recent events, the future of peace, and the need of amending the rules of killing. They have all been stimulated or suggested by the sinking of the Lusitania, but take it merely as a text.

Many clergymen have written, many more than had written about BILLY SUNDAY, and their contributions fall into all classifications. Some are for war and some for peace at any cost; a majority of them think with the majority of others. Finally, very few women, relative to the whole number, have written at all.

THE COURTS AND LABOR.

On the same day are published complaints that the courts are against labor, and that thirty-four men were indicted for crimes in the name of labor, eight of them for murder. The one statement is the antidote to the other, and suggests that the courts are less against labor than against acts which are of the same character by whomsoever done. If the courts have become prejudiced against labor it is because of acts which have been committed by unions, and approved by unions after the courts have discovered and declared their lawless and inhuman character. If the unions think that the courts are opposed to them it is because they fail to appreciate the quality of their acts, and proceed on the German doctrine that the necessity of victory justifies whatever means it is necessary to use. The confusion in the minds of the unions, the public, and perhaps some courts in some cases, arises from failure to perceive the applicability of the doctrine of "humanity first." The union policy is unions first. In that manner labor is arrayed against labor even more cruelly than against capital.

Take the case of the Danbury hatters, under consideration now by the Hatters' Union. The hatters of Danbury entered upon a course of action on a promise by their union to protect them against damage. Now the individual hatters are in danger of losing their homes unless their union redeems its contract. The courts have decided that the acts done were unlawful and detrimental. Does that show that the courts are prejudiced against labor? How can it show any such thing, when the facts of the case are that one class of labor was treating another class of labor in a manner compelling the courts to take sides between them? If the courts had decided the other way it would have given to a small part of labor a license to dispense with the law applicable to all, including more laborers than are suffering from a decision of universal and rightful application. The offending unions are against the law and the courts.

Is it not a reproach to the Hatters' Union that there is an instant's hesitation about redeeming its promise under which the individual hatters are suffering? Is it not wholesome that all unions should be made to feel the responsibility brought home to the Hatters' Union?

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Not Only Allies Benefited. A strange capacity for forgetfulness is shown by the Germans at home and their sympathizers in the United States when they fail to recall that their one great grievance against our Government—their one excuse for denying that it has been strictly neutral—is not the only manifestation in the shape of official action that has been given of effective official impartiality.

The Administration did, indeed, refuse to forbid the selling by American manufacturers of arms and munitions to any authorized and recognized customers who were desirous of buying such wares and able to carry them away. It chanced that the maintenance of an ancient rule, in this instance, was beneficial to the Allies and injurious to Germany, but that was not our fault, nor did it impose on us any obligation to stop a form of commerce in which Germany herself, as well as every other manufacturing nation, has frequently engaged, regardless of whether or not all belligerents at a given time could be served alike.

It has also chanced, however, that the maintenance by our Government of certain other ancient rules in regard to neutrality was enormously beneficial to Germany and extremely troublesome and expensive to the Allies in general and to England in particular. Where, except for our protection, would be all of the great steamers now docked in our harbors, perfectly safe from the hostile cruisers ceaselessly patrolling outside the three-mile limit and hungering to get at them? At the bottom of the sea, of course, or serving as British transports.

In still greater danger were the German warships until they slipped into Newport News between two days. There they found more than the covenanted safety from imminent destruction. They were allowed to enjoy all the privileges that international law conferred—yes, and that law was strained and stretched in their favor till many a critic thought it cracked.

These things the pro-Germans never mention, and for them, apparently, feel no gratitude. Seemingly they have no attention except for the one case in which the established rules for neutrals worked against them.

Our Juries as Seen by a Judge. Criticism of our jury system as it has come to be have been frequent for years past. Most of it has been from laymen, but not a few representatives of the law itself have commented more or less strongly on the survival in this system of peculiarities and principles which, though commendable when established, have long since served to give immunity to guilt rather than protection to innocence.

As instances of rules that have been condemned as anachronistic may be mentioned the requirement of unanimity among jurors as the only basis of conviction, and the refusal to let a defendant's failure to take the stand in his own defense count against him. It has been left, however, for Judge ALONZO J. CLEARWATER, ex-President of the State Bar Association and now a delegate to the Constitutional Convention, to make before the Judiciary Committee of the latter body the plain accusation—perhaps it would be better described as the frank confession—that there has been of late years a marked and steady deterioration in the intellectual and moral quality of jurymen and consequently of juries.

That is something most laymen would hesitate to say, so often and so sternly have we been commanded to respect "the palladium of our liberties," and if we had whispered something of the sort we probably would have ascribed the deterioration to the queer, and to us always absurd, requirement that to be eligible as a juror one must have neglected to utilize the common facilities for keeping himself decently informed as to the happenings of the time and to form opinions in regard to what he thus learned.

But Judge CLEARWATER gave quite another reason. He explained what he declared to be the incompetence of jurors as being the result of exempting from jury duty practically everybody with an excuse for not serving—and enough of "pull," political or other, to excuse the accepting of the excuse. Thus many large classes get off altogether, and the performance of the duty is left in part to those with a liking for it, because they have nothing else to do and no ability to do anything else if they had it to do, and in part to those whose presence on juries is wanted for reasons that—well, that are irrelevant to the administration of justice.

They Must Do Better in the Future. That steamship lists have been rather carelessly kept in the past has probably been at least as much the fault of the passengers as of the steamship companies. With the increasing safety of ocean travel both, naturally enough, have come to think of a sea voyage as involving as little of a future need to identify those making it as does a trip on a railway train.

The conquest of the sea, however, is not yet complete. Even in times of peace great ships, as well as small ones, can still be lost, and of what can happen when war is in progress we have just had a frightful illustration. What the Cunard agents say, therefore, about the foiling of their efforts to get accurate passenger lists, while it does show a division of responsibility for the confusion of names that has followed the blowing up of the Lusitania, does not leave it less obvious that hereafter this and other steamship companies should exercise in this really important matter greater vigilance than in the past.

Travelers may be careless, but they can be easily trained to accuracy under the firm compulsion of an official refusal to hand over the passage tickets until after a reasonable amount of information as to the buyer's identity has been placed—legibly—on such blanks as may be necessary for its preservation.

Nobody would, or indeed could, complain of this compulsion except, perhaps, the occasional fugitive from justice, and his opinions and convenience need not be seriously considered.

Teach Painting, Not Art.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am glad to see Albert Sterner's words on art. Painting and sculpture require the technical study of the means of expression. So does poetry. An attempt to teach more is pernicious. The language only is needed. We have no schools for the making of poets.

ON THE EAST SIDE.

Along the sidewalk, narrowed even more
By murm'ring groups a-squat around each door,
A host of scant-clad children play.
The motley rows of pushcarts still await,
With faded greens and fruit, those who buy late—
Swift, furtive-eyed, at close of day.

A hurdy-gurdy, on a nearby street,
Plays music, which the distance renders sweet,
Contrasting strangely with the sights;
Black shadows brood behind half open doors,
And rising mists creep from the river's shores,
Beyond the reassuring lights—

As sudden as a swift-hid, bloody knife,
A shriek stabs through and through the street's gay life!
Then, strangled silence—heavy—dead.
The yawning doors of tenements gape wide,
And belch forth, driven, those who'd stayed inside;
The street's a Babel, chilled with dread!

Young girls shrink close in nameless fear,
And mothers count their young, once more grown dear,
'Neath wings of horror, spreading wide.
"Police!" Their uniformed approach is swift,
The crowds close in—their terror seems to lift,
And leaves them curious, big-eyed.

"Stand back!" Unwillingly they heed the call;
On tiptoe, jostling, e'en the littlest of all—
Primeval—scenting blood—half wild!
They surge about the fateful, shadowed door,
Which hides a frantic woman. On the floor,
The murdered body of her little child.

LOUISE VON WETTER.

A SWORD IN PITY'S HAND.

It Shall Prove That Right Still Lives Among Nations.

By GILBERT MURRAY.

[From a new and unpublished preface to his translation of "The Trojan Women," the Euripidean war play which will be given under the direction of Granville Barker at Harvard on May 19, at the dedication exercises of the new C. C. N. Y. Stadium on May 29.]

"Not Peace, but a Sword!" The burden of the Trojan women has now fallen upon others, upon Belgian women, French women, upon the women of Poland and Serbia. God grant that the discipline of the Allies may hold firm, and that mankind may not have to add to that tragic list the names of German and Magyar women!

Some twelve years ago, when I was steeped in this drama of Euripides, I felt that, vivid as it was, the things it depicted belonged to the horrors of the far past. War might come again, even among civilized nations; but it could never again be this kind of war. Mankind had advanced since the days of Troy or Melos; there were rules of honorable warfare firmly established, pathetic efforts made by man in his gentler moments to insure that, even in his fury, he should not sink utterly below the brutes. Women and children were safe, prisoners were safe, the wounded were safe. So much seemed certain; and yet the very reverse was true. The next war was to be baser and crueler than the old wars, just as it was vaster in extent.

Other things, too, are strange. We could scarcely have believed that, if war could come, the first step would be the deliberate massacre of a small and unconcerned nation, as innocent as Melos and as far removed from the quarrels of its great neighbors. We could scarcely have believed that, with almost all Europe eager to preserve peace, with Great Britain, France, Russia, Italy, Serbia, day by day and almost hour by hour offering to accept any form of arbitration, mediation, conference, or even delay, one power would have taken on herself the responsibility of saying: "No, I can have arbitration, but I prefer war. It is by war that I shall gain the most."

And that power was not only the strongest in the world, the best prepared and the most accustomed to think of politics in terms of force—that was natural. She was also the nation of all others whom in so many walks of life we most honored; the nation who had given us so much of our music, our philosophy, our great works of ordered knowledge; who through all the interwoven lines of human endeavor was making the rest of us her willing disciples. She was not content to be the first nation of Europe, the most rapidly growing in wealth and activity; not content to penetrate all neighboring lands with her influence and impress their imaginations with her disciplined strength; not content that we thronged to her universities to be taught; that we filled our libraries with her books and hardly counted any work successful till it won the approval of her authority. She was not content. She craved for a homage more abject, more brutalized. She wanted subjects, not neighbors. We offered her justice, but she preferred organized murder. It seems incredible, and yet it is the oldest of old stories. By that sin fell the angels! Other nations, great and fine nations, have gone mad before, and almost always with this same madness. Hubris the Greeks called it, the ancient sin of pride which must needs come to a fall if any balance is to be maintained in human life. There is hardly one strong nation in the world's history, from Xerxes to Napoleon, that has not in one degree or another been drunken with it. This should make our judgment more gentle, though it must not weaken our resolve.

Doubtless we have all sinned in our day; but that is no reason now against defending the innocent. We have all at some time, in some degree, transgressed the law; but that does not absolve us from the duty of upholding the law. We have all been cruel; but does than mean that we have no right any more to feel indignant pity? And pity in this case has put a sword into our hands.

Reasonable men in Great Britain do not need to be warned against the folly of any desire to "crush Germany." Such a thing cannot be done, and if it could it would be a disaster. We do not need to be warned against deliberately setting ourselves to "hate Germany." To hate Germany would be a stupidity as well as a sin against civilization; I should not like to die calling a whole nation of men my enemies. But before peace can come the world must set its seal upon three great lessons: That public right still lives between nations; that the freedom of a civilized people shall not be violated with impunity; and that those who are swift to make war for the sake of gain shall find in their wars not profit, but bitter loss.

Neglected Chemistry.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial on the position of the applied science of chemistry in Germany and Great Britain suggests the importance of this subject as far as America is concerned. The reasons why we are so poorly prepared to meet the requirements of commerce and industry are simply that we have not teachers in sufficient number who are well qualified scientifically and practically, and that we allow students to enter the industrial and scientific world before they are qualified to investigate thoroughly the subjects of which they are supposed to gain some knowledge. The fault is with the universities and technical schools. Our engineering schools turn out excellent engineers, but our chemical schools are not up to the mark. I doubt if 25 per cent. of the many who pass themselves off as analytical chemists are competent, and I speak from twenty years' experience as a consulting and research chemist. The loss to the business world due to the lack of scientific and practical efficiency may be figured in hundreds of millions of dollars.

We have the young men—100,000 of them—eager to enter the field of study and investigation, but before we allure them with the prospects why not raise the scientific and practical efficiency of our college professors? No one should hold a professorship in chemistry or botany in a reputable university unless he is capable of mathematical reasoning, at least to the extent required of competent civil or electrical engineers. With this foundation there should be rapid progress in the qualifications of college professors, and the large crowd which builds a reputation on popularity with the students and rhetoric alone will soon disappear.

Viking Precedent.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Two or three years ago the Kaiser presented to Norway a statue of one of the Norse Vikings, "Frithjof the Bold." This statue was erected at Framnes Bergen, which was supposed to have been his home. Will you please compare the code, a part of which the following is a translation, of the Vikings of more than a thousand years ago with the code of the Kaiser today?

Sails the merchant ship forth,
Thou his bark must protect,
When due tribute his weak hand has told;
On the wave art thou King;
He is a slave to his pelf,
And thy steel is as good as his gold.

It's enough—when thou conquer—
Who prayest for peace has no sword and can't be a foe;
"Prayer is Walhalla's child."
Hear the pale Virgin's Voice!
Yes, a scoundrel is he who says No.

MORE LETTERS ON THE LUSITANIA HORROR.

Thought, Suggestion, Interrogation, and Discussion Out of a Continuing Stream of Expression From Times Readers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Dr. Dernburg, in the statement he gave to the newspapers yesterday, thus defends the action of the German submarine in torpedoing the Lusitania without warning:

> It has been the custom heretofore to take off passengers and crew and tow the ship into port. But a submarine, say 150 feet long, cannot do it. It has no accommodations for either passengers or crew. The submarine is a frail craft and may easily be rammed, and a speedy ship is capable of running away from it.

These statements express only half the truth as to the facts in this case, the other half being contained in the following statement gleaned from the opinions of several naval officers whom I have consulted on this subject, to wit., that under the circumstances it would have been entirely feasible for the German submarine to have accomplished the sinking of the Lusitania without causing the loss of a single life.

The sea was calm and the air clear. From the shore, eight to ten miles away, it was even possible to count the small boats which remained around the spot where the Lusitania sank. Therefore from the superstructure of a submarine it would have been possible for its commander to have seen and recognized such a large ship as the Lusitania at a distance of not less than fifteen miles, thus allowing sufficient time for the submarine to take a position directly in the Lusitania's course. When the latter vessel came within, say, a mile of the spot where the submarine lay waiting, dead ahead, the German commander could have sent a wireless message to the commander of the Lusitania to the effect that she would be torpedoed by a submarine directly in her course unless the engines were immediately reversed and the vessel stopped. During the one or two minutes required for the delivery of this message to Captain Turner, his ship would have run so close to the submarine as to render impossible escape from its torpedoes, which have a speed of forty miles an hour at short range.

The German officer could have punctuated his message by firing a single small shell across the Lusitania's bridge. The British Captain would have at once realized the impossibility of so manoeuvring his huge vessel as to escape a torpedo, and at the same time would have seen the folly of attempting to ram a submarine which lay head on ready to discharge a loaded torpedo. With the thought of the three thousand souls in his care he would almost certainly have stopped the ship. The German officer would then have ordered Captain Turner to disembark his passengers in the quickest possible time and to refrain from calling for help under penalty of having his ship torpedoed instantly. If British warships had approached the German could have forced Captain Turner to instruct them to keep away, as their approach would simply mean the instant torpedoing of his vessel and the death of many of his passengers and crew.

If, on the other hand, the Lusitania, disregarding these warnings, had been torpedoed in trying to run down or escape the submarine, the responsibility for the destruction of those on board would not have rested solely on the shoulders of the German Government, and if, perchance, she had escaped, the loss of her prey would have been a small matter as compared with the world-wide approval which Germany would have received.

The Strain on Patience.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The course of Dr. Dernburg and Ambassador Bernstorff is unworthy of toleration and should no longer be tolerated. Are we to have men of official standing going around among us trying by every hook and crook to propagate the belief that it is a perfectly justifiable thing for our citizens to be slain by the hundreds, as a mere incident of the sinking of a passenger vessel bearing the British flag? Ambassador Bernstorff, ever since the war began, forgetful of the dignities and proprieties of his high office, has carried on an almost constant warfare against the predominant American sentiment, and only to a less extent against the declared policy of our Government. Any less patient man than Wilson would long ago have asked the German Government at Berlin either to silence him or to recall him. But now he has given every evidence that he was fully aware beforehand of the lawless assault on the lives of more than a hundred American citizens which was perpetrated last Friday. His continued presence here under the circumstances can only decrease the probability that the outrages already committed can be rectified without war. And authorized intimations have come from his office that the crime of the Lusitania is to be repeated! Is it necessary that the nerves of a nation sorrowing for its murdered dead of the Lusitania should be harried by threats of a repetition of the crime? If the crime of the Lusitania is repeated on the Transylvania, the cry for vengeance will be many times louder and more general than in the case of the Maine, and with a much more reasonable basis, since there can be no doubt as to the identity of the criminal.

The one best service that any German-American can now render Germany is clearly and emphatically to denounce such crimes as lawless and revolting in themselves and stupendous blunders on the part of Germany.

Blame the Maniac's Keeper?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There is one of these German pleas which is left by its proponents in an incomplete form, although it requires pressing to its logical conclusion. Germany, admittedly the perpetrator of the outrage, blandly proposes to shift the responsibility to Great Britain's shoulders. A confessed criminal cannot extenuate his offenses by pointing out that it was negligence on the part of the authorities which gave him his opportunity for crime. It is true, however, that the criminal acts of a maniac, committed while in custody, may be laid very directly at the door of his keepers. Will Bernstorff and Dernburg admit that Germany's lunacy has added to the many responsibilities of Britain the restraint of Kultur's maniac propensities?

Why Workingmen Hesitate.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have heard the general talk about the responsibility of the United States in this crisis, and I ask to whom is the greater responsibility—to the millions of American citizens who stay at home and earn a peaceful living or to the few whose business or pleasure may take them into the danger zone? It may be I have not the proper feeling of patriotism, but I am not "humiliated," as so many people claim to be, at the stand our country has taken during this horrible period. What do we care for the criticism of a few countries who are tearing each other's throats? Have we not the internal assurance that we are right and are going ahead, and that when it is all over we shall have the dignity and the position, backed by the very necessary financial standing, to command the respect we are due?

Thank God we have a President who is not an autocrat or a millionaire, who knows what it means to be a plain American citizen, who appreciates the condition of America, and who feels a personal responsibility for every American; and should the time come when he thought it necessary to declare war I believe he would receive the hearty support of every workingman, for they would know that there was no means of escape; that he had considered the matter from every point of view, from the millionaire to the day laborer, and that he had decided that only by the sacrifice and suffering of the present generation could there be a future for the United States.

Germany's Damaging Admissions.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The main argument which German apologists offer in justification of their dastardly crime in sinking the Lusitania, viz.: That it is in retaliation against England's stoppage of foodstuffs intended for the civilian population of Germany, is not only falacious in the extreme, but most insulting to the intelligence of any one who reads history or has followed the course of the present conflict. Only four months ago not only Count von Bernstorff but numerous other German admirers declared that England's blockade, far from being effectual, had resulted in no serious inconvenience to the German people. There was no pinch of food supplies or munitions of war, and enough foodstuffs were on hand to last the entire population, civil and military, for eighteen months to come. Furthermore, it is positively known that Germany has food in abundance with no shortage in sight.

But even granting that there were a shortage, does Germany suppose for a moment that the world is ignorant of the fact that such a food blockade, even to the point of starving the civil and military population alike, is and always has been recognized as a legitimate weapon of warfare? Is it not exactly what Germany did in 1871 in most relentless fashion to Paris and other French cities? Is it not what she was trying to do to England in sinking the William P. Frye? Is it not the expressed purpose of Admiral von Tirpitz's submarine policy, which itself antedates the food blockade by England? And, after having ravaged Belgium, burned her cities, murdered her citizens, and left her civilian population to starve or feed upon the charity of the United States, is Germany in any position to raise a protest?

A Woman Demands War.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

We read this morning that Germany is "sorry" and offers "sympathy" to the United States. Should a murderer, then, be allowed to go free by merely saying that he is sorry and sympathizes? Where has the spirit of '76, of 1812, of 1860 gone? Where the spirit that made us strike after the sinking of the Maine? Time was when our forefathers did not hesitate to give up their lives unquestioningly for the honor of our country; now, instead, our flag can be apparently insulted with impunity, as it was at Vera Cruz, as it was by the Turk. A far-fetched explanation seems to be all sufficient. Can we then wonder that Germany does not hesitate to throw her gauntlet in our faces and shrug her shoulders because "the United States will never fight"? Is our country so fallen in its ideal that we must stand last in the roll call of nations? Belgium was right, yet it had to fight to maintain this right. Are we less than Belgium?

The cry of little children, the cry of their helpless mothers, the cry of people struggling for freedom, the freedom for which we ourselves have fought and for which we stand, is calling to us. Let us unite to crush the demon that reigns in Germany. Let us do more than protest by words; let deeds be ready to back them up. And if this war is to end with the freedom of nations and a firm peace, let the people of the United States stand together and show that the blood of our ancestors is not coursing as water in our veins.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I gather from the instructions in the speech of our President yesterday that, when a nation is sufficiently in the right, this condition of being is sufficient to accomplish all the ends which our forefathers sought to accomplish by war, and that under these circumstances we are too proud to fight. As a matter of information, I write seriously to inquire why we were not too proud to attack the little town of Vera Cruz, with its handful of Mexicans, sending both naval and military forces to that point. Was it because we were not sufficiently right in that instance, or has our President since that time experienced one of his miraculous changes of heart? Of course, it cannot be that he knows we are unprepared to fight a real nation. Both Mr. Bryan and Mr. Daniels have assured us to the contrary.

Why Play Into Germany's Hands?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Is it not worth remarking that the most helpful thing we could now do in behalf of Germany would be to declare war against her or make it possible for her to declare war against us? In that event ammunition and supplies now going to the Allies would be held in harmless reserve in this country, where Germany would like them to be held. The brigand is not only callous but cunning, and has devised a new chance for patriotism to betray civilization.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why do the orators of the I. W. How much longer are we to suffer the indignity of having this apologist for assassination in our midst? Why can he not be deported as an "undesirable alien"?

Use German Prisoners.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

When the German armies were invading France in 1870 and the French took to blowing up German troop trains, the Germans put a stop to this by carrying French prisoners of war upon the locomotive of every train. If in the present war German prisoners were provided with board and lodging upon all passenger steamers, unless their fellow-countrymen chose to murder them, the present Germanic carnival of bloody piracy would receive a check.

The pink silk corsage, low and sleeveless, was veiled and amost conceaed by quantities of pink tulle, which also made the long sleeves. Her large ping hat, roled a bit at the back, was bound with coth of silver, which also made the wide, stiff bow across the front brim. She carried clusters of pink roses.

The three bridesmaids were the Misses Julia Bates of St. Louis, Sylvia Curtis of Plainfield, N. J., and Margaret Kelly of New York. They were in full, short-skirted frocks of light mauve silk, with full length overdress of silver net, striped bayadere fashion with a half dozen wide and narrow tucks of silver cloth, and the low corsages had cape sleeves and fluffs of the net. SAINT-SAENS SPURNS PRIMA DONNA AT PIER

French Composer Repulses Mme. Kutscherra as a German and an Enemy.

WARM FRIENDS IN PARIS

Franco-Americans Welcome Him at a Dinner Given in the University Club.

The transatlantic liner Rochambeau had warped into her dock at the foot of Fourteenth Street. Down the gangway came four dignified men. On the dock they halted to attend to their luggage. Up rushed a handsomely dressed woman, arms extended.

"Maistro," she creid, "I am so happy—so happy to see you."

"Ah, Kutscherra, Kutscherra," he replied, cordiality beaming from his face. "Comment allez-vous?" as he allowed her to throw both arms about him.

"But, No!" he suddenly shouted. "No! No! Away! You are German."

And turning to his companions he beckoned them and the four were away in a cab.

Such was the greeting of Camille Saint-Saëns, the famed French composer, to Mme. Kutscherra, the Wagnerian lieder singer, friend of royaly, and for the past fifteen years associated with Saint-Saens in professional work. Mme. Kutscherra was much perturbed last night over the rebuff by her admired "maistro."

"Is it not that art has no country?" she asked, seated in her apartments at the Claridge.

"Besides," she almost screamed, "I am no German. Mon Dieu, I am a Belgian. My husband is in the Belgian Army—at least I pray God he is, for I have not heard from him for many weeks. My brother is in the French Army, as are my two nephews. And yet he calls me German.

Photographed Together.

"That I have sung Wagner, that is true. But has Saint-Saëns not loved his music? I was educated in Germany; Saint-Saëns scored some of his greatest triumphs in Berlin. And I, I whom he insulted, I sang his own music at the Opera in Paris and he praised me to the skies. He came to my home to rehearse. See."

And she showed photographs of herself and Saint-Saëns taken in her Paris house. She had a bale of newspaper clippings in which the two had been associated.

Madame Kutscherra is a native of Prage. She is of Slav descent, received her education in Germany and has for years made her home in Paris. She showed last night passports from the Belgian Minister at Paris which she obtained before coming to America recently to sing for the Belgian relief funds. She was first brought to this country eighteen years ago by Damrosch, when she sang at the Metropolitan. Her home in Paris has been the center of many brilliant calons, attended by royalty, members of the diplomatic corps and by famed artists. She is a personal friend of Caruso.

"It is painful to learn Saint-Saens's true nature. He is no longer the great artist, for he has allowed something in his life to be greater than his art when he rebuffs a friend of so long. And he did this rude thing in America, of all countries. So I say that the first rudeness I have suffered in dear America comes from a Frenchman."

A reported approached M. Saint-Saens last night after he had finished dining at the University Club as the guest of the Franco-American Club, and tried to ask him about his greeting to Kutscherra. The query was only started when the name of uKtscherra was spoken.

"uKtscherra,' 'he explosively exclaimed. "I will not see her."

Doesn't Want to See Her.

When it was explained that Mme. Kutseherra was not calling on him at the club, he waved his hands and said: "I have nothing to do with her now—that woman—that woman. I won't see her any more."

And M. Saint-Saens would discuss the subject no further.

Accompanied by General Horalque, former French Minister of Education, Hughues de la Roux, French journalist, and L. Jouvaud, President of the French Hospital, M. Saint-Saens is on his way to the Panama-Pacific Exposition as the officail representative of the French Government. His official title is "First Delegate to the Franco-American Commission for the Development of Political, Ecvonomic, Literary, and Artistic Relations." He will be in America about three months and after his visit to the Exposition will appear at a series of lectures arranged by the commission at the request of the French Government.

Saint-Saëns, well known in America as the composer of "Samson and Delilah," has written a hymn to California, whic his to be played for the first time at the exposition on the day he visits the grounds.

Apropos to his rebuff to Mme. Kutscherre, it is recalled that when the French put the taboo on German music, Saint-Saëns was among the most deeply grieved. It was a cruel blow to him, but he has shown his country is his first love. It was Wagner who put Saint-Saëns upon the pinnacle of fame by pronouncing him the greatest living French composer. It was to Wagner that he went often for inspiration.

Two years ago he conducted in Berlin the one hundredth performance of "Samson and Delilah" at the Royal Opera House, and when he wished some changes in the programme, his personal appeal brought from the Kaiser the order that all should be just as the great composer wished. Thus his art had endeared him to things German and to Madame Kutscherra, whom he praised for her singing of Wagner, as of his own songs. But it's war time now and the aged composer—he's almost eighty—knows no art and knows no artists when he thinks they are his country's foes.

But Madame Kutscherra can't understand it, because she is not German, and she says she loves Paris as Saint-Saens loves Paris.

Butler Refers to Lusitania.

At the dinner to Saint-Saens the atmosphere of intellectuality was pervaded by sentiment that was nothing it is was not ardent pro-Allies. President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University outlined the history of France since the revolution and said that whatever there had been of advance in civilization had been in a concentrated sense in France.

"France," he said, "has developed the Democracy of Europe; the United States has developed the democracy of America. While this nation takes no part in this war, while we are neutral, we all have our ideas about what is taking place, and we have a right to those ideas. While e here express no opinions, all of us take in condemnation of happenings of the past week and deplore them."

This was the nearest mention made to the sinking of the Lusitania.

"But this is a crisis," concluded Dr. Butler, "and judgment should curb our rightful free speech in order that there may be no embarrassment to those in authority, who must work out their great problems."

M. Le Roux referred to the war as the battle for civilization.

"France has made no progaganda in this country," he said. "France rests her case, and she has no fear of America's judgment."

Hepburn's Tribute.

In praising Saint-Saens A. Barton Hepburn, toastmaster, said:

"There is no genius who appeals so strongly to his own generation and to the generation to follow as he who creates music, who translates the harmony and melody of his own soul into tangible music that may be studied, reproduced, and enjoyed by all. Our guest of honor this evening is acclaimed the greatest living composer, and I am sure no greater compliment could be paid and no higher honor be achieved than that.

"Contrasting the harmony of his life and the harmony of his creations with the discordant, diabolical din of the war that tinges with gloom all sections of the globe today and will brand with disgrace the twentieth century—in this contrast we are reminded that our guest is a Frenchman. We believe that France is fighting the battle of civilization and I assure you she has our sympathies and good wishes in repelling unjust aggression and when peace dawns upon her we trust and believe it will find her triumphant in arms, united at a nation, stronger and better, even as gold tried in the fire."

DAVID M'L. PARRY DIES IN 64TH YEAR

LAWYER AND EDITOR FIRST

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 12.—David McLean Parry, former President of the National Association of Manufacturers, died today at his home in this city, in his sixty-fourth year. He was a prominent carriage and automobile manufacturer and besides had extensive traction interests.

Captain Parry was born on a farm near Pittsburgh, Penn., and attended school during the Winters. Later he clerked in a dry goods store and finally attended the Cincinnati Law School from which he was graduated and afterward admitted to the bar. In the early seventies he came to this city and for a time was a reporter on The New York Herald. During this time he was a roommate of Robert G. Dun, who later became the head of the mercantile agency. Captain Parry was also a friend and protégé of the late Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, by whom he was married to his first wife, Miss Clara Harbottle.

After leaving this city he edited a newspaper in Montana and then returned to Indiana, where he started a general hardware store, the business growing until he owned a chain of such stores. In 1882 he acquired a wagon shop in Rushville, Ind., and removed the business to Indianapolis, where he developed it into the largest of its kind in the world, with an output of 1,000 vehicles a day.

Captain Parry founded the Overland automobile factory and business, which he later sold to his former Superintendent, John Willys, for $250,000. He also gave Henry Ford his first financial assistance when he started in the automobile business. Captain Parry built and was President of the Indianapolis Southern Railroad, now part of the Illinois Central system, and also built and was President of the Indianapolis-Newcastle traction line. Among his other interests he owned the controlling interest in the Jenney Electric Light Company of Indianapolis and was heavily interested in the Motor Manufacturing Company, makers of the Pathfinder automobile. He was also a former Vice President of the Farmers' Trust Company and was a member of the syndicate that built the Claypool Hotel. He was a former President of the National Association of Carriage Builders, the Indiana Manufacturers' Association, the Citizens' Industrial Association of America, the Indianapolis Board of Trade, and the Indianapolis Commercial Club. At the time of his death he was President of the American Educational Society.

In October, 1903, Captain Parry was elected President of the Industrial Association of America, which consisted of a federation of employers' associations and citizens' alliances throughout the country and which was formed to resist the demands of organized labor. He had fought and beaten the boycott in his own businesses and refused to accept the word of the walking delegate as law, and therefore was the unanimous choice for President of the Industrial Association. "Meet organization with organization" was his cry.

Captain Parry was prominent in politics and had refused Ambassadorships and the candidacy of the Vice Presidency of the United States. He was said to have been responsible for the nomination of Benjamin Harrison as a candidate for President, and also put forward such men as former Vice President Fairbanks and former Senator Albert J. Beveridge. Among his intimate friends were the late General Lew Wallace, Prince von Bismarck, and his son, Hubert. During the greater part of 1914 Captain Parry was abroad as a member of the Foreign Trade Commission of the National Association of Manufacturers, and was taken ill on the return voyage with the malady that caused his death.

He was an author, having written "The Scarlet Empire," an allegorical novel satirizing socialism, which received an international circulation. Captain Parry was a thirty-second degree Mason, a Shriner, and an Odd Fellow. He is survived by his widow, who was Miss Hessie Maxwell, and by nine children.

VON SPEE'S STORY OF CORONEL FIGHT

German Admiral Regarded It as Rare Luck That His Squadron Was Not Defeated.

NEW LIGHT ON BATTLE

Believed the Good Hope Still Afloat —Sea Too Heavy to Attempt Rescues.

A vivid account of a battle by moonlight off Coronel, Chile, in which the British fleet under Admiral Cradock was defeated by a squadron of German cruisers under Count von Spee, is given in a letter written by Count von Spee under date of Nov. 2, and published in the semi-official Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung of April 18, which has just been received here. Admiral von Spee himself subsequently lost his life when his fleet was sunk by the British fleet under Admiral Sturdee in the battle of the Falkland Islands.

In his letter, which tells in detail of the search for the British ships before and after the battle, new facts come to light as to the time and conditions of the fight off Coronel. The letter reads:

"Yesterday was All Saints Day, and a lucky day for us. I was on the way with the fleet sailing south along the coast, when I got wind of the fact that an English cruiser had run into Coronel, a little coaling port near Concepcion. Since, according to general international rule, the ship of a belligerent must depart within twenty-four hours, I thought that I might catch it. I had so assigned the positions that the Nürnberg was to steam up in front of the harbor to see if the cruiser was still inside, while the other ships were to be placed outside around the harbor. In order to save coal, the ships had steam for only fourteen nautical miles, but were otherwise cleared; in a short time all boilers were ready. My ships were therefore at about 4:25 P. M. rather scattered; only the Gneisenau was very close by, when it was reported to me that two ships had been sighted west-southwest.

Sights the Good Hope.

"I thereupon headed that way, ordered the other cruisers to come to me, for it was soon apparent to me that they were enemy ships, namely the armored cruiser Monmouth and the little cruiser Glasgow. Soon there appeared behind the ships that had been sighted the auxiliary cruiser Otranto, and after a while the armored cruiser Good Hope. The enemy attempted several manoeuvres by which, in my opinion, he would have got closer to the coast and on my leeward, which would have been disadvantageous to me.

"I immediately ordered the Scharnhorst and the Gneisenau to use all their boilers, and in a quarter of an hour I steamed at the rate of twenty knots against a heavy sea, luckily so far that I lay parallel to the enemy; but I was alone and was obliged to wait for the arrival of the others. The enemy was amiable enough not to disturb me at this time; the distance was then still about nine nautical miles. When, at 6:10 o'clock, my ships has gathered together with the exception of the Nürnberg, which could not be seen, I began to decrease the distance, and when it was about five nautical miles, I ordered fire to be opened.

"The battle had begun, and in the main I directed the course of the line quite easily and with little change. I had manoeuvred so with respect to the sun in the west that it could not inconvenience me. The moon in the east was not yet full, but gave promise of shining well in the night. Rainbows were visible at various points. My ships fired quickly and with good effect upon the large vessels. The Scharnhorst fired against the Good Hope (flagship of Admiral Cradock). The Gneisenau fired upon the Monmouth, the Leipzig against the Glasgow, the Dresden upon the Otranto. The last-named ship presently left the line and escaped, I think.

Two Ships Afire.

"Fire broke out upon the Good Hope and the Monmouth; on the former there was a tremendous explosion, which looked like a brilliant burst of fireworks against the dark sky of the night, glowing white with twinkling stars, and blazing up above its smokestacks. I thought the ship must sink under the circumstances, but it steamed on, and the battle continued uninterrupted. Darkness fell. I had diminished the distance to 4,500 meters. Then I turned so that it increased slowly again. There was further firing against the ships, which we could recognize only by the blaze; and when the gun-pointers could aim no more, fire was discontinued. The firing of the enemy had ceased.

"I ordered the little cruisers to take up the pursuit, but inasmuch as the enemy, as it appeared, had now extinguished the blaze, nothing could be seen, and our circling about the enemy's line in our attempts to throw light upon them led to no meeting. The artillery battle had lasted fifty-two minutes.

"At about 8:40 o'clock I noticed on a northwesterly course ahead of us at a very great distance, estimated at about ten nautical miles, artillery fire. I steamed toward it to help, if need be. It was the Nürnberg, which had been unable earlier to effect a junction, and which had now hit upon the escaping Monmouth, which, as it reported, had been found with a strong list to starboard. The Nürnberg went close up to her and gave her the rest with gun fire. The Monmouth careened and sank.

No Rescues.

"Unfortunately a heavy sea made impossible any attempt at rescue, besides the fact that the Nürnberg thought it saw the Good Hope in the vicinity, which was probably a delusion. It must have mistaken the big cruisers at a great distance in the moonlight therefor. I do not know what became of the Good Hope; Lieutenant G., who had time to make observations, thought he saw that it had also taken a heavy list, and when I recall the picture as presented at the time, I think it possible that this was so, but I thought that that was the result of the ship's movement in the heavy sea. It is possible that it, too, sank; it certainly was unable to give battle. The Glasgow could scarcely be seen. It, too, is said to have received several shells, but, in my opinion, escaped.

"Thus we won all along the line, and I thank God for it. We were protected in a manner that was almost miraculous; we have to report no casualties on the Gneisenau. The small cruisers were not struck at all. The shots which struck the Scharnhorst and Gneisenau did practically no damage. A 15-centimeter shell got into a boatswain's quarters on the Scharnhorst. It had pierced a wooden wall and then caused all sorts of mischief and disorder, but had fortunately not exploded, and now lay there as a greeting.

"A smokestack had been hit, but not in such a manner that it could not be used further. Similar trivial damages upon the Gneisenau. I do not know what unfortunate circumstances were present in the enemy's case that deprived him of every success. The enthusiasm of our brave fellows was immense. I am especially glad that the Nürnberg which, through no fault of her own, remained at a distance from the battle, could at the end still participate in the success. If the Good Hope escaped, it must, in my opinion, run into a Chilean harbor because of its damage. In order to ascertain that, I shall, tomorrow, steam with the Gneisenau and Nürnberg to Valparaiso and see if the Good Hope cannot be dismantled by the Chileans. Hereby I am rid of two strong opponents. The Good Hope is bigger than the Scharnhorst, you know, but has not as good artillery. To be sure, it has heavier guns, but only two of them. The Monmouth, on the other hand, is inferior to the Scharnhorst, since it has only 15-centimeter guns.

"The Englishmen have another ship like the Monmouth here, and, in addition, it seems, a ship of the line, of the Queen class, with 30.5-centimeter guns. Against the latter we can hardly do anything; if they had kept together their force we should have drawn the short end of the stick. You can hardly imagine what rejoicing there is among all of us. So we have been able at least to contribute something to the fame of our arms, even if it may have little importance on the whole situation, considering the enormous number of the English ships."

MORE RIGGS SUIT DELAY.

Government Gets a Postponement Till Monday to Perfect Its Answer.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Counsel for the Government is encountering heavy difficulties in preparing its answer to the suit of the Riggs National Bank to enjoin officials of the Treasury Department from imposing fines for the bank's failure to make reports, alleged by the bank to have been demanded by the Controller of the Currency in a spirit of personal malice. The answer was completed three days ago, but since then, in almost constant conference of the many counsel employed that answer has been modified. Today, when the case came up before Justice McCoy of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the Government, which obtained the original delay, moved and obtained a postponement until Monday in order to perfect its answer.

This request was not opposed by counsel for the bank, but in a running colloquy, in which Justice McCoy took an amused part, ex-Senator Bailey and Mr. Hogan, for the bank, insisted that the Government was seeking to bring up a great mass of facts impugning the bank's record because it realized that the "naked law" gave no defense against the bank's suit. Samuel Untermyer, who did the talking for the Government side, admitted that he did not wish to debate the formal emurrers without reference at the same time to the affidavits of fact the Government was collecting.

Justice McCoy, while he did not commit himself in the discussion, gave one intimation discouraging to the Government's counsel in its proposal to make a broad answer covering political phases of the controversy.

80,000 SIGN FRANK PETITION.

More Than 5,000 Letters Received Yesterday at Chicago Headquarters.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 12.—More than 80,000 signatures to petitions asking the commutation of the death sentence of Leo M. Frank to life imprisonment, has been received at the headquarters of the Leo M. Frank Committe i nthis city by Lester L. Dauer, temporary Chairman.

"More than 5,000 letters came today," said Mr. Dauer. "Our correspondents include Thomas Taggart, ex-Chairman of the Democratic National Committee; John G. Baker, Superintendent of the Continental Insurance Company of New York, and other men of equal prominence. Many organizations, such as the Iowa State Society for the Prevention of Cruelty, and the Board of Trade of Missouri have also joined the movement.

"The campaign in Frank's behalf is being carried on over the whole country and is meeting with enthusiastic response everywhere."

GEORGE NIPER IS 107.

Attributes His Long Life to Use of Tobacco and Alcohol.

Special to The New York Times.

STANHOPE, N. J., May 12.—George Niper celebrated his 107th birthday today in the little cabin near the old Stanhope reservoir, where he has lived for nearly a century. His youngest son, Thul, 64 years old, lives with him.

Niper was born in Pennsylvania. His father was a charcoal burner. Niper makes axe handles for a living. He selects the hickory and turns several handles a day. He has smoked and chewed tobacco since he was 12, and says he thinks he has lived so long because he has been a moderate user of tobacco and alcohol. He has never been seriously ill.

He voted for Andrew Jackson for President, and has voted in ninety-four elections, each time for the Democratic ticket, though all his six sons are Republicans. He was married when he was 21 years old, and his wife died fifteen years ago at the age of 90.

Niper's father died when he was 90 years old, and his mother lived to be 97. Despite his great age Niper frequently walks ten miles to visit friends and says walking is the best exercise except work.

PUBLISHERS MAKE PROTEST

Object to Proposed Increases in Freight Rates on Paper.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Representatives of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association and of many news print paper mills appeared before the Interstate Commerce Commission today and protested against proposed increases in freight rates on news print paper east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio Rivers. Representatives of the railroads were present to justify the increases.

Robert C. Morris, representing the Publishers' Association, said an increase in the cost of production of newspapers would work a hardship and that, as the railroads recently benefited by the 5 per cent. general increase they need no other.

The railroad representatives declared rates on paper had long been too low and that a readjustment was necessary and should be made now.

DOLL GIRL WINS TROPHY.

Frederick I. Hamm's French Bulldog Takes L. I. K. C. Challenge Cup.

Frederick I. Hamm's French bulldog The Doll Girl, considered by many one of the best of the breed in this country, last night won the Grand Challenge Trophy given by the Long Island Kennel Club at the final competition at Bryant Hall. There were sixty or more dogs eligible to compete in the judging for the cup, but the incleemnt weather cut the entry down to a small figure. Even so, some of the most representative dogs of the various breeds were entered. The judges quickly elliminated the outside contenders, and the award lay between the winner, Mrs. A. McClure Halley's remarkable Pekingese puppy Sums Ouena of Lienrud, William M. Jones's Airedale Crewe So Preference, and William G. Porteous's Scottish terrier St. Crispin's Hellball. The award to The Doll Girl met with popular approval. The dog is a remarkably fine specimen of the breed, strong in general conformation, with a wonderful head and front.

The competing dogs were the winners in the previous shows. Strangely, there were not many of the larger dogs present. Mrs. A. McClure Halley's Nanking Mei met the Pekingese imported from England about six months ago and which was considered a strong contender for the premier honor last night, was not entered.

The winning dog, The Doll Girl, has had a notable record recently. It was reserev for the best bitch at the French bulldog show, the best bitch at the Charity Show, and the best of the breed at Rochester and Philadelphia.

U. S. AND CHINA JOIN IN MEDICINE

The Hunan-Yale Medical School in Full Operation, Following Negotiations Begun in 1906.

INSTRUCTIONS IN ENGLISH

Nursing Schools, a Hospital, and a Research Laboratory Also Established at Changsha.

Systematic co-operation between Chinese and American medical schools is being established, according to Dr. Yen of Changsha, China, who discusses this subject in The Journal of the American Medical Association. A co-operative agreement exists at Changsha between the Chinese and Yale which is now in full operation. This movement took a practical form in the Summer of 1913, but Yale had been patiently and carefully paving the way since 1906. During these years the one aim was to cultivate friendship and good-will with the Chinese, and to win Chinese interest and confidence in the Yale work.

Every effort was made to give practical assistance to the Chinese in such affairs as Red Cross work, combating epidemics, and in making effective sanitary reforms. In 1913, when a large gift was obtained in America for the erection of a new Yale hospital, the Chinese were at once interested, and appreciated the opportunity. On their own initiative more than eighty of the prominent gentry of Hunan, led by provincial officials, sent a joint petition to the Governor, requesting him, in the name of the Hunan Government, to enter into a working agreement with Yale for the immediate establishment of a medical school. This request was granted, and the agreement was signed in July, 1913, between Yale on the one side and the Governor, representing the Hunan Government, on the other. Thus was born the Hunan-Yale Medical School.

The co-operative agreement was developed at the initiative of the Chinese, but the way was paved by a steadfast and definite policy on the part of Yale extending over seven years. In addition to opening a new medical school, with standards similar to those in the West, the co-operators also undertook to maintain two nursing schools for men and women, respectively, and a hospital and a research department for the investigation of public health problems and disease peculiar to China. The Hunan Government is to provide the necessary school buildings, costing $150,000, (Mexican silver,) nine acres of land, amounting to $50,000, and an annual sum of $50,000, (Mexican,) for the maintenance of the school and hospital. Yale undertook to furnish a hospital, costing $150,000, (United States gold,) and the salaries of fifteen doctors.

Land costing 80,000 taels, (a tael equals about 90 cents,) has been purchased adjoining the Yale campus. Of this sum Yale gave 20,000 taels, the Hunan Government 50,000 taels, and the land owners 10,000 taels. A medical preparatory department and two nurses' training schools were opened in the Fall of 1913.

The difficulty of the language to be used as a teaching medium was readily solved. The opinion of the Chinese managers was asked, and the decision was unanimous that English should be employed. The difficulties in giving adequate medical instruction in Chinese, and the ideal of making this a first-class medical school, alike made the use of English imperative. The pre-medical course, and perhaps part of the lower years of the medical course, would require more or less explanatory instruction in Chinese; but the opinion was unanimous and enthusiastic on the part of the Chinese that graduates should have a good working knowledge of English, and that the more technical instruction should be in English.

The medical preparatory school, with nineteen students, and the two nursing schools, with thirty-five students, are now in full operation, and the Yale hospital is under the direction of the joint board.

MANY LOW-GRADE DOCTORS.

Sixteen States Still Admit Graduates of Inferior Colleges.

The State Examining Boards of thirty-two States are making some use of the legal power conferred on them to discriminate between medical colleges and to refuse recognition to those which are of low standard or are not properly equipped to furnish their students a satisfactory training in modern medicine. Of the thirty-two State boards, nine will not license the graduate of any medical college unless he has completed at leasct two years of work in an approved liberal arts college before taking up the study of medicine.

These States are Alabama, Colorado, Iowa, Indiana, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New Jersey, North Dakota, and South Dakota. There are six States which have not given the boards full legal authority to pass on the character or standing of the colleges whose graduates may be admitted to examination. These States are Arizona, Idaho, Massachusetts, Montana, Tennessee, and Wymoning. The district of Columbia falls into this class also.

In nine other States the boards are apparently given ample power, but, so far as the reports indicate, and for various reasons, the boards are not using that power. These States are California, Kansas, Maine, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, North Carolina, Utah, and Washington. Arkansas and Florida each have three separate and independent licensing boards, one of which—the regular board—has refused to recognize low-grade colleges under its jurisdiction.

"Since the graduates of these low-grade medical colleges cannot secure licenses in thirty-two States, they will flock to those in which they are still eligible," says The Journal of the American Medical Association. "These sixteen States, therefore, are certain to be the dumping ground for the output of these inferior colleges just so long as the practice acts permit, or so long as the State licensing boards do not take action against them. The people have the right to expect that the State (on which the National Constitution places the responsibility) will grant them proper legislation, and that the licensing board—the only legal body having these matters in charge—will take such action as is necessary to protect them against the ill-trained product of the low-grade medical colleges."

NEW HOME FOR THE BLIND.

Society for Relief of Destitute to Build on Bronx Site.

The Society for the Relief of the Destitute Blind, which has occupied for many years the three-story building on the southwest corner of Amsterdam Avenue and 104th Street, has decided to move into the upper Bronx section. The society has purchased the entire block bounded by Kingsbridge Road, the Grand Boulevard and Concourse, Creston Avenue, and 193d Street, containing about twenty lots.

Plans are being prepared for a large building, and when completed the present site will be sold. It has a frontage of 126 feet on Amsterdam Avenue by 100 on the side street, and on it the building has an assessed valuation, although exempt from taxation of $180,000. William Foulke is President of the society and Charles C. Bull is Secretary.

The Home of the Holy Comforter purchased a large plot on the northwest corner of the Grand Boulevard and 196th Street about six months ago for a new home.

FUSS AT COMMENCEMENT.

Doctors Got Degrees 300 Years Ago Without Seeing a Patient.

The conferring of the degree of Doctor of Medicine was a much more imposing ceremony 300 years ago than it is today. The graduation of a medical student was generally celebrated with much detail, and for several days there were music and feasts. The historic features of the medical examination and graduation of this period have been immortalized by Molière in "La Malade Imaginaire." This instructive comedy was produced in 1665 for the special enjoyment of the King and Court. From the rising of the curtain till it falls the piece is the most scathing satire on medical art and science. No detail concerning the professors, practice, teachings, and instructions is omitted that could supply a point for raillery and ridicule.

Incredible as it may appear, the majority of students attained the degree of Bachelor, and conversed learnedly of the nature and cure of disease before having seen a case. The great object of medical education in that day was to know and discourse on all that the ancients had said about health and disease. After two years of devotion to the course of study the student was eligible for the baccalaureate, which was followed at intervals with further tests, and then came the examination for "license," admission to the "vesperie," followed with "capping."

"The scene takes place in the amphitheatre of the old medical school of Paris or Montpelier," says Dr. Mortimer Frank in an article on "Medical Instruction in the Seventeenth Century" in a recent issue of The Journal of the American Medical Association. "We see a crowd of old French medical celebrities of the seventeenth century, including doctors, surgeons, and apothecaries, in full professional glory, with their four-cornered caps and red robes trimmed with ermine. Beneath them sit a number of students wearing the black robe of a Bachelor.

"The Dean presides and opens the ceremonies with a long discourse on the glories of the institution. The object of the assembly is then disclosed, this being the examination of a candidate to determine if he can give sufficient proof of the necessary qualifications for becoming a licentiate for graduation. The candidate having furnished brilliant proof of his capacity, falls on his knee and receives the apostolic benediction. After an interval of six weeks or more the candidate is admitted to the 'vesperie,' which consisted of a pompous eulogy on the dignity and importance of the medical profession.

"On the final day he proceeds to take the oath, swearing faithfully to observe the statutes, to reverence the opinions of his seniors, and never to make use of remedies except those sanctioned by them. The candidate solemnly repeats the immortal single word 'Juro'; the Dean then thrusts the square bonnet on his head, accompanying the act with a slight tap; and the worthy licentiate is henceforth privileged to practice. The Bachelor, having undergone the learned ordeal with success, delivers a flowery address and thanks his masters for the honor conferred.

MOTOR TAX BILL VETOED.

Governor Says Proposed Law Would Lead to Serious Confusion.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 12.—Governor Whitman today vetoed Senator Hewett's bill to tax the horse power of commercial motor vehicles and assessing jitneys $2 a year for each passenger seat and motor cycles $2 a year. The bill was drafted to bring a revenue of $200,000 a year. In vetoeing it, the Governor says:

"If this bill should be approved it would destroy the system of the registration of motor vehicles throughout the State of New York. Its approval in its present form, in my judgment, would lead to serious confusion and might result in a very great financial loss to the State, of the revenue which the State now receives under the existing law, providing for the registration of motor vehicles."

The veto was also extended to Senator Gilchrist's bill to amend the military law to exempt national guard members of the Legislature from the actual performance of military duty, but credit them with it while in attendance upon the sessions of the Legislature. The Governor says that any legislation enacted by the State upon the subject would be without effect so far as the Federal officers are concerned.

The bills approved by the Governor included:

Senator Cromwell's measure, authorizing New York City to acquire two strips of land owned by the State on each side of Centre Street, and forming part of Mariser's Family Asylum, Richmond Borough, for opening and extending Rosebank Avenue. Senator Mill's bill, regulating the acquisition of title or easements in real property for streets, parks or for other public purposes in New York City. Senator Towner's regulating the distribution of surplus, voting for Directors and limitation of expenses of life insurance corporations. Assemblyman Kelly's amending the Workmens Compensation law by providing that an employe, suffering from a previous disability, shall not receive compensation for a later injury in excess of one-half of the compensation for the first injury.

VANDERBILT WILL INTEREST.

Newport Curious as to Disposition of Oakland Farm.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., May 12.—All Newport is curious about Alfred G. Vanderbilt's will, which will be offered for probate in New York, where he was a citizen. There can be no question as to his residence, as last April, while his steam yacht Wayfarer was here, he was asked why he did not hail from Newport instead of New York. His reply was: "I am a citizen of New York."

As Mr. Vanderbilt was most careful and thorough in all his affairs, there is no doubt that he made a careful will.

His estate about here includes Oakland Farm in Portsmouth, his stock in the Newport Casino, three shares; stock in the Reading Room, Spouting Rock Beach Association, which operates Bailey's Beach; Newport Fishing Club, which owns Gooseberry Island, and in the Westchester Polo Club.

The question of greatest interest to Newport people and at Oakland Farm is who will become proprietor there. There is deep grief among the employes, horsemen, farmers, and others at Oakland Farm. Flags over the Newport Young Men's Christian Association which Mr. Vanderbilt gave as a memorial to his father, the Reading Room and Casino are at half staff out of respect to his memory.

MANITOBA MINISTRY OUT.

Premier Robbin, Conservative, Gives Way to Norris, Liberal.

WINNIPEG, May 12.—The resignation of the Premier of Manitoba, Sir R. P. Roblin, and other officials of the present administration, was announced today.

The resignations were presented to Sir Douglas Cameron, the Lieutenant Governor, who then sent for T. C. Norris, leader of the Liberal Opposition in the Provincial Legislature, and called upon him to form a new Government. Those who resigned represented the Conservatives. It is understood they will also resign their seats in the Legislature thus giving the new Government a majority of members.

URGES PROTECTION FOR ALASKA SHIPS

WRECKS STREW THE COAST

Only Three Lighthouses for Distance of 3,000 Miles — Many Lives and Vessels Lost.

Under the heading "Some Needs of Alaska," E. Lester Jones, Deputy Commissioner of Fisheries, in the report of his recent investigations in Alaska, calls for the immediate charting of the Alaska coast, in order to safeguard Government and commercial shipping in the treacherous waters of the North Pacific and Bering Sea.

"The fact that today the United States Government has many vessels going to and fro, in and out of Alaskan ports and waters, vessels of the Revenue Cutter Service, the navy, the Coast and Geodetic Survey, the Bureau of Lighthouses, and the Bureau of Fisheries, and the fleet of commercial vessels, makes one wonder that the Government is willing to so constantly risk many lives and such valuable property in uncharted and dangerous waters," he says. "Many of the waters, especially in Western Alaska, are not charted, and although there are many very dangerous points there are almost no lighthouses.

"One hardly realizes the vast amount of shore line, more than the total cost line of all the States of the country bordering on the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans and the Gulf of Mexico. With the exception of a lighthouse on Hinchinbrook Island and two at Unimak Pass, there are no lighthouses from Icy Strait to Nome, a distance of nearly 3,000 miles.

"In view of this condition, it seems remarkable that there have not been more shipwrecks. In recent years more than 500 lives have been lost and property valued at more than $8,000,000. I saw several wrecks serving as landmarks, and it emphasized to me the fact that, to insure her development Alaska needs to safeguard her waters, which are the gateway to her vast resources.

"Lighthouses are important, but there is also the absolute need for wire drag operations on the Alaskan coast for the purpose of locating the many unknown pinnacle rocks which are so fatal to navigation. This comes home to me, for I myself encountered such dangers, increased by much fog and storm. Three vessels last season went to the bottom by striking these pinnacle rocks and uncharted reefs—the United States Revenue Cutter Tahoma, the ship Paramenta, and the Gayhead, worth approximated $500,000."

As an instance of the Government's failure to provide necessary protection along the coast, Deputy Commissioner Jones cites the case of Unga Village, on Unga Island. Notwithstanding that the village has become the headquarters of the fast-growing codfish industry and is also the home of a United States Commissioner and a Deputy Marshal, Mr. Jones points out that the island has been allowed to remain almost completely isolated because the Government has not established a wireless station there. Mail boats touch the island but once a month in Summer and every two months in Winter.

For the coming year the Deputy Commissioner recommends the expenditure of $218,000 for new vessels, more Government officials, and other improvements along the coast.

MARIE DRESSLER SUES.

"Tillie's Punctured Romance" Film Owes Her Money, She Says.

Marie Dressler, the actress, who starred with Charles Chaplin, the comedian, in the six-reel comedy of "Tillie's Punctured Romance," testified before Justice Page in the Supreme Court yesterday in her suit against the Keystone Film Company for an accounting of the proceeds of the playand for an injunction. She said that her contract provided that she should get one-half of the profits, and that while they had amounted to $122,000, she never got a cent.

Miss Dressler told of the agreement, and how she began in April, 1914, to rehearse for the pictures. They weren't finished until the following July, and she said that the Keystone Company agreed to keep an office in this city where she could always examine the books in order to see how much money the "Tillie" films were earning.

Job E. Hedges testified about the insolvency of the Alco Film Company. Edmund L. Mooney, Miss Dressler's counsel, explained that this company got the rights of the pictures. The scheme, Mr. Mooney said, was to fix things so that Miss Dressler would not get any of the money due her. The Alco Company went into bankruptcy after it had paid the Keystone Company $43,000 of the $75,000 that it was to pay for the pictures.

James H. Dalton, Miss Dressler's manager, testified that he had paid $1,000 for music to accompany the pictures, and that the defendant company had adopted a plan for the sale of the films without his consent. The case will go on today.

WEAVERS CALL OFF STRIKE.

Men at Borden Mills Accept Terms Which Were Originally Offered.

Special to The New York Times.

FALL RIVER, May 12.—The Iron Work's Mills weavers, at a mass meeting today, voted to discontinue their strike and to return to work tomorrow morning. These mills are the property of M. C. D. Borden & Sons of New York. The terms are that the Mason, or ordinary looms, may be stopped at 12 noon, but the Draper, or automatic looms, may be left running until 12:30, although their operatives may leave the mills. The latter are not to be held responsible for imperfections in the cloth woven during the extra half hour.

These terms were offered by the Superintendent of the plant the second day of th strike, but were then turned down. It was announced today that all the strikers would be taken back to work. About 5,000 operatives are affected.

JURY GIVES FLAWN $20,000.

Burned on Railroad's Electric Pole at Woodlawn.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., May 12.—Because Arthur Flawn, an electrician employed by the New York Central Railroad Company, had to have seven pounds of flesh, muscle and skin cut off his left side and arm, which had been burned by contact with a live wire, a jury in Justice Marschauser's Supreme Court today awarded him a verdict of $20,000 against the corporation. Flawn sued for $50,000 damages for injuries.

In June, 1913, Flawn was burned while trying to replace a tranaformer on one of the signal poles of the Harlem Division, just soth of the Woodlawn station.

His lawyer wanted to expose Flawn's burned side to the jury, but five purymen balked at the exhibition and said that all they wanted to see was the photograph.

JOHN ALLISON, CHANCELLOR.

NASHVILLE, TENN., May 3rd, 1915

The New York Times Current History,
Times Square, New York.

Gentlemen:

I have read most of Volume 1 of The New York Times Current History of the European War, December, 1914, to March 1915.

The volume ought to be read throughout Europe and America, for it contains much matter of history, written by those who have witnessed the facts and events about which they write, or who have actual personal knowledge of them, and by some who were themselves a part of the affairs and occurrences set down.

I presume it will be, as it ought to be, translated into the tongues of all the participants in the most cruel, savage, and stupendous war of all history.

The putting together of the facts of history in their chronological order and in their proper relations and bearings at once makes the volume attractive to the reader, enabling him to take a mental grasp upon the facts and greatly aiding him to retain them in his mind.

Of course, our "war between the States" (as Alexander H. Stephens entitles it in his two volumes) was a small affair as compared with the war now raging in Europe; but if such a volume as you have given to mankind concerning the European war had been made up as to the "war between the States" it would today be simply invaluable.

Very truly yours,

John Allison

BOOKSELLERS PLAN TO END CUT PRICES

Would Handle New Books on Memorandum, Publisher to be the Owner.

HIS PRICE THE ONLY ONE

Boy Scout Librarian Discusses Harm That "Nickel Thrillers" and Trashy Books Do to Youth.

The chief feature of yesterday's session of the convention of the American Booksellers' Association was the presentation of a plan formulated by the Board of Trade of the association to fix and maintain the retail prices of books, thus preventing the price-cutting, which, the association holds, has been so injurious to the trade. William H. Arnold of the Syndicate Trading Company presented the plan.

It contemplates continued ownership by the publisher after the books have passed into the hands of the bookseller. The latter is to have all new books on memorandum for a few months, with the understanding that at the termination of the period the bookseller will buy outright not less than 10 per cent. of the total of new books at the invoice price. Ownership during the period resting with the publisher, he will name fixed prices for that time, and it would be a violation of the owner's rights for the bookseller to make other prices.

This would mean at least during a fixed period after the appearance of a new book that the price-cutter would be eliminated. Whatever loss might confront the publisher could be made up by a slight addition to the wholesale and the retail price of the book. On the other hand, books that have proved unsalable at normal prices having been removed from the market, the publisher's salesman would find the bookseller much more ready to take new publications. Many new books that would have a limited sale are not bought by some dealers under the present arrangement; with the elimination of the new-book risk, such books would be taken in representative quantities and the number of booksellers would increase.

Franklin K. Mathiews, Chief Scout Librarian of the Boy Scouts of America, delivered an address on "Books as Merchandise and Something More," in which he discussed the harm done to boys by trashy books, and made an appeal to booksellers to eliminate such from their shelves.

"Happily, though," he said, "the volumes of the dime or nickel novel are fast disappearing." He quoted a letter that recently appeared in THE NEW YORK TIMES, signed by an author of "nickel thrillers," as evidence that the moving-picture show had helped to ruin the sales of such publications. But, he added, the nickel novel had lately appeared in the disguise of the bound book, selling at from 25 to 50 cents; and the results, even to many who had not figured in the records of the juvenile court, the reform school, or the penitentiary, were as definite and detrimental as that worked by the influence of drink.

"Three years ago," said Mr. Mathiews, "the Chief Scout Executive of our movement, James E. West, read in THE NEW YORK TIMES extracts from a paper that had been presented before this association. That article told of how widespread bad books are and how these books lower the moral standard, coarsen the character fibre, lead the child away from what is fine and true and honest and most worth while. The reading of that article by our Chief Scout Executive has had as much to do as any other one thing in leading him to persuade the National Council of our movement that, in their efforts to give educational value and moral worth to the recreational activities of the boyhood of America, they must not only influence the boy in his outdoor life, but also in the diversions of his other leisure moments."

BUSINESS NOTES.

A number of manufacturers of paints, colors, and varnishes have been forced, through the depletion of certain reds and blues and the advanced cost due to the limited supplies of these colors on the market, to withdraw prices on goods containing these colors.

Van Praag & Co.'s auction sale yesterday of a $35,000 stock of corsets manufactured by the Kalamazoo Corset Company, drew a large crowd at the auction rooms, 15 Greene Street, among whom were buyers from this and nearby cities. AUTHORS' CLUB SALE FOR BELGIAN RELIEF

630 Books and Manuscripts Will Be Auctioned at Anderson Galleries.

Colonel Roosevelt Gives Carbon Copy of Part of "African Game Trails," with His Autograph.

An important collection of books, manuscripts, and autograph letters has been made by the Authors' Club of New York, and will be sold for the benefit of the Belgian sufferers on the afternoon and evening of May 20, at the Anderson Galleries, Madison Avenue at Fortieth Street. The entire collection, embracing 630 lots in the catalogue, will be on exhibition from Saturday morning to the day of sale.

The Committee of Arrangements from the Authors' Club is composed of Rossiter Johnson, James Howard Bridge, George Sidney Hellman, and Joseph Spencer Kennard. The fund obtained from the sale will be forwarded to the American Minister at The Hague, Henry van Dyke, a member of the club.

Among the many authors who are represented in the sale by copies of their books to which inscriptions, autograph letters, fragments of manuscripts, stanzas, quotations from prose writings, or autographs in other forms have been added by them are the following:

Albert Bigelow Paine contributes an unpublished manuscript of twenty-nine pages by Mark Twain entitled "The New War Scare," which was written in 1898. Richard Harding Davis contributes the original manuscript of "The Bar Sinister" and of "The Boy Scout," and James Ford Rhodes gives the original manuscript of the three lectures on the civil war delivered in 1912 before the University of Oxford, England.

Two very attractive oil paintings by Walter Russell are in the sale, "The Shore at Bar Harbor" and "Rocks at Great Head," each framed. Fuhr, Gordon Grant, Mary Wilson Preston, Henry Raleigh, Charles Sarka, F. D. Skidmore, and Eugene Zimmerman; and there are two by unknown artists.

FLORINS, NOT FRANCS.

Diamonds Valued in Money of Country Whence They Came.

In passing upon the legality of an appraisal of diamonds, Judge Sullivan of the Board of General Appraisers, sitting as a reappraisement official, yesterday reaffirmed the rule that merchandise must be invoiced in the currency of the country of exportation, and valued accordingly. The case before the General Appraiser involved diamonds shipped to this country by Malka Polak, of Scheveningen, Holland, and consigned to his nephew, David Linkowsky, of this city.

The gems, according to the papers in the case, were to be sold by Linkowsky, and all money received above the invoice price was to be his profit. The goods were purchased in the open market in Holland for 2,207.40 florins. Upon arrival of the diamonds and examination by Examiner Treadwell, a private memorandum was found expressing a value in francs of 5,259 francs. The merchandise was invoiced in florins. The examiner, on finding this memorandum, and believing the price mentioned in it to be the proper market value of the merchandise, increased the entered value to that amount in its equivalent in florins.

The American Express Company, acting as forwarder and Custom House broker for the owner, went before the single General Appraiser with the contention that the examiner's method of valuation was erroneous and contrary to law, and that the merchandise should be invoiced and appraised in the currency of the country of exportation. While several claims were advanced at the hearing by the Government counsel in support of the action taken by the appraising officers, Judge Sullivan said the sole question was based on the value of the diamonds in the currency of the country whence exported. He said there was but one course to follow under the facts, and the law as disclosed in this case, which was to sustain the importer's values as expressed in florins, wholly regardless of the presence of the memorandum computing a higher value in French money. The result of this action is that the entered value is sustained, and the Government officers reversed.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market felt the influence of the decline in grain, and after a steady opening prices gave way and closed weak. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 20,000; estimated for Thursday, 17,000. Kansas City received 8,000 and Omaha 8,700.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The market for cottonseed oil was firm at the start, with more or less covering as well as buying by leading commission houses and refiners. The demand proved disappointing, however, and prices weakened toward the close under increased liquidation prompted by the decline in lard and the other commodities, closing at 7 to 15 points net lower. COFFEE.

Increased offerings of new crop coffee from Brazil for forward shipment have created a more bearish sentiment in the coffee market. At any rate there has been more pressure to sell recently, and the market yesterday was easy in the absence of the stimulation of outside factors, and prices at the close of the day were 12 to 19 points net lower.

The local spot market was inactive and prices were easier with Rio 7s quoted at 7⅝c out of store, while for exshipment off the dock quotations were about ⅛c lower.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 9,516 packages. Most of the large buyers seemed to be pretty well supplied and the trade was much quieter. It is believed, however, that the bulk of the week's supply has come forward, and there was not much pressure to sell at the expense of any further reduction in values; at the same time, there were a few weak spots. Renovated, ladles, and packing stock lean more in buyers' favor. Creamery, extras, (92 score,) 28¼@28½c; higher scoring, 29@29½c; firsts, 27@28c; seconds, 25@26½c; thirds, 22@24c; creamery, old common to prime, 24@26½c; State Dairy, finest, 28c; good to prime, 26½@27½c; common to fair, 22@26c; renovated, extras, 23@24c; firsts, 22@22½c; lower grades, 20@21c; imitation creamery, firsts, 21½@22½c; ladles, current make, firsts, 21@21¼c; seconds, 20@20½c; lower grades, 19@19½c; packing stock, current make, No. 2, 19½c; lower grades, 18@19c.

EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 31,003 cases. The general trading was quiet, but the proportion of strictly high-grade eggs was not large and the demand was chiefly for those. Prices for very prime to choice qualities were firm and tended slightly in sellers' favor at the moment, although there was not much speculative demand, and lines of storage packed eggs were not materially improved. The great bulk of the receipts were of medium and lower quality, and the range of values was widening. Nearby whites were in liberal supply and moved very slowly. It was very difficult to find outlets for the liberal surplus beyond current trade needs, and the great bulk of the business was in range of 22@23c, with some ordinary lots lower. Fresh gathered, extras, per dozen, 22½@23c; storage packed, extra firsts, 21¾@22c; storage packed, firsts, 20¾@21½c; regular packed, extra firsts, 21½@22c; regular packed, firsts, 20@21c; seconds, 18@19½c; thirds and poorer, 16@17½c; storage packed, dirties, No. 1, 17½@18c; fresh gathered, dirties, No. 1, 17@17½c; No. 2 and poorer, 15½@16½c; checks, good to choice dry, 16@16½c; culls and inferior, 10@15c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery whites, fine to fancy, 23@23½c; ordinary to good, 21½@22½c; gathered whites, as to size and quality, 21@22½c; Western gathered whites, 21@22c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery browns, 22@23c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 20@21½c; duck eggs, State and nearby, Indian runner, 25@27c; Baltimore, 22@24c; Western, 18@22c; Tennessee and other Southern, 16@21c.

Withdrawing Colored Cottons.

The scarcity of dyestuffs, which has resulted in a goodly number of withdrawals, was responsible yesterday for further action in this direction. Frederick Vietor & Achelis, Haywood Department, announced that owing to the color shortage the firm has been compelled to withdraw Commonwealth, Texas and Invincible stripes. These goods have been produced by the L. Banks Holt Manufacturing Company. Factors in the trade believe many other withdrawals will have to follow soon unless an unexpected improvement takes place in the dyestuff situation.

Conducive to a Change.

Buyers and sellers in the dress goods market are heard to express the opinion that the situation is well suited at the present time for the introduction of novelties in fabrics and colors. The cloths that have been selling for some time are still favorites, but the color range is so sombre that an innovation has very good chances of success. One seller pointed out, for instance, that there are just four colors upon which he is booking the majority of his business. They are navy blue, Belgian blue, African brown, and Russian green. The scarcity of dyestuffs may be held accountable to a large extent for this situation, but it is natural to expect that some change must be made for the reason that heavy colors cannot be used indefinitely.

Will Not Get Requirements.

Outside of the fact that it would be very impracticable for the clothiers to take, on a contract of five years' duration at a fixed price over that period, the contract for uniforms which the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company has to give out offers other difficulties. The cloth specifications call for the use of full-blood stock. If this quality of wool were used, the piece goods would probably cost fully $2.25 a yard, whereas the fabric probably desired should not cost much over $1.60. The specifications contained in the contract are almost identical with those formerly laid down in the Indian warehouse contracts. For a long time the full-blood clause appeared in the Government contracts, but as it was never possible to give such value and meet the accepted price, it was changed so as to read three-eighths and not full-blood.

French Orders Still Held Up.

The large orders for uniform cloth desired by the French Government are still held up for one reason or another. Factors in the market who have been following this business closely believe that conditions will remain unsatisfactory until there is some arrangement perfected for dealing directly with the mills making the goods. As it is at present, the contracts pass through several hands, all of whom get a commission, large or small, as the case may be. The result of this is that the mills, in their desire to meet the price which remains after various commissions have been shaved off the original quotation, must slight the fabric in some way or other. The French at the present time are willing to take a fabric containing cotton, the latest specifications calling for a cloth containing 90 per cent. wool and the remaining 10 per cent. cotton.

Dull Demand in Silks.

Just at present the demand for silks is very slack, although manufacturers anticipate a good Fall season when the buyers become active. There does not seem to be any perceptible indication of a change in the style trend, and manufacturers are of the opinion that what has been good during the Spring operations will in the main run over into Fall. The fabric which buyers are most favorably disposed toward at present is taffeta. This cloth with crêpe de chine, georgettes and marquisettes will probably be the prime favorites for the coming season. In colors, pastel shades are stronger. Navy blues are much in demand, but in some quarters the trade is getting pinched for supplies of the necessary dyestuff to produce this shade. The strongest factor working for the popularity of pastel colors is the scarcity of dyestuffs.

Egyptian Cotton Embargo.

Fall River and New Bedford mill men visiting the offices of local selling agents here the last few days, have much to say regarding the effect of the British embargo on Egyptian cotton, as related to plants in this country producing fine yarns and cloth. While of late the production of fabrics requiring Egyptian stock has been far below normal, the demand is now improving for both classes of goods with a corresponding rise in prices. It seems to be the general sentiment that the embargo has come at a most unfortunate time for the American industry. Under normal conditions the amount of Egyptian cotton used in Fall River and New Bedford far exceeds the amount of Sea Island cotton used during the last year or two. Now that many mills are going back to the making of the finer products, it seems to be a mooted question whether enough of the Sea Island cotton can be supplied.

A Growth in Confidence.

The upward trend in business sentiment in the dry goods district was reinforced yesterday by the arrival of several Southern cotton manufacturers, who gave it as their belief that a big improvement is taking place in their section of the country. Business is picking up, with every indication that what has been gained will be held permanently. One of these men estimated that in certain sections of North and South Carolina, the cotton acreage has been reduced from 5 to 10 per cent. This, however, was not the result of intent on the part of the growers, but due to the lack of fertilizers shut out by the European war. Mail advices received by selling agents and jobbers from all sections of the country are discounting the danger of war with Germany as a result of the sinking of the Lusitania. The letters, further, tell of growing confidence and a good movement in seasonable goods at the hands of retailers and jobbers.

Duties on St. Gall Fabrics.

Board 1 of the General Appraisers yesterday made a decision in the case of Stoffel & Co., involving the prices on St. Gall fabrics at which duty is to be taken by the Government. The imports in question, which came in last June, comprised white transparent muslin, bleached plain. It seems that, although the goods were of different widths the prices as invoiced failed to make allowance for this circumstance. The Examiner raised values on the cloths of greater widths, and the Collector took duty on the increased valuations. The firm appealed for reappraisement. Witnesses summoned by the Government, jobbers and buyers for large department stores in this city, were of the opinion that the wider goods cost more than the prices at which they were invoiced. It also seemed to be agreed by trade representatives that they could not buy similar goods in the St. Gall market as low as the Stoffel invoiced rates. The board approved the advances made on the wider goods but imposed no advances on the narrower fabrics.

Good Tone to Gray Goods Market.

The gray goods market yesterday had a better tone than for some time. Nobody is looking for a break in prices. Experienced operators found little disposition to make concessions anywhere along the line for quantities, except possibly, where small lots were concerned. The general feeling is one of conservatism—mills not appearing to want to sell ahead, nor customers to buy for the future to any extent. No great amount of trading was recorded yesterday. Rumors of war buying made their usual appearance, but nothing of a concrete character developed. While inquiries are made in the market for war goods, ranging in size from 50,000 to 1,500,000 yards, no concessions can be obtained with the result that possible deals remain in abeyance. There was some shading for small lots in the 39 and 38½-inch goods, amounting in some instances to from an eighth to a quarter of a cent off. Otherwise, the market remained firm. Most of the sales of small lots were for nearby delivery. At the close of the market, leading commission houses quoted spot goods as follows:

Stocks Move Nervously After Further Advance—Closing Level Lower.

The stock market yesterday came much nearer to reflecting faithfully the situation with which the financial community is confronted than did the market of Tuesday. Then prices were bid up energetically partly, it is true, through the partial retirement of a short interest but also, it seemed, through disregard by traders of the uncertanties of the grave situation with which this country now has to deal. Yesterday for a time this same spirit dominated the market; there was renewed talk of war orders with the usual figuring of profits to accrue from them and prices were advanced further with a good deal of assurance. Then the market as though suddenly confronted with the plain import of the dispatches from Washington which recited that it was certain that this Government would stand firmly by the position which it had previously taken in respect to the loss of American lives through the sinking of merchant ships halted its advance and then receded. It was very nervous the rest of the day and closed with net losses in many of the active stocks.

In its latter stage the market recognized the uncertainty of the situation, an uncertainty which cannot be dispelled until our own demands have been presented to Germany and until Germany's reply to them has been made known. That is the dominent factor in the present market situation and very clearly it is a situation which induces caution. Wall Street thought that it found grounds for the belief that the demands which we are bound to make will lead to no open breach with Germany, but that is a matter which is hardly in our own hands and one about which the financial community can have no certainty in advance. It is one thing to show a feeling of confidence coupled with the reserve which a grave situation calls for, but it is quite a different thing to assume lightly that all the uncertainties of a very serious situation will resolve themselves in a way favorable to the market.

In such a situation as that with which the security markets have now to deal prudence is an asset of high value. That fact was more fully appreciated yesterday than it had been the day before. Purchases of securities for investment based on the feeling that the country is in a period of recovery which if halted would be halted only temporarily can lay up no market problems. It is hardly a time, however, for unreserved speculative commitments or for an increase in the volume of lightly margined accounts. Operations such as those weaken instead of strengthen the market position and it can hardly be open to argument from a financial point of view that a strong position is desirable at a time when questions as momentous as those now in the balance are being worked out.

The business position in some respects is one of unusual strength, thanks to the liquidation through which it passed and to the recovery which has since set in and it is clear that the stock market as nearly as possible should parallel that position of strength. Of rumor apart from the main issue there was plenty yesterday, but of news relatively little. The receipt of $5,000,000 gold from France added largely to the latest gold movement in favor of this country. It is typical of the position in which we now find ourselves that we should be drawing gold from Paris closely on the heels of having made a large advance to France.

LONDON MARKET QUIET.

Anti-German Agitation Attracts Most Attention.

LONDON, May 12.—Money and discount rates were quiet today. Treasury bills were in demand.

The stock market had a good tone, but business slackened, the anti-German agitation attracting the most attention. Bonds and speculative issues were neglected, and copper shares were about the only feature of strength on the rise in the price of the metal.

A moderate amount of business was transacted in the American section, and prices held slightly above parity. The closing was steady.

Trading Quiet on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, May 12.—Trading was quiet on the bourse today. Three per cent. rentes 72 francs 35 centimes for cash. Exchange on London 25 francs 66 centimes.

$5,000,000 GOLD COMES IN.

Second Consignment from Bank of France to Lazard Freres.

Lazard Frères received $5,000,000 gold from the Bank of France yesterday on the steamship Rochambeau, making $7,000,000 brought in from Paris in about a week. The shipments were part of those comprised in the plan announced by the Bank of France recently of releasing gold from time to time for New York delivery.

This was the third consignment sent from Europe since the war began. The last two came on French liners, while the first, consisting of two lots amounting to $750,000, was sent from London on a vessel of the American Line.

Butte and Superior Prosperous.

The Butte & Superior Copper Company, Ltd., for the quarter ended March 31, according to a report issued yesterday by N. B. MacKelvie, President, treated 117,860 tons of ore, the largest quantity ever handled by the company in any similar period. The price received for spelter in the three months ranged from 7 cents to 8½ cents a pound. The estimated profits were $1,163,157, compared with $252,051 for the corresponding quarter in 1914. President MacKelvie says that prices much in excess of 8½ cents a pound have been contracted for future deliveries. A substantial increase in dividends, he says, is warranted.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

The Third Day.

Viewed at the close of business, yesterday's stock market contained some of the elements of each of the two preceding days without being entirely like either. Strength marked dealings for most of the session, but weakness prevailed toward the end. This course of action was not unlooked for. Talk of war on Monday brought a violent swing downward; hope that war would be avoided caused a brisk reverse movement on Tuesday. Wednesday, when the edge of both these influences was worn away, reflected traders' opinions in a more normal fashion, and the product was an irregular price list at the close.

New French Rail Orders.

To date the removal of the French tariff on steel rails to be used for military purposes has not brought a great deal of business to American mills. About 10,000 tons were bought back in March and none since, according to information circulating in the steel trade. The concession made by the French Government affected only rails to be used in facilitating the work of the armies. Recently French interests made inquiries for about 5,000 tons of rails for roads carrying peaceful traffic. The duty of $18 a ton stood in the way of a sale at normal prices, and the bidders evidently did not need the rails badly enough to accept an offer at a high figure. It is said that rail mills of the South of France are turning out a substantial tonnage, and the orders they are unable to fill are going to England.

Steam Pump Certificates.

The removal from the Stock Exchange list of International Steam Pump common and preferred stocks might seem at first thought to forecast some embarrassment for both holders of the shares and others with short contracts outstanding. The stock can no longer be dealt in on the Exchange, but this does not mean that their market has been wiped out. Outstanding shares may be turned into the Protective Committees looking after stockholders' interests and exchanged for certificates of deposit. These certificates will be a good delivery in case a person desires to cover a short contract, and, by the same token, they will probably be the paper received by buyers of long stock until the company is reorganized.

New Haven Stockholders.

The list of holders of 1,000 shares or more of stock of the New York, New Haven & Hartford, as of April 1 last, contains 156 names. The list for April 1, 1914, contained 161 holders of thousand-share lots. A comparison of the two lists does not reveal that New Haven stock passed from one set of owners to an entirely new set of owners. The lists show that twenty-seven of the large holders in 1914 liquidated their holdings during the year and that eleven new purchasers of large lots appeared on the books. The great mass of the stock, it appears, is still held by the old New England and New York families who received many dividends on their stock when the New Haven was in its prime. Trading on a big scale in New Haven was not carried on by individual holders, it appears, but only by the prominent banking and brokerage houses here and in Boston.

F. S. Smithers of F. S. Smithers & Co. has become a member of the Bondholders' Protective Committee for the general mortgage bonds of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railway. The other members of the committee are Charles H. Sabin, Harry Bronner, Samuel L. Fuller, J. H. McClement, and Gordon Abbott.

E. K. Boisot of Chicago, Charles R. Butts of Norwich, Conn., and John J. Pulleys of this city, representing large holdings of Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad general consolidated and first mortgage 5 per cent. bonds, have been added to the Platten Protective Committee, organized on March 15.

Twenty-five shares of New Yorker Staats-Zeitung stock were sold at auction in the Exchange Salesroom, 14 Vesey Street, yesterday for $12,500. This made the price per share $500. At the last previous sale a small lot changed hands at $600 a share.

J. Wallace Adams of Baltimore has been added to the Board of Directors of the Manhattan Life Insurance Company.

CUT OUT STEAM PUMP STOCK

Stock Exchange Committee Acts on International Dissolution.

The Governing Committee of the Stock Exchange yesterday struck from the trading list $9,486,000 5 per cent. bonds, $17,762,500 outstanding common and $11,350,000 outstanding preferred stock of the International Steam Pump Company because the company was ordered dissolved by the New Jersey Court of Chancery on April 28. With the corporation legally out of business, there were no officers to sign stock certificates, and the trust company acting as transfer agent refused to transfer any more stock. Under the ruling of the court the Steam Pump stock could not be made a good "delivery" even on assignment.

The bulk of both classes of stock has been deposited with Protective Committees and certificates of deposit have been issued in place of these shares. These certificates will hereafter be the medium of transacting business in the stocks until the company is reorganized. It is expected that application will shortly be made to the Committee on Stock List to have the certificates listed on the exchange.

COMMEND NOBLE'S WORK.

Stock Exchange Governors Praise Their President.

Governors of the Stock Exchange commended in a resolution yesterday the rule of H. G. S. Noble as President during the troubled year ended May 1. The resolution read:

At the close of a year's most successful and admirable administraion by Henry G. S. Noble, President of the New York Stock Exchange, under the most alarming and exacting conditions, with business transactions suspended for five months, with the whole world in chaos and disorder, and a quiet and orderly settlement of our affairs effected through the firm and masterly grasp of the situation, be it

Resolved, That the Governing Committee place upon the records its unbounded confidence in, its admiration and affection for Mr. Noble, its great appreciation of his distinguished service and executive career, which have brought the highest honors to himself and the greatest credit to the New York Stock Exchange.

The resolution was signed by W. W. Heaton, James B. Mabon, a former President of the board, and Donald G. Geddes.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

Forecasts of President Wilson's note to Germany caused a sharp reaction in the late trading on the Consolidated Exchange. The market opened considerably higher, and for a time on the early trading marked strength was shown. Business was on a good scale with both the room traders and the commission houses active, the latter handling a good balance of orders in odd lots.

MOVE TO PROTECT ROCK ISLAND BONDS

Committee Will Aid Holders of $100,000,000 First and Refunding Mortgage Issue.

HARRIS, FORBES & CO. ACT

Big Insurance Companies Are Large Owners of These Securities—Next Interest Due Oct. 1.

A protective committee, according to an announcement made yesterday by Harris, Forbes & Co., will be formed for the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway first and refunding mortgage thirty-year gold 4 per cent. bonds. This issue, of which about $100,000,000 are outstanding, and of which an additional $12,000,000 are held in the Rock Island treasury as collateral for other securities, represents one of the largest individual issues of bonds ever sold in this country by a railroad. The announcement, coming on the heels of the formation of a protective committee for the $20,000,000 5 per cent. debenture bonds, and the formation of another protective committee for the stock of the Rock Island, attracted much attention in Wall Street.

The banking house made this formal statement:

Harris, Forbes & Co., who have marketed a large amount of the first and refunding mortgage bonds of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway, have been in conference with some of the large holders of these bonds, including the important life insurance companies of New York. These interests have concluded to organize a committee for the protection of this issue of bonds, the personnel of which and other details will be announced in due course.

The next interest on the $100,000,000 first and refunding bonds in the hands of the public does not fall due until Oct. 1. The last interest fell due April 1, and it was paid promptly. In the past the Rock Island has been able to meet all of its interest obligations out of earnings, but the receivership, apparently, has put many big holders of Rock Island securities on the anxious seat. The fact that a protective committee should be formed four and a half months prior to the next interest date added to the surprise in Wall Street.

It appears, from the developments of the past two weeks, that there will be some fighting for supremacy among the holders of the various Rock Island securities in case of a foreclosure. The first to get into the protective field were the holders of the debentures. A committee was formed on April 29. It consists of Seward Prosser, A. Barton Hepburn, Edwin G. Merrill, E. K. Boisnot of Chicago, and James Speyer, of James Speyer & Co., whose firm placed the debentures on the market. The next interest on the debentures, amounting to $500,000, falls due on July 15.

The Stockholders' Protective Committee, formed by Charles Hayden, one of the newly elected Directors of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway, was the next in the field. The announcement of the membership of this committee was made only the day before yesterday.

It is expected that the names of the men on the latest protective committee will be announced within a few days. Large blocks of the first refunding mortgage bonds are owned by the life insurance companies, and it is expected that the insurance companies will be represented on the committee. The bonds are on the list of eligible securities for savings banks.

There is also the Amster Protective Committee, which is looking after the interest of Rock Island security holders. It was said yesterday that N. L. Amster, head of this committee, had the support of many men in the financial district who had not openly come out as his sponsors. None of the protective committees now in the field has asked for the deposit of securities.

COTTON PRICES OFF IN UNEASY MARKET

Traders Fear Wilson's Note to Germany May Be Less Pacific Than First Expected.

DECLINE OF 22 TO 24 POINTS

Weekly Weather Report Is Favorable Except in Texas and Oklahoma.

Although cotton yesterday gave evidence of a strong technical position resulting from recent liquidation, there was enough pressure of contracts to send prices about 22 to 24 points below the closing on Tuesday. Liverpool again made the showing somewhat above a recent parity with New York, but the local market failed to respond. Cotton was for sale upon the opening, and inside of the first half hour there had been a decline of about 10 points. This was followed by a rally to the opening figures, but in spite of the steadiness which frequently characterized the feverish undertone, prices receded rapidly toward the close.

Selling was probably inspired by the belief that the communication of the Washington Administration to Germany might be less pacific in character than had been expected. There was a disposition to believe that the President's note would be fully in keeping with the firmness demanded by the American people, and it was realized that this might lead to renewed selling.

On account of the fact that the Lusitania incident has developed renewed bitterness, the cotton trade is prepared for almost anything, even the declaration of contraband on cotton shipments which might by any possibility reach Germany.

The weekly weather report was quite favorable. The summary said that in the central and western parts of the cotton belt the wheather had been everywhere good. Rains broke the severe drought and planting proceeded under favorable conditions, while the early planted seed germinated rapidly and cultivation was progressing in the more southern districts. In Texas and Oklahoma the week was considerd unfavorable on account of further rain and wet soil. Much replanting must be done in the northern districts, and in other parts poor stands will necessitate considerable replanting. All work is said to be delayed. The following report from Memphis attracted some attention:

One serious feature facing growers in the South is the competition to be encountered with cotton owned by buyers and hedged with sales of contracts in New York and New Orleans. The decline in the contract more than compensates for the loss which has taken place in cotton values. The buyer who is fortunate enough to own such hedged cotton is in a position to sell at prices which would be disastrous to cotton factors or the original growers. The vast quantities purchased when cotton was selling around 11 cents for January and December, not on orders from spinners nor for purposes of filling engagements, but because of the relative difference in prices between spots and contracts, leaves much hedged cotton to be sold before factors will be able to make such headway with what they have left. The buyer with his stock hedged with futures occupies a very enviable position at the moment.

Southern spot markets as officially reported were unchanged; Houston, 20 points decline. The local market for spot cotton was quiet, unchanged, 9.85c. for middling upland.

STEEL TRADE IS ACTIVE.

War Orders Continue, but Domestic Business Is Very Slow.

Talk of war has not disturbed the steel market this week, according to reports from manufacturing centres. Heavy contracts placed here by the Russian Government for cars and rails are mentioned, with others in sight. The Iron Age says:

As yet the possibility of war has not proved disturbing to the steel trade. There are no cancellations or any other of the features that might be looked for in a grave crisis. The situation, in fact, holds the strength gained in the last two months. War orders and other foreign business have figured so largely in the industry of late that the chance of more war does not cause alarm. A first effect would be an increased home demand in some lines, and deliveries on foreign orders would suffer.

Russia's rail and car requirements are of immediate interest. Contrary to reports, rail contracts have not been placed, but two steel companies expect to roll 30,000 tons each for Russia, and the total purchases will be around 100,000 tons. Still larger amounts are talked of for the Trans-Siberian Railroad.

Steelmakers do not disguise their dissatisfaction with the volume of purely domestic business, and the more or less precarious character of the foreign demand. At the same time it is pointed out that if a real railroad demand develops, the industry would soon be running to capacity.

The Iron Trade Review says:

May starts off with the steel companies in a better position on bookings and operations of any time during the slow but progressive movement spread over the last four months. Higher prices, which on the average are about $1 a ton above the low point of the recent market, are being netted on present shipments, with some companies, notably the Steel Corporation, the operating position at present is the best in more than six months. That producer last week ran at better than 75 per cent. of ingot capacity, and this week is scheduled to exceed that figure, with the chances that it may reach 80 per cent. Large foreign orders still are a most important factor in maintaining the present activity of the industry, and the advance in the domestic trade still is coming slowly.

New Jersey Charter.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., May 12.—Charter filed: Harrison Market, Caldwell, market business, $100,000; Norman A. Oppenheim, Montclair; Ferdinand B. Kauffman, Montclair, and Rose G. Higgins, East Orange.

WOOL MARKET DULL.

Foreign Goods, Especially Australian, Continue to be Feature.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 11.—The American Wool and Cotton Reporter will say tomorrow:

"With the between-seasons period not yet over, the wool market was as quiet this week as last. The total sales were about 1,500,000 pounds. The buyers on the heavyweight account have not yet sent in their orders, and it is not expected that the new lightweight goods will be sold until July.

"Foreign wools, especially Australian and Cape, continue to be in great demand. Sales of the week included several hundred bales of greasy Capes and Australians, and a good number of South Americans.

"The Western clip is the centre of much interest, and wools are being marketed chiefly from Utah. Growers are still firm, and dealers seem to be more willing to pay the price. A wild market has prevailed in Wyoming, and the wool sold has gone largely to New England manufacturers.

"The highest value of wool which ever came into Boston harbor arrived on the Colusa last week with 22,000 bales, valued at $1,980,000. The Hacknas, with 26,000 bales, left Australia about the same time.

"Among the favorites of the buying are novelty woolen goods and plaids. Uniform contracts are interesting manufacturers greatly, because orders for this cloth have helped a great deal in keeping the industry reasonably active. Conditions in the dress goods market seem to be rather better than in the men's wear market.

"The manufacturers in the cotton goods market continue optimistically and and give no concessions. A moderate demand for sateens and twills compares favorably with that of a week ago. In the fine and fancy goods trade, the situation is better."

Distinction Between Jewelry and Articles of Adornment.

A. J. Hague & Co., were overruled yesterday by the Board of General Appraisers in the claim that mirrors having small balls which roll into a receptacle are "mirrors" within the meaning of the tariff law. The firm asked duty at 30 per cent. ad valorem under this classification. The Collector classified the articles as toys and took duty at 35 per cent. ad valorem. Judge Sullivan said in his decision for the board that it was apparent that the articles are designed solely for the amusement of children. The Collector was affirmed.

Milbank, Leaman & Co., and others, in entering certain cloth, deducted from the invoice value various items covering shrinking and damping. Appraiser Sague found the value of the cloth after the deductions had been made to be correct. The Collector, however, disregarding repeated decisions of the board, added the shrinking and damping charges to the dutiable value and exacted duty accordingly. The board, following its usual custom in such cases, reversed the Collector and ordered a reliquidation of the entries minus these charges.

Abraham & Straus protested the Collector's classification on a big variety of women's ornaments. It was claimed that the articles were improperly assessed at 85 per cent. ad valorem under the Tariff act of 1909, as articles of personal adornment, it being asserted that the correct classification was as jewelry at only 60 per cent. The board sustained the claim as to necklaces, brooches, lavallieres, pendants and earrings, but affirmed the Collector in the higher rate on pins, chains, and shoe buckles.

Dieckerhoff, Raffloer & Co., were sustained in the contention that hatpins imported under the old tariff are properly dutiable at 60 per cent. as jewelry.

Several importing firms, who failed to give testimony when their cases were called for hearing, or make appearance by counsel, were overruled in claims affecting the classification of different kinds of merchandise. The importers, apparently relied on the submission of samples representing the goods, but the board held this insufficient. The protestants included R. F. Downing & Co., Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne and F. L. Kraemer & Co.

Protests against the construction placed by the Treasury Department on the fish schedule of the present tariff continue to accumulate on the files of the board. So far, importers have not been very successful in having the Government's classifications upset by the board. The Smith & Nessle Company, lost in claims regarding fresh water fish packed in tins, and similar action followed protests by Von Bremen, Asche & Co., relating to fish packed in oil, in bottles, jars, tin boxes, and kegs.

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, May 12.—There were no well marked disturbances over the country tonight, although pressure is moderately low from the St. Lawrence Valley southwestward to the Ohio Valley and thence westward. It remains high over the West, Atlantic Ocean, and moderately high north of Lake Superior, and this distribution has resulted in the continuance of the general showers in the South and their extension into the Ohio Valley, the lower lake region, the Middle Atlantic States, and New England. Thunder showers continue in the upper lake region, with scattered showers in the Northwest.

It is much warmer in Northern New England and cooler in the north upper lake region. In the Middle Mississippi and Lower Missouri Valleys, the Plains States, and the Southwest temperatures are abnormally high, ranging from 90 to 102 degrees, the latter in Southern Arizona.

There will be showers Thursday in the lower lake region, the Middle Atlantic States, and New England, continuing Friday in the Northeast. There will also be showers Thursday in the Pacific States and Nevada, and Thursday night or Friday in Utah, Wyoming, and Western Colorado. Elsewhere fair weather will prevail Thursday and Friday.

It will be cooler Thursday in the lower lake region and Northern New England, and warmer in the East Gulf States, but over the remainder of the country temperature changes will not be of importance.

Winds for Thursday and Friday along the North Atlantic Coast will be moderate southwest to west; Middle Atlantic Coast, moderate variable, becoming northwest by Friday; South Atlantic Coast, moderate, mostly south.

FORECASTS TODAY AND FRIDAY.

Eastern New York, New Jersey, and Eastern Pennsylvania—Showers Thursday; Friday unsettled.

Southern New England—Showers Thursday and probably Friday.

Northern New England—Showers Thursday; cooler except on extreme East Maine coast; Friday unsettled; probably showers.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Several Manhattan deals and two sales of more than average importance in the Bronx gave an active tone to the realty market yesterday. Both of the Bronx deals were in the Concourse locality, one being in the upper Washington Heights section where there has been a great deal of building activity, and the other a few blocks north. The latter, which was the larger of the two, involved the purchase by the Society for the Relief of the Destitute Blind of the entire block bounded by Kingsbridge Road, Grand Boulevard and Concourse, Creston Avenue and 193d Street. The society now occupies the southwest corner of Amsterdam Avenue and 104th Street, but upon the completion of plans for new buildings on the Bronx property, it will move from its upper west side location.

The new site has been bought from the estate of William Wicke. In the transaction John N. Golding represented as broker, Frederick de Peyster, attorney for the society, and George R. Read & Co. represented the Wicke estate. Goldsmith, Cohen, Cole & Weiss acted as attorneys for the Wicke estate in the sale.

In the Fordham Heights section Richard H. Scobie sold for the Keary estate the block front on the south side of Fordham Road, 159.45 feet between Marion Avenue and Elm Place, with frontages of 115.47 and 57.55 respectively. It was a cash sale and was bought by a builder for future apartment house improvement.

Lewisohn Increases Heights Holdings.

Adolph Lewisohn has increased his upper Manhattan holdings by purchasing from the Markey estate the vacant plot, 25 by 100.10 feet on the north side of 169th Street, 143 feet west of Broadway. It has been owned by the selling family since 1895, and the old residential restrictions will soon expire. L. J. Phillips & Co. were the brokers in the transaction.

Mr. Lewisohn owns the entire westerly Broadway block front from 169th to 175th Streets, except the single lot on the 169th Street corner. His 175th Street frontage is 215 feet, and his recent purchase gives him 50 feet on 169th Street. His plottage will contain about thirteen lots.

Builders Get West End Avenue Corner.

Negotiations for a new apartment house on the southeast corner of West End Avenue and Eighty-ninth Street have been closed through Slawson & Hobbs, and a building syndicate proposes to erect five apartments there. The property acquired has a frontage of 81 feet on West End Avenue by 100 feet on the street, now covered by six dwellings, 592 to 598 West End Avenue, and 274 and 276 West Eighty-ninth Street.

Buys to Protect Light.

The 601 West End Corporation, Albert Saxe, President, which a few weeks ago purchased the northwest corner of West End Avenue and Eighty-ninth Street, as a site for a thirteen-story apartment structure, has purchased to protect the westerly light of the proposed structure from Dr. John J. Moorhead, 301 West Eighty-ninth Street, a three-story dwelling, on a lot 20 by 100.8.

Sale on East Eighty-second Street.

The Ess Eff Realty Company has sold to a client of Pease & Elliman 109 and 111 East Eighty-second Street. The building, which is occupied as a livery stable under lease to the Carnegie Hill Livery Company, covers a plot 50 by 100 feet.

Estate Increases Its Holdings.

Valentine Dietrich has sold to the Donovan estate a lot 25 by 150 on the east side of Broadway north of 207th Street. The estate recently enlarged its holdings and now controls a plot 175 by 133. Hall J. How & Co. negotiated the sale.

Buys Harlem Residence.

William A. White & Sons have sold for a client 141 West 120th Street, a three-story dwelling, 20 by 100, to the Crest Realty Corporation, Abraham D. Weinstein, President.

This property has been in the family since 1881. The new owner will alter the property into a modern store building.

Emma J. Eagan has sold to the Nason Realty Company, Max N. Natanson, President, 136-138 West Twenty-eighth street, a five-story flat, with stores, on a plot 50 by 100, located midway between Sixth and Seventh Avenues. The property was held at $100,000. J. S. Maxwell negotiated the deal.

An investor has purchased from C. R. Protze 306 and 308 East 118th Street a six-story tenement on a plot 40.9 by 100.11.

E. H. Ludlow & Co. sold for Alice C. Williams to Mrs. Frank G. Burke, Jr., the five-story tenement, 21 by 100, at 60 East 122d Street.

The Hudson Realty Company, Maximilian Morgenthau, President, has sold to Mrs. Jennie S. Armstrong the four houses at 1,214, 1,216, 1,218 Boston Road and 729 East 168th Street. The sellers took in part payment twenty-six acres on Central Avenue, near Valley Stream, Long Island, known as the Finn farm, and the private dwelling at 132 West 121st Street, 20 by 100.11.

The farm will be subdivided into little farms.

HAD FIXED RATES FOR GANG RAIDS

MAIMING CAME HIGHER

For Lopping Off an Ear Labor Heads Paid $600 — Women and Men Got Equal Pay, Fein Says.

As a result of the long confession made in the Tombs by Benjamin Fein, known on the east side as "Dopey Benny," the gang leader, the police were able to make public last night, the schedule of pay for which the gunmen would commit murder, wreck manufacturing plants, maim workmen who had offended union leaders, and terrorize by shoting, any person objectionable to the union officials.

The price for raiding and wrecking a small manufacturing plant of a shirtwaist manufacturer was $150, "Dopey Benny" at this figure to provide all the gangsters necessary to complete the job.

The price fgor raiding and wrecking the largest of the shops in the clothing and needle trades, was $600.

For shooting a man in the leg or the arm, or "clipping his ear off"—a favorite device for intimidation employed by the gangsters, the prce ranged from $60 to $00, according to the importance of the man shot or maimed.

For invading a factory for the purpose of throwing an objectionable manager or foreman down an elevator shaft or breaking his arm or thumb the price was $200.

For a "complete knock-out" of any individual of ordinary importance the price was $200.

Gang Leader Got $10,000 a Year.

The revenue of the chief gangster through these activities amounted to more than $10,000 a year. When Monk Eastman first began to hire out thugs to the labor unions the price for gangsters was $7.50 a day, with $10 a day for the head of the gang. "Dopey Benny" improved on this plan by adopting a "contract system" in which he engaged personally to do any strong-arm work required at a fixed price and paid his gangsters whatever he desired to.

The police found also that the principle of equal pay for equal work prevailed among the gangsters without distinction as to sex. When he hired strong-arm women, of whom he kept a squad constantly on duty, Fein paid them $7.50 a day, which was the same price he paid his men. He used the women to invade shops where it would not look well for men to knock down forewomen. He armed the women with umbrellas weighted down with lead slugs and with long hatpins.

The District Attorney announced last night that Miss Lillian D. Wald, head worker of the Henry Street Settlement, was entitled more than any other person, to the credit for the roundup of east side gang leaders and of the labor union officials who hired them to attack and even to murder prsons whom they wished to "discipline." The special squad of policemen working on the case under command of Deputy Commissioner Frank Lord and Detectives Henry Jessop and Clinton Wood, arrested five labor leaders, prominent on the east side, yesterday. It was said that the police had found nearly all of the twenty-three labor union officials and eleven gangsters indicted on Tuesday and that those still at large would be arrested today.

Miss Wald Started Inquiry.

The District Attorney, in telling of Miss Wald's part in the investigation, said:

"Everywhere we turned we found conditions much worse than Miss Wald had pictured them. She called to our attention evidence brought to her by Max Sulkess, Secretary of a new union formed by men who had left the cloak and suit makers' organization. He asserted that gunmen were employed to intimidate members of his union. It was this evidence that led eventually to the indictment of twenty-three labor union leaders and eleven gangsters."

A reporter for an east side newspaper asked District Attorney Perkins if it was not true that Max Sulkess, Secretary of the new union, was in fact a private detective employed by manufacturers to investigate the conduct of union leaders. Mr. Perkins said that his investigation had shown that this was true. He asserted that all Sulkess's allegations had been corroborated fully by disinterested persons before the arrest of union officials was ordered.

A condensed version of the confession of "Dopey Benny" Fein, which was given out by Mr. Perkins, was a complete history of gang life in New York from the days of "Monk" Eastman, "Kid" Twist, and "Big Jack" Zelig, down to the day when Fein wrested the leadership from "Joe the Greaser," and put all his resources at the command of labor union officials.

Both District Attorney Perkins and Assistant District Attorney Breckeridge, who came in contact with Fein while he was making his long confession, said that seemingly the gang leader had standards of a sort, for they found evidence that employers had twice offered him $15,000 to stop his activities. Both of these offers, Fein asserted, and the employers who made the offers admitted, were rejected by the gang leader.

"Fein Wouldn't Take a Bribe."

"The man really had a conviction," said Mr. Breckenridge, "that he was helping along in his own way a cause in which he believed. Hex would talk to me with glowing eyes of the way he turned down offers to guard the shops of employers from raids by other gangsters. He was willing to hire out as a raider of the shops of these employers at a much lower figure than he had been offered to guard them. He tried to convince me that he would have made the raids for the union leaders for nothing, except that he found it so easy to get pay for them."

Monk Eastman, according to Fein, was the first of the gangsters to exploit the labor field for the gangsters. That was eighteen years ago, and Eastman broke away from the previous gangster practice of working mostly as lookout men for gambling houses. Fein seized the gang leadership after Jack Zelig was killed in 1913 and developed the present system. He laid out the city in districts on exactly the plan of the police precincts, and he formed connections with the Hudson Duster gang on the lower west side and the car barn gang and the gas house bang further uptown.

Under the district system, each gang was to solicit all the business it could get in its own territory, but it must never execute any job outside of the district in which its members lived. When he obtained contracts to wreck shops or maim individuals outside of his own district, which was from Fourteenth Street to the Battery, east of Broadway, Fein turned the job over to some other gang. In return, he would do any job for which a contract was obtained by a gang outside of his district if the work lay in his territory.

There was a sort of a clearing-house arrangement by which cash transactions were avoided between the different gangs. Each gang did the work consigned it by some other gang as a return courtesy for having its own jobs outside of its district attended to. Here is Fein's confession as condensed by District Attorney Perkins.

"Dopey Benny's" Confession.

"Why I am called Dopey Benny I don't know as I never have used dope. I got the title as a nick-name years ago. My first job as a gangster for hire was to go to a shop and beat up some workmen there. The man that employed me, a union official, offered to pay me 100 for my work and $10 for each of the men I hired. I planned the job and then told my employer that it would take more men than he figured on and I would not touch it under $600. He agreed. I got my men together, divided them into squads, and passed out pieces of gas pipe and clubs to them. We met the workmen we were after as they came from work and beat them up. I didn't want to mix up in the work myself then and I kept out of it, but I was where I could watch my men work. The man who employed me said he liked the job fine, and paid me $500 as a bonus. That started me at my work.

"That same night as I was going along the street, I heard some shooting. I turned to see what it was about and saw men shooting at me. They got me twice in the leg. I found who it was shot me but I was never able to get even. It was for doing the job I had done that day.

"I was always busy after that, as I got a reputation for doing a good job. A man who had somebody in view whom he wanted beaten up would take me where I could see him. I would then wait at a place I knew the man would come to, and I would beat him up.

"Those were the individual jobs. I got in a fight in 1912 and was stabbed in the stomach. I was rushed to St. Mark's Hospital, where they operated on me, and I had to stay there laid up for ten days. The job I was doing when I got stabbed brought me only $100, and the hospital charged me $150, so I was $50 out besides loss of time. It was four months before I was well enough to do any more work. We got after a lot of colored girls in November, 1912, who had been hired to do work in place of white girls. They all had police whistles, which they blew, and that scared us off. Another time girls who had been handed out police whistles blew them and brought the police before I could get away. I was caught and got thirty days. All the time I was serving the thirty days my wages went on, according to my contract, at $15 a day.

Got His Pay While in Jail.

"I did a job in Brooklyn smashing up a factory, and somebody smashed my nose with an inkwell. I got $150 for doing the job and $30 to pay for having my nose fixed up. In January, 1914, I was convicted of assault and got five years in State's prison, but good lawyers were hired for me, and the decision was reversed in the higher courts and I got out. All the time I spent in prison I was kept on the payroll at $25 a week.

"I went back to Brooklyn under orders to do the best job I ever had done—to smash everything in the place and beat everybody up. I watched my men go inside, and then I went to a street stand and bought a package of cigarettes. I heard an awful din and saw people jumping out of the windows and screaming on the fire escapes.

"I just kept on smoking a cigarette as the people ran by me, revolver shots from my men popping out to keep them on the run. I went to a corner drug store and telephoned my employer that everything was O. K. He told me afterward it was the best job he ever saw done.

Hated to Attack a Lady.

"One job concerned a forelady in an underwear shop. My employer said to me: 'The forelady in that shop knows the boss too well. He tells her everything. She has to get a good licking, and the best thing for you to do is to get somebody to throw her down cellar. I am going to give you a girl to point her out to you.' I didn't want to do the job as I didn't want to throw a woman down cellar. I pictured my own sister in that position. He said, 'You will never get any more work if you don't do it,' and he kept pestering me till I consented. We followed the woman till she was passing a saloon with an open cellar door. We threw her down the open cellar and got away. She screamed and a lot of people came who took her to a drug store. I got $50 for that job.

"My employer warned me never to take the elevator on going upstairs to do a job in a loft building, as the elevator man might be able to identify me and testify against me. My men went up in a loft and cleaned it out, and I was watching from across the street. I saw a man we were after who got so scared he jumped out of the second-story windown and lit right on top of a woman who was sitting on the stoop on the ground floor. I got arrested in 1913, but I jumped my bail, as I heard Magistrate Appleton was going to send me away for six months to the workhouse. I stayed away all Summer, and when I came back and surrendered I was fined $5 and let off.

"I never told anything about my employers and who they were until they 'double-crossed' me at the time of my arrest by not getting bail for me. I made up my mind that with me risking my neck all the time, that for double-crossing me I would tell the District Attorney everything I knew about them."

Labor Leader Put on Trial.

Samuel Dudeck, ex-walking delegate of Bakers' Union 305, was put on trial yesterday before Judge Mulqueen in General Sessions on a charge of extortion. He was the first of the labor leaders to be indicted as a result of the confession made by Fein. Dudeck repudiated a "confession" he was alleged to have made to Assistant District Attorney Breckenridge, saying that he made the alleged confession to "get even" with other labor leaders. The case is expected to reach th jury today.

Abraham Baroff, manager of the Waistmakers and Dressmakers' Union, was arrested at the headquarters of the union, 16 West Twenty-first Street, yesterday. Max Kazimirsky, business agent for the United Hebrew Trades, was arrested at the office of that organization at 175 East Broadway on a charge of assault. It was alleged that he had charge of pickets who were sent out in strikes, one kind to do peaceful picketing, another to annoy strikebreakers, and a third group composed of gangsters who were hired to commit assaults.

Nine of the men arrested on Tuesday night as a result of Fein's confession were arraigned before Judge Wadhams in General Sessions and were held for trial in General Sessionns under bail of from $2,000 to $5,000. They were Julius Woolf, Jacob Halpern, Samuel Lefkowitz, Samuel Schorer, Philip Gossin, Harry Kleeman, William Tromofsky, Morris Goldberg, and Samuel Shore.

Word was received by the District Attorney that members of the unions composing the United Hebrew Trades had raised a defense fund of $125,000 by voluntary assessments, in anticipation of the arrest of the union officials.

Abraham Cahan, managing editor of the Jewish Daily Forward said yesterday that the arrest of the Jewish labor leaders proved the statement of President Gregory of the American Bar Association that workingmen could not get justice in the courts. Both Mr. Cahan and Secretary A. I. Shiplikoff of the United Hebrew Trades, said it was notorious in the East Side that employers had hired gangsters during strikes and that they were astonished at the inability of District Attorney Perkins to find any guilty employers.

WOODS RELATES HOW THE GUNMAN IS USED

Tells Industrial Commission That Gunwomen Sometimes Work in Strikes.

W. D. HAYWOOD'S 'DREAM'

When Workingmen Possess Machinery of Production, He Says, New York Will Be Torn Down.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Police Commissioner Arthur Woods of New York made a statement that made the members of the Industrial Commission sit up today when he appeared before them. Not only gunmen, but gunwomen, he said, had been used in strikes where women workers were involved.

"The use of gunmen," said the Commissioner, "is not distinctly caused by the labor conditions that exist today, but is simply an incident in criminal life produced by the existence in a great city of the gangster. Gunmen are not directly engaged and employed by employers on the one hand, or by labor officials on the other, but are utilized as an agency in certain situations and for peculiar work by detective organizations that secure retainers from the principals of a strike on one side or the other.

"Our present industrial system should not be charged with producing gunmen as an institution. The New York gunman is a distinct product of the criminal phenomena of the great city. He is an undiluted menace to the body politic. He is used for all sorts of criminal employment. He is used as a repeater at elections, a capper for gamblers, a salesman of habit-forming drugs, and as a runner for places of vice."

Chairman Walsh asked if gunmen from New York had been made use of in industrial disputes outside of New York City. Commissioner Woods said that he had no definite information as to that, but knew that New York gunmen had been taken to Chicago, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Baltimore, and Philadelphia. The operations of the use of gunmen, brought out in the confession of "Dopey Benny," were referred to by the Commissioner, who said that the investigation of these gangsters had resulted in the return of twelve indictments against union representatives in New York.

"This investigation has shown," said the Police Commissioner, "a large employment of gunmen by strikers and a somewhat less employment of them by employers when involved in labor disputes. The employers usually get them by going to private detective agencies that have a number of gangsters at their command.

"The New York police, the Commissioner said, were earnest and vigorous in their efforts to protect the individual freedom of laboring men, and picketing, free speech, and free assemblage are recognized as constitutional rights, so long as there is no violation of personal rights or of public police regulations. So far as this phase of the labor question was concerned, he thought there had been a reform accomplished since he became Commissioner.

W. D. Haywood, the Secretary and Treasurer of the Industrial Workers of the World, was before the commission for several hours and made a picturesque and entertaining witness. He first recited briefly the character of the strikes in which his organization had been interested, and then exchanged views with members of the commission in regard to the general principles involved, from his point of view, in the struggle of labor to get its place.

"I do not agree," said the witness, "that there is an identity of interest between the capitalist and the working man. It is a class struggle in which the man who works is on one side and Rockefeller, Morgan and their stockholders are on the other. It is the inevitable battle for the means of life which capital now controls—the whole machinery of production. We look upon piled up dividends as unpaid labor, and that the machinery and property of production belongs to the workers who, in time, will take over what is theirs. It will not come by political action, because the workers are not versed in the political game. Their life is all in their industry, and furthermore the workers are in a minority.

When questioned by Commissioner Weinstock, Mr. Haywood said that John D. Rockefeller had no God-given or man-made right to the mines of Colorado. His dream of the social era when the workingman would possess the machinery of production, he said, might come in a night, for who could have seen the interruption last August in the peace of the world and the awful scenes that have followed, with half the world murdering one another?

"When the time comes we shall have no use for the large cities," said Haywood, "New York will be torn down or left as a monument to the folly of man. Our people will choose to live in communities devoted to their special industries, with small, well-kept and sanitary cities of perhaps 50,000 people."

Toward the end of his testimony Haywood described himself as a parasite, as he was not a producer, and said he would like to go back to the mines and have his day's wages represent its social value in the community.

Professor Henry R. Seager of Columbia University urged in his statement to the commission the creation of a permanent industrial commission where the complaints and the facts of labor interests could be heard. Through it, he believed, all the rights of the workingmen of the country might be safeguarded, and ultimately the conflict between capital and labor find an adjustment.

S. S. Gregory, in concluding his statement, begun yesterday, took positive ground in favor of a Federal Incorporation act as a necessity before the wrongs of the workingman could be corrected. By nationalizing all large corporations that employ labor conditions of labor could be regulated and illegal acts prevented.

One of Gondorf Gang Sentenced.

James M. Dawsing, 61 years old, an associate of Charles Gondarf in the fake wiretapping swindles, was sentenced to Sing Sing for not less than one year nor more than five years by Judge Swann in General Sessions after he had pleaded guilty to grand larceny in the first degree. The charge grew out of the swindling of Kirby C. Sudbury, of Wilmington, N. C., of $7,200. Dawsing was a "steerer" for the Gondorf gang. Frederick Gondorf, a brother of Charles, will be placed on trial this week for swindling William F. Davis, of Absecem, N. J., out of $8,000.

CONVICTS VOTE DOWN BILL CUTTING TERMS

Tell Warden Osborne to Oppose Measure Passed Through a Trick.

SIGN OF A NEW SPIRIT

Prison Reformer Defends His Course in a Discussion Before Economic Club.

Several hundred members of the Economic Club, after a dinner at the Astor last night, heard Warden Thomas Mott Osborne of Sing Sing, Professor George W. Kirchwey of Columbia University, and Dr. Frank Moore, Superintendent of the New Jersey State Reformatory, discuss the best method of administering a prison. Mr. Osborne told of his success in changing the attitude of prisoners and cited the case of a man who through influence, had himself transferred from Dannemora to Sing Sing with the express object as he admitted later, of escaping.

"To me," said Mr. Osborne, "it looks as if it would be a tolerably simple matter to escape from Sing Sing, and I don't suppose he'd have much trouble, but after he'd been there a while, he said that he didn't want to escape. Not because of the movies and baseball, but because he was getting pleasure out of the expansion of his own nature."

Mr. Osborne disclaimed responsibility for what he called the "sentimental gush" that has been printed about Sing Sing, and reminded his hearers that his job as Warden was to promote the safety of society. But he said he thought this could best be done by keeping dangerous men locked up and by trying to make them useful citizens. He declared that the indeterminate sentence was an absolute necessity in prison reform, opposed the suggestion of Dr. Moore that more should be done for the prisoners, and said that the main thing was to make the inmates do something for themselves.

"If there is a proper system in the prison," he asserted, "we won't need agencies to aid the prisoners after they get out."

"To show you," he said, "what they think of the new system, last Saturday night I told the boys of the trick by which the Legislature had been induced to pass the law cutting all sentences in half, and asked them if I should support it or not before the Governor. Notwithstanding the fact that it meant a personal benefit to every one of them, all by an enormous majority that I should not support a bill that I thought was wrong."

Mr. Osborne also put in a strong appeal for the institution of the prison farm system and a token currency.

Dr. Moore said that prison reform was not a material, but a moral problem and that too much attention had been devoted to improved equipment by contrast with getting a better type of men.

"Clean up the homes of your inmates," he advised. "It is often necessary to severe the home connections when prisoners are paroled; and I think there should be a law that men on parole must have a license before they can get a drink."

Professor Kirchwey made a general attack on American prison systems, which he said unfitted the men for a life of freedom no matter how enlightened and well-meaning the wardens in charge.

The club re-elected William R. Willcox as President and Frank A. Vanderlip and George B. Cortelyou as Vice Presidents. Daniel Guggenheim, Alexander J. Hemphill, Cornelius A. Pugsley, Daniel Willard, and Rush Taggart were the new members chosen on the Executive Committee.

LAUD WHITMAN; HIT TRAVIS.

Civil Service Reform Association Likes New State Board.

Praise of Governor Whitman for his efforts on behalf of civil service reform, and commendation of the Municipal Civil Service Commission for much constructive work that overbalanced "some serious abuses and mistakes of judgment in the administration of the law," are expressed in the annual report of the Executive Committee of the Civil Service Reform Association, submitted at its annual meeting last night at the City Club. The report was read by Nelson S. Spencer, Chairman of the Executive Committee.

Of Contoller Travis the report says:

"During the last campaign Senator Eugene M. Travis, candidate for Controller, on the Republican ticket, assailed his opponent, William Sohmer, because he had filled a large number of exempt places with Tammany appointees. On examination of the appointments made since Jan. 1, shows that instead of giving ten places to Murphy he has turned over his office to the Republican organization.

"The records of his appointees show that Mr. Travis's pre-election statements were hypocrisy."

Everett P. Wheeler, President of the association, referring to the work of the Municipal Civil ServiceA ssociation, said its enemies had done a great service by pointing out errors. Samuel H. Ordway, President of the State Civil Service Commission, outlined the re-constructive work of that board and told of many amusing incidents in connection with that work.

PROTECTORY BOYS ESCAPE.

Kearny Police Catch Six of the Seven Who Dropped from Windows.

Special to The New York Times.

ARLINGTON, N. J., May 12. Attendants at the Arlington Protectory found at about 4 o'clock this morning one dormitory on the third floor empty of its seven occupants and their bed sheets knotted together and hanging from a pipe to the ground. At 5 o'clock Sergeant Bell and Policeman Hillock of Kearny ran across four boys walking together in the vicinity of North Arlington and halted them by firing into the air. They said they were John O'Gara, 19 years old; Patrick Kennedy, 21 years old; James McDowell, 16 years old, and John Hooks, 18 years old. They admitted that they had escaped from the protectory, and disagreed as to the ringleader.

James Kelly, 18 years old, another of the escaping youths, was caught later by Policeman Holt in Arlington. Henry Weller, 15 years old, and John McNally, 20 years old, were chased in an automobile by Lieutenant Oliver, but they escaped across the Erie Railroad bridge. Later Weller was arrested in Jersey City. Late to-night McNally was the only one at large.

HACKENSACK, May 12.—Samuel Vreeland, of Rochelle Park, fell over a woman's shoe in Johnson's Woods, just off Rochelle Avenue, early this morning. The shoe dropped from the skeleton of a foot and, after Vreeland had notified the authorities, the skeleton of a woman was disclosed buried in a shallow grave. Instantly the report was circulated that it was the skeleton of Dorothy Arnold who disappeared on December 12, 1910, though apparently the only reason for thinking this was that Miss Arnold had never been found and so might as likely as not be dead. The police put no faith in this theory but, as a matter of form, notified the Arnold family in New York, so that a representative might see the body tomorrow.

From the condition of the teeth, County Physician W. E. Ogden decided that the woman had been young, and other testimony showed that she must have been about five feet three inches in hight, with rather broad shoulders and an abundance of lark brown hair. She wore a black silk skirt and waist, patent leather pumps about 3½ or 4 D in size, black silk stockings, a thin ndershirt; white corset cover and white petticoat. Miss Arnold was an inch taller, though her hair was about the same and she wore a blue serge tailor-made suit.

Dr. Ogden said there was no doubt the girl had been murdered. The skull was crushed in on the left side and about 200 feet away was found a hatchet to which a few dark brown hairs clung and which was stained. Between it and the grave was found a piece of the girl's skirt which had caught on a bush.

The body lay face downward in a shallow trench. Only the legs from hip to knee were thoroughly covered and there was every indication that the body had been buried in haste and the work abandoned before completion.

Johnson's Woods are a little less than a mile north of the Hudson River trolley tracks and the authorities believe the woman was lured to her death, perhaps from New York. The trolley lines run from New York to Paterson, and the nearest house to the place the body was found is 500 yards away.

When a TIMES reporter told Francis R. Arnold, father of Dorothy Arnold, of the Hackensack report, at his home, 10% East Seventy-ninth Street, last night, Mr. Arnold said that he did not think there was any possibility that the young woman whose skeleton had been found was his daughter. "There is nothing in the description to make me believe that it was she," he concluded.

Movie Producer Sent to Prison.

James Kalnay, 25 years old, a moving picture producer, of 50 West 111th Street, was sent to the penitentiary for six months yesterday by Justices Russell, Kernochan and Herrman on a charge of defrauding persons who wished to become moving picture stars. Kalnay promised to get positions for persons who paid him to train them, but after they had paid him they did not get the positions. Leo Gilman, of 138 West Forty-ninth Street, was the complainant against Kalnay.

King Victor Reserves Decision as to Whether He Will Let Ministers Go.

COUNCIL HELD HURRIEDLY

Country Thrown Into Turmoil by Former Premier's Determined Stand for Neutrality.

UNITED NATION KING'S HOPE

LONDON, Friday, May 14.—The Italian Cabinet has resigned.

"The Council of Ministers," says Reuter's Rome correspondent, "considering that it did not possess the unanimous assent of the constitutional parties regarding its international policy which the gravity of the situation demands, has decided to hand its resignation to the King. An official note to this effect was issued tonight.

"The King has reserved his decision as to whether the resignation will be accepted."

ROME, May 13.—An urgent council of Ministers was convoked this afternon owing to the alarming increase in the agitation of the people.

At a Cabinet meeting held earlier in the day for the usual bi-weekly signing of decrees the internal situation was discussed and King Victor Emmanuel expressed the hope that an understanding would be reached which would make Parliament unanimous in the decisions that are to be taken.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, May 13.—Great indignation is felt among the large majority of the people at the sudden entrance of former Premier Giolitti into active politics in opposition to Premier Salandra and his policy. The popular view is that this is no time for internal wrangling.

The entire country is in a turmoil and the antagonism between Interventionists and neutralists or pro-Allies and pro-Germans, is becoming daily more bitter. Demonstrations are taking place in all the cities and even many of the villages. They are with difficulty kept within bounds and threaten to become really dangerous. This new situation may be prolonged. It may even overthrow the Cabinet, as Giolitti has a pawerful and numerous following, well trained and ready to follow him blindly.

Friends of Italy much regret this new obstacle to their national aspirations. The only explanation possible of Premier Salandra's determination to bring the question of war before Parliament is that he believes himself strong enough to vanquish Giolitti and thus have a free hand. But it is remarked that vital national interests also are in the balance. If he is overthrown those interests also will be defeated and the country delivered into the hands of the Opportunists.

The people are awaiting the turn of events almost with anguish.

ROME, Italy, May 13.—The political parties whose policies are in favor of Italy remaining neutral have announced the intention of organizing a demonstration to counteract the actions of those who favor intervention in the war.

The police of Rome, fearing conflicts between the citizens of the various parties, are taking extraordinary measures to cope with the situation.

Troops occupy all the important points of the city and are especially in force in the vicinities of the Austro-Hungarian and German Embassies. Strong detachments of soldiers also are being kept in the neighborhood of ex-Premier Giolitti's house ready to rush to his defense if necessary.

The Giornale d'Italia, which represents Government opinion, in an article urges concord. It suggests that in his attitude favoring Italy remaining neutral former Premier Giolitti perhaps went further than he intended to do. The newspaper recalls the phrase of Garibaldi when he landed fifty-five years ago today in Sicily with his thousand volunteers. "If united, our task will be easy," and calls for unity at the present time.

Signor Giolitti has had published in the Tribune a letter in which he declares he came to Rome because he was summoned here to express his views. He says his convictions have not changed since he expressed them in a speech before Parliament. Discussing the demonstrations against him, he professes not to understand how persons who claim to be inspired by principles of complete liberty have so little respect for other people's opinions.

President Wilson's Note to Germany

DEPARTMENT OF STATE
WASHINGTON, MAY 13, 1915

The Secretary of State to the American Ambassador at Berlin:

Please call on the Minister of Foreign Affairs and after reading to him this communication leave with him a copy.

In view of recent acts of the German authorities in violation of American rights on the high seas, which culminated in the torpedoing and sinking of the British steamship Lusitania on May 7, 1915, by which over 100 American citizens lost their lives, it is clearly wise and desirable that the Government of the United States and the Imperial German Government should come to a clear and full understanding as to the grave situation which has resulted.

The sinking of the British passenger steamer Falaba by a German submarine on March 28, through which Leon C. Thrasher, an American citizen, was drowned; the attack on April 28 on the American vessel Cushing by a German aeroplane; the torpedoing on May 1 of the American vessel Gulflight by a German submarine, as a result of which two or more American citizens met their death; and, finally, the torpedoing and sinking of the steamship Lusitania, constitute a series of events which the Government of the United States has observed with growing concern, distress, and amazement.

Recalling the humane and enlightened attitude hitherto assumed by the Imperial German Government in matters of international right, and particularly with regard to the freedom of the seas; having learned to recognize the German views and the German influence in the field of international obligation as always engaged upon the side of justice and humanity; and having understood the instructions of the Imperial German Government to its naval commanders to be upon the same plane of humane action prescribed by the naval codes of other nations, the Government of the United States was loath to believe—it can not now bring itself to believe—that these acts, so absolutely contrary to the rules, the practices, and the spirit of modern warfare, could have the countenance or sanction of that great Government. It feels it to be its duty, therefore, to address the Imperial German Government concerning them with the utmost frankness and in the earnest hope that it is not mistaken in expecting action on the part of the Imperial German Government, which will correct the unfortunate impressions which have been created, and vindicate once more the position of that Government with regard to the sacred freedom of the seas.

The Government of the United States has been apprised that the Imperial German Government considered themselves to be obliged by the extraordinary circumstances of the present war and the measures adopted by their adversaries in seeking to cut Germany off from all commerce, to adopt methods of retaliation which go much beyond the ordinary methods of warfare at sea, in the proclamation of a war zone from which they have warned neutral ships to keep away. This Government has already taken occasion to inform the Imperial German Government that it cannot admit the adoption of such measures or such a warning of danger to operate as in any degree an abbreviation of the rights of American shipmasters or of American citizens bound on lawful errands as passengers on merchant ships of belligerent nationality, and that it must hold the Imperial German Government to a strict accountability for any infringement of those rights, intentional or incidental. It does not understand the Imperial German Government to question those rights. It assumes, on the contrary, that the Imperial Government accept, as of course, the rule that the lives of noncombatants, whether they be of neutral citizenship or citizens of one of the nations at war, cannot lawfully or rightfully be put in jeopardy by the capture or destruction of an unarmed merchantman, and recognize also, as all other nations do, the obligation to take the usual precaution of visit and search to ascertain whether a suspected merchantman is in fact of belligerent nationality or is in fact carrying contraband of war under a neutral flag.

The Government of the United States, therefore, desires to call the attention of the Imperial German Government with the utmost earnestness to the fact that the objection to their present method of attack against the trade of their enemies lies in the practical impossibility of employing submarines in the destruction of commerce without disregarding those rules of fairness, reason, justice, and humanity which all modern opinion regards as imperative. It is practically impossible for the officers of a submarine to visit a merchantman at sea and examine her papers and cargo. It is practically impossible for them to make a prize of her; and, if they cannot put a prize crew on board of her, they cannot sink her without leaving her crew and all on board of her to the mercy of the sea in her small boats. These facts it is understood the Imperial German Government frankly admit. We are informed that in the instances of which we have spoken time enough for even that poor measure of safety was not given, and in at least two of the cases cited not so much as a warning was received. Manifestly, submarines cannot be used against merchantmen, as the last few weeks have shown, without an inevitable violation of many sacred principles of justice and humanity.

American citizens act within their indisputable rights in taking their ships and in traveling wherever their legitimate business calls them upon the high seas, and exercise those rights in what should be the well-justified confidence that their lives will not be endangered by acts done in clear violation of universally acknowledged international obligations, and certainly in the confidence that their own Government will sustain them in the exercise of their rights.

There was recently published in the newspapers of the United States, I regret to inform the Imperial German Government, a formal warning, purporting to come from the Imperial German Embassy at Washington, addressed to the people of the United States, and stating, in effect, that any citizen of the United States who exercised his right of free travel upon the seas would do so at his peril if his journey should take him within the zone of waters within which the Imperial German Navy was using submarines against the commerce of Great Britain and France, notwithstanding the respectful but very earnest protest of his Government, the Government of the United States. I do not refer to this for the purpose of calling the attention of the Imperial German Government at this time to the surprising irregularity of a communication from the Imperial German Embassy at Washington addressed to the people of the United States through the newspapers, but only for the purpose of pointing out that no warning that an unlawful and inhumane act will be committed can possibly be accepted as an excuse or palliation for that act or as an abatement of the responsibility for its commission.

Long acquainted as this Government has been with the character of the Imperial Government, and with the high principles of equity by which they have in the past been actuated and guided, the Government of the United States cannot believe that the commanders of the vessels which committed these acts of lawlessness did so except under a misapprehension of the orders issued by the Imperial German naval authorities. It takes it for granted that, at least within the practical possibilities of every such case, the commanders even of submarines were expected to do nothing that would involve the lives of noncombatants or the safety of neutral ships, even at the cost of failing of their object of capture or destruction. It confidently expects, therefore, that the Imperial German Government will disavow the acts of which the Government of the United States complains; that they will make reparation so far as reparation is possible for injuries which are without measure, and that they will take immediate steps to prevent the recurrence of anything so obviously subversive of the principles of warfare for which the Imperial German Government have in the past so wisely and so firmly contended.

The Government and people of the United States look to the Imperial German Government for just, prompt, and enlightened action in this vital matter with the greater confidence, because the United States and Germany are bound together not only by special ties of friendship, but also by the explicit stipulations of the Treaty of 1828, between the United States and the Kingdom of Prussia.

Expressions of regret and offers of reparation in case of the destruction of neutral ships sunk by mistake, while they may satisfy international obligations, if no loss of life results, cannot justify or excuse a practice the natural and necessary effect of which is to subject neutral nations and neutral persons to new and immeasurable risks.

The Imperial German Government will not expect the Government of the United States to omit any word or any act necessary to the performance of its sacred duty of maintaining the rights of the United States and its citizens and of safeguarding their free exercise and enjoyment.

BRYAN.

CALLS SITUATION GRAVE

REPARATION IS EXPECTED

"So Far as Reparation Is Possible for Injuries Which Are Without Measure."

LOOKS FOR PROMPT STEPS

"To Prevent Recurrence of Anything So Subversive of the Principles of War."

EMBASSY NOTICE IRREGULAR

"No Warning of an Unlawful or Inhumane Act Can Be Accepted as an Excuse."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—"The Imperial German Government will not expect the Government of the United States to omit any word or any act necessary to the performance of its sacred duty of maintaining the rights of the United States and its citizens and of safeguarding their free exercise and enjoyment."

This is the final paragraph of President Wilson's note to the German Government regarding the Lusitania disaster, which was made public tonight.

The note which was cabled by Secretary Bryan to the American Ambassador in Berlin today for delivery to the German Foreign Office tomorrow morning calls on Germany in vigorous but courteous language to abandon her submarine warfare against merchant vessels, and to disavow the acts of her submarine commanders in cases where American ships have been attacked or the lives of American citizens lost or endangered.

The principle is laid down and emphatically maintained that American citizens engaged on peaceful missions are entitled to take passage on the merchant vessels of any nationality, even on the merchant vessels of Germany's enemies, and are immune from any atack on he high seas which places heir lives in jeopardy.

Appeal to Humanity.

Throughout the note there is an evident intention shown by the President to appeal to Germany's sense of right, justice, and humanity. But the concluding paragraph informs the German Government in unmistakable language that a failure to correct or abandon the abuses of which the United States complains, will cause this Government to take its own course in order to bring about what it insists the German Government should do of its own volition.

With te possible exception of the closing paragraph permaps the most striking feature of the note is the virtual insistence that Germany abandon her submarine warfare on merchant shipping, not only with reference to the vessels of the United States and other neutral nations, but also the merchant vessels which fly the flags of Germany's enemies.

Abandon Submarine Attacks.

It is not stretching the purpose of President Wilson's words to say that he calls on Germany to abandon the terms of her war zone order, so far as it aplies to submarine attacks on merchant ships of any nation, including a belligerent, or the destruction of any merchant ship, no matter what flag she carries, until after her passengers and crew have been allowed to leave her in safety.

The points made by the President in this communication may be summarized in the following groupings:

1. The German Government should disavow the acts which resulted not only in the sinking of the Lusitania, but those which disabled the American ship Gulflight and the American ship Cushing, as well as the destruction of the British steamer Falaba, with the consequent death of Leon C. Thrasher, an American citizen.

2. The German Government, in the "confident expectation" of this Government, will make reparation "so far as reparation is possible,"

NEW FRENCH GAIN; CARENCY TAKEN

20 BIG GUNS CAPTURED

Victors' Spoils Include 3,000 Rifles and Large Stores of Shells and Cartridges.

LONDON, May 13.—The French are celebrating the victory of Carency, which was rendered complete by the capture of the last German position in that village Wednesday night. As a result of the sanguinary fighting on the front stretching from Carency to Neuville-St. Vaast, the victors are in possession of large stores of German artillery and small-arms ammunition, of 3,000 rifles, and twenty big guns, as well as a large number of machine guns.

The French War Office also reports progress to the north of Carency, where the French have established themselves in Albain-St. Nazaire, and asserts that the forest of Le Prêtre, long the scene of trench fighting in which first one and then the other opponent has had the advantage, is at last wholly French.

While announcing successes near Ypres, repulses of French counter-attacks near Berry-au Bac and of a new assault in the Woevre, the Berlin official report admits the evacuation of Carency and Albain-St. Nazaire, with loss of "much material."

Sir John French's report indicates that the British positions east of Ypres are still under terrific pressure from German assaults, the defenders' line having been temporarily broken, but it is asserted that it still holds fast.

These are the official reports on which the French claims of victory are founded:

(Night Report)—The Belgian Army, by a new attack last night on the right bank of the Yser, repulsed the enemy, who left, in retiring, several hundred dead on the ground.

Much Booty Taken at Carency.

To the north of Arras we have obtained some new and important results. By the capture of Carency there has fallen into our hands much war material, which it has not yet been possible to enumerate completely. It includes two cannon, one howitzer, two mortars, a dozen bomb throwers, a large number of machine guns, 3,000 rifles, and large supplies of shells and cartridges.

In the wood of Hill 125 we found the bodies of three companies of Germans who had been annihilated by our artillery.

The enemy bombarded Carency this afternoon, but without result. As masters of Carency we have made progress toward the north, where we have established ourselves in Albain St. Nazaire, which we hold with the exception of some houses along the river. Around these the struggle still continues. We made several hundred prisoners. During his retirement the enemy set fire to half the village.

At Neuville St. Vaast we occupied new groups of houses in the northern

BRITAIN WILL INTERN GERMANS

New Policy, Announced by Asquith, Greeted Without Protest by Commons.

TO DEPORT NON-FIGHTERS

Naturalized Aliens Retain Liberty, but on Sufferance—Plan Supported at Big Meetings.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 13.—Premier Asquith, in the House of Commons today, announced the proposals of the Cabinet for dealing with enemy aliens. These proposals were submitted yesterday afternoon to Andrew Bonar Law, the leader of the opposition, and were approved by him. They are drastic, sweeping and unprecedented. Deeply as the House was stirred by this necessity of war, there was no protest. In brief, the Government policy is internment and deportation. The announcement by Premier Asquith was followed by a subsidence of the anti-German rioting.

The realities of the present struggle were brought home to the House a few minutes earlier by Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, who announced the loss of the battleship Goliath by torpedo attack in the Dardanelles, with 500 officers and men, and the next sentence announced the further success of the British submarine E-14, which sank two Turkish torpedo boats and a transport.

A snub was administered to Johnson Hicks, who suggested that somebody had overruled Lord Fisher's alleged reluctance to attack the Dardanelles without the co-operation of the military forces.

"In time of war," Mr. Churchill retorted, "the unity of the Board of Admiralty should not be impugned."

But it was the alien enemy in the midst of the country that absorbed attention in the House.

"The use of gases," Lord Robert Cecil, "the loss of the Lusitania and the revelations in the Bryce report on the Belgian atrocities have destroyed the view that the ordinary presuppositions about men are applicable to Germans. We find that they are capable of any crime, of the most dastardly, treacherous and cruel attacks the mind of man can conceive."

When a Member suggested that the Bryce report be sent to every home in the land the members cheered fiercely, and there was a still greater demonstration when the Prime Minister, in a sentence uttered with suppressed passion, declared that the report would be read throughout the length and breadth of the world.

It was in such an atmosphere that the edict against the alien enemies in England, so eagerly awaited, was promulgated.

A careful distinction was drawn

TURKS TORPEDO BRITISH WARSHIP

Predreadnought Goliath Sunk in Dardanelles, with Loss of 500 Men.

VICTIM OF DESTROYERS

They Attacked Her Just Within the Strait—Twenty Officers and 160 Men Saved.

LONDON, May 13.—The British battleship Goliath has been torpedoed in the Dardanelles. It is believed that 500 lives have been lost.

Announcement of the loss of the battleship was made in the House of Commons this afternoon by Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, who said:

"The Goliath was torpedoed last night in a torpedo attack by destroyers while protecting the French flank just inside the strait.

"Twenty officers and 160 men were saved, which, I fear, means that over 500 were lost.

"The Admiral commanding at the Dardanelles also telegraphs that the submarine E-14, which, with so much daring, penetrated to the Sea of Marmora, has reported that she sank two Turkish gunboats and a large Turkish transport."

Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent says that Turkish Headquarters has made the following announcement, (probably referring to the Goliath:)

"A portion of the Turkish fleet in the forenoon attacked an English ironclad near Morto Harbor, at the entrance to the Dardanelles. She was struck by projectiles in three places, namely, the Commander's bridge, amidship, and astern, and sank immediately."

The Goliath is the fifth battleship unit to be lost during the investment of the Dardanelles. On Dec. 13, 1914, the Turkish battleship Mesaudiyeh was sunk by a British submarine, which dived under five lines of mines to reach her prey. On March 18 the Ocean, a sister ship of the Goliath; the Irresistible, a sister ship of the Formidable, which was lost in the English Channel by torpedo or mine on Jan. 1, and the French battleship Bouvet were sunk by mines while bombarding the forts on the Dardanelles.

All these battleships were of the predreadnought type. The Goliath, when she was completed in 1900, was noted for being one of the fastest ships of her class, making over her registered speed of 18¼ knots an hour. Her waterline length was 400 feet; her beam 74 feet, and her draught 26½ feet. Her displacement was 12,950 tons, and her officers and men numbered 750, or, as a flagship, 780.

The Goliath carried four 12-inch and twelve 6-inch guns, twelve 12-pounders, (ten heavy and two light;) six Maxims, and four 18-inch submerged torpedo tubes.

It has been reported, but the report lacks confirmation, that another British battleship, the Lord Nelson, stranded inside the strait and was destroyed by Turkish gun fire. The report emanated from Constantinople via Berlin on April 6. Since then, however, the name of the Lord Nelson has appeared in the British Admiralty reports of the action of the Franco-British fleets.

for the injuries done by German agents.

3. The German Government, it is also confidently expected, "will take immediate steps to prevent the recurrence of anything so obviously subversive of the principles of warfare for which the Imperial German Government have in the past so wisely and so firmly contended."

Opinions Are Divided.

Such opinions as were expressed tonight in unofficial circles indicated that there was likely to be a divided view as to whether the President's message to the German Government meant war or a continuance of friendly diplomatic relations between the two nations. Germany has already refused to abandon her submarine warfare unless England, for her part, would consent to relinquish her "starving-out" policy directed against Germany.

In calling on Germany to cease her submarine attacks on merchant vessels the United States does not offer any counter proposition. Having this in mind, one opinion prevailing in Washington tonight is that the course of the United States, outlined in the note, is likely to result in a severance of dealings between the two Governments and an ultimate resort to hostilities.

Opens Way for Exchanges.

This, however, does not appear to be the prevailing interpretation in Administration circles. The feeling there is that the note opens the way for diplomatic exchanges. It is pointed out that if Germany construes the note in the spirit which pervades it, she will suffer no loss of dignity by responding in awy that will afford the United States Government no opportunity for offense, and will lead to mutual agreements which will produce the results that are insisted upon by President Wilson.

At the same time some persons here find it difficult to escape the conviction that the German Government will not be willing to abandon its submarine warfare on the merchant ships of Germany's enemies. Judged by some of the views expressed at Tuesday's Cabinet meeting, it is believed that the response of the United States to this attitude would be the severance of diplomatic relations with Germany without resort to war and a synchronous declaration to the world that this nation could afford to have no further dealings with a Government which refused to comply with the rules of civilized warfare.

Submarine Reprisals.

In an examination of the note, attention is concentrated on the concluding paragraph and the paragraph which refers to the manner of conducting submarine war against unarmed merchantmen. The last mentioned reference holds that the submarine cannot unedrtake reprisals against merchant vessels with any success, and the President's reasons for this view are given as follows:

"It is practically impossible for the officers of the submarine to visit a merchantman at sea and examine her papers and cargo. It is practically impossible for them to make a prize of her, and, if they cannot put a prize crew on board of her, they cannot sin her without leaving her crew and all on board of her to the mercy of the sea in her small boats. These facts, it is understood, the Imperial German Government frankly admit. We are informed that in the instance of which we have spoken time enough for that poor measure of safety was not given, and in at least two of the cases cited, not so much as a warning was received. Manifestly submarines cannot be used against merchantmen, as the last weeks have shown, without an inevitable violation of many sacred principles of justice and humanity."

Recalls Asquith's View.

The language quoted above practically advances the same ideas as those put forth by Mr. Asquith, the Prime Minister of Great Britain, in the House of Commons on March 1 as follows:

The responsibility of discriminating between neutral and enemy vessels and between neutral and enemy cargoes obviously rests with the attacking ship, whose duty it is to verify the status and character of the vessel and cargo, and to preserve all papers before sinking or capturing the ship. So, also, the humane duty to provide for the safety of crews of merchant vessels, whether neutral or enemy, is an obligation on every belligerent.

It is upon this basis that all previous discussions of law for regulating warfare have proceeded. The German submarine fulfills none of these obligations. She enjoys no local command of the waters wherein she operates. She does not take her captures within the jurisdiction of a prize court. She carries no prize crew which can be put aboard prizes which she seizes. She uses no effective means of discriminating between neutral and enemy vessels. She does not receive on board for safety the crew of the vessel she sinks. Her methods of warfare, therefore, are entirely outside the scope of any international instruments regulating operations against commerce in time of war.

The Gulflight Case.

A feature of the American note is that it charges that the American oil tank steamer Gulflight was disabled by a torpedo fired by a German submarine. It has never been publicly disclosed whether the German Government has admitted that the injury to this vessel was due to submarine activity. On Tuesday the State Department gave to the press a circular statement issued by the German Government saying that orders and instructions had been given repeatedly to German submarine commanders to avoid attacking neutral vesels not carrying contraband or engaged in hostile acts. A portion of this circular statement was omitted from the text as made public by the State Department, and it is suggested tonight that this deletion embraced an acknowledgment by Germany that the Gulflight had been attacked by a German submarine and had not been the victim of a British mine.

Embassy Advertisement.

Another feature of the note that attracts attention is the paragraph which refers to the action of the German Embassy in Washington in inserting an advertisement in American newspapers warning American citizens not to take passage on ships of Germany's enemies. President Wilson makes reference to the "surprising irregularity of a communication from the Imperial Government's Embassy at Washington addressed to the people of the United States through the newspapers," but he adds that he does so only to point out that no warning that an unlawful and inhumane act will be committed can be accepted by this Government in excuse or palliation for that act.

As has been said in Washington dispatches to THE TIMES, the note is an appeal to German conscience. It calls on Germany on grounds of humanity as well as of international law to abandon its submarine warfare, and gives the Imperial Government an opportunity to disavow the acts of its submarine commanders. The President states flatly that he is loath to believe that these acts had the sanction of the German Government. The plain intent of one portion of the communication is to show emphatically that this Government holds that American citizens on innocent missions have just as much right on a belligerent merchant vessel as they have on a vessel flying the American flag.

The declaration in the American note to Germany of Feb. 10 that this Government would hold the German Government to "strict accountability" for acts occasioning the loss of American vessels or the lives of American citizens on the high seas is emphasized in the note. The President repeats the term "strict accountability," but softens it by the statement that this Government does no understand that the Imperial Governmen questions the rights which the United States maintains belong to its ships and citizens.

Although the President praises Germany for high principles of equity which have actuated and guided her in the past, he refers to "acts of lawlessness," but a gain gives the German Government the opportunity to take no offense over this term, for he expresses the belief that the commanders of the German vessel which committed these acts did so "under misapprehension" of the orders of the German naval authorities. The President takes it for granted that the commanders of German submarines were expected to do nothing that would involve the lives of noncombatants.

"The Government and the people of the United States," says the President, "look to the Imperial German Government for just, prompt, and enlightened action in this vital matter with the greatest confidence, because the United States and Germany are bound together not only by special ties of friendship but also by the explicit stipulations of the treaty of 1828 between the United States and the Kingdom of Prussia."

Take Hopeful View.

It is evident from the note that the President, while feeling that the position of the United States demanded emphatic representations that would leave no doubt of the resentment felt by the American Government and people over the sinking of the Lusitania, intended that his language should convey an appeal to the German Government's heart and conscience rather than a demand for a new deal based on material grounds.

In the belief that the German Government will construe the note in this spirit, officials of the Government hold to the hope that what the President desires to see accomplished in the way of abandonment of the German submarine warfare on merchant vessels will be accomplished by peaceable means.

His Lucky Thirteen.

The note was written originally by the President in shorthand. This is a familiar method of Mr. Wilson in making memoranda, and the fact that he utilized it in writing the momentous communication sent today to Berlin indicates that he had his thoughts well in mind and understood in advance perfectly what he intended to say. The shorthand characters of the President filled six pages of ordinary note paper. After he had set down the communication in this way the President transcribed it on his own typewriter. As far as known, no official or clerk of the White House had any part in the transcription of the document until after it had been presented to the members of the Cabinet. Not even Secretary Bryan saw it in advance of that time.

The note is dated today, May 13. It was suggested tonight that the President purposely held it over from yesterday before transmitting it to Germany. He has always regarded 13 as his lucky number.

Bernstorff Gets a Copy.

A copy of the note was delivered to Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, tonight by the State Department as a courtesy, and copies were similarly cabled to the American Ambassadors at London, Paris, and Petrograd for their own information.

Publication of the text was arranged for by Secretary Bryan, who announced that the document was to be released for use in editions of morning newspapers reaching the American public near earlier than 5 A. M. Friday. Special restrictions were imposed on foreign correspondents, who were not permitted to cable it until the same hour that it reached the people of the United States. The purpose of these arrangements, it was explained at the State Department, was to prevent diplomatic embarrassments, such as might arise if the text reached the British or French Governments through publication in foreign newspapers before it actually had reached the German Government.

PLEA FOR ZIONIST'S RELEASE

Appeal Made for Israel Cohen, Interned in a German Camp.

The Zionist Association and its affiliated organizations in America and in England are preparing an appeal to the State Department at Washington to obtain the release from the Detention Camp at Ruhleben, near Berlin, of Israel Cohen, Secretary of the International Zionist Organization.

Mr. Cohen, who is the author of "Jewish Life in Modern Times," was interned at the beginning of the war, being a British subject. The Jews of America hope to be able to have him paroled and allowed to come to America.

THE TREATY OF 1828 CITED BY PRESIDENT

Text of the Agreement Entered Into Between This Country and Prussia.

Treatment of Merchant Vessels During War as Decided at That Time.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The Treaty of 1828, between the United States and Prussia, referred to by President Wilson in his note to Germany, is as follows:

The United States of America and his Majesty the King of Prussia, equally animated with the desire of maintaining the relations of good understanding which have hitherto so happily subsisted between their respective States, of extending, also, and consolidatindg the commercial intercourse between them, and convinced that this object cannot better be accomplished than by adopting the system of an entire freedom of navigation, and a perfect reciprocity, based upon principles of equity equally beneficial to both countries and applicable in time of peace as well as in time of war, have, in consequence, agreed to enter into negotiations for the conclusion of a treaty of navigation and commerce; for which purpose the President of the United States has conferred full powers on Henry Clay, their Secretary of State; and his Majesty the King of Prussia has conferred like powers on the Sieur Ludwig Neiderstetter, chargé d'affaires of his said Majesty, near the United States; and the said plenipotentiaries having exchanged their said full powers, found in good and due form, have concluded and signed the following articles:

Article 1.

There shall be between the territories of the high contracting parties a reciprocate body of commerce and navigation. The inhabitants of their respective States shall mutually have liberty to enter the ports, places, and rivers of the territories of each party, wherever foreign commerce s permitted. They shall be at liberty to sojourn and reside in all parts whatsoever of said territories, in order to attend to their affairs, and they shall enjoy to that effect the same security and protection as natives of the country wherein they reside, on condition of their submitting to the laws and ordinances there prevailing.

Article 2.

Prussian vessels arriving either laden or in ballast, in the ports of the United States of America; and, reciprocally vessels of the United States arriving either laden or in ballast, in the ports of the Kingdom of Prussia, shall be treated, on their entrance, during their stay, and at their departure, upon the same footing as national vessels, coming from the same place, with respect to the duties of tonnage, lighthouses, pilotage, salvage, and port charges, as well as to the fees and perquisites of public officers, and all other duties and charges, of whatever kind or denomination, levied in the name, or to the profit, of the Government, the local authorities, or of any private establishment whatsoever.

Article III.

All kind of merchandise and articles of commerce, either the produce of the soil or the industry of the United States of America, or of any other country, which may be lawfully imported into the ports of the Kingdom of Prussia, in Prussian vessels, may, also, be so imported in vessels of the United States of America, without paying other or higher duties or charges, or whatever kind or denomination, levied in the name, or to the profit of the Government, the local authorities, or of any private establishments whosoever, than if the same merchandise or produce had been imported in Prussian vessels.

And, reciprocally, all kinds of merchandise and articles of commerce, either the produce of the soil or of the industry of the Kingdom of Prussia, or of any other country, which may be lawfully imported into the ports of the United States, in vessels of the said States, may also be so imported in Prussian vessels, without paying other or higher duties or charges, of whatever kind or denomination, levied in the name, or to the profit of the Government, the local authorities or of any private establishments whatsoever, than if the same merchandise or produce had been imported in vessels of the United States of America.

Article IV.

To prevent the possibility of any misunderstanding, it is hereby declared that the stipulations contained in the two proceeding articles are to their full extent, applicable to Prussian vessels and their cargoes arriving in the ports of the United States of America; and, reciprocally, to vessels of the said States and their cargoes, arriving in the ports of the Kingdom of Prussia, whether the said vessels clear directly from the ports of the country to which they respectively belong, or from the ports of any other foreign country.

Article V.

No higher or other duties shall be imposed on the importation into the United States, of any article, the produce or manufacture of Prussia; and no higher or other duties shall be imposed on the importation into the Kingdom of Prussia, of any article, the produce or manufacture of the United States, than are, or shall be payable on the like article, being the produce or manufacture of any other foreign country. Nor shall any prohibition be imposed on the importation or exportation of any article, the produce or manufacture of the United States, or of Prussia, to, or from, the ports of the United States, or to, or from, the ports of Prussia, which shall not equally extend to all other nations.

Article VI.

All kind of merchandise and articles of commerce, either the produce of the soil or of the industry of the United States of America, or of any other country, which may be lawfully exported from the ports of the said United States, in national vessels, may, also, be exported therefrom in Prussian vessel, without paying other or higher duties or charges, of whatever kind or denomination, levied in the name of, or to the profit of the Government, the local authorities, or of any private establishments whatsoever, than if the same merchandise or produce had been exported in vessels of the United States of America.

An exact reciprocity shall be observed in the ports of the Kingdom of Prussia, so that all kind of merchandise and articles of commerce, either the produce of the soil or the industry of the said kingdom, or of any other country, which my be lawfully exported from Prussian ports in national vessels, may also be exported therefrom in vessels of the United States of America, without paying other or higher duties or charges of whatever kind or denomination, levied in the name, or to the profit of the Government, the local authorities, or of any private establishments whatsoever, than if the same merchandise or produce had been exported in Prussian vessels.

Article VII.

The preceding articles are not applicable to the coasct wise navigation of the two countries, which is respectively reserved by each of the high contracting parties exclusively to itself.

Article VIII.

No priority or preference shall be given, directly or indirectly, by either of the contracting parties, nor by any company, corporation, or agent, acting on their behalf or under their authority, in the purchase of any article of commerce, lawfully imported, on account of or in reference to the character of the vessel, whether it beof the one party or of the other, in which such article was imported; it being the true intent and meaning of the contracting parties that no distinction or difference whatever shall be made in this respect.

Article IX.

If either party shall hereafter grant to any other nation any particular favor in navigation or commerce it shall immediately become common to the other party, freely, where it is freely granted t ocsuch other nation, or on yielding the same compensation when the grant is conditional.

Article X.

The two contracting parties have granted to each other the liberty of having, each in the ports of the other, Consuls, Vice Consuls, agents, and commisaries of their own appointment, who shall enjoy the same privileges and powers as those of the most favored nations. But if any such Consul shall exercise commerce, they shall be submitted to the same laws and usages to which the private individuals of their nation are submitted in the same place.

The Consuls, Vice Consuls, and commercial agents shall have the rights, as such, to sit as Judges and arbitrators in such differences as may arise between the Captains and crews of the vessels belonging to the nation whose interests are commitetd to their charge without the interference of the local authorities, unless the conduct of the crews or of the Captain should disturb the order or tranquility of the country, or the said Consuls, Vice Consuls, or commercial agents should require their assistance to cause their decisions to be carried into effect or suported. It is, however, understood, that this species of judgment or arbitration shall not deprive the contending parties of the right they have to resort, on their return, to the judicial authority of their country.

Article XI.

The said Consuls, Vice Consuls, and Commercial Agents are authorized to require the assitance of the local authorities for the search, arrest, and imprisonment of the deserters from the ships of war and merchant vessels of their country. For this purpose they shall apply to the competent tribunals, Judges, and officers, and shall, in writing, demand said deserters, proving by the exhibition of the registers of the vessels, the rolls of the crews, or by other official documents, that such individuals formed part of the crews; and, on this reclamation being thus substantiated, the surrender shall not be refused. Such deserters, when arrested, shall be placed at the disposal of the said Consuls, Vice Consuls, or Commercial Agents, and may be confined in the public prisons at the request and cost of those who shall claim them, in order to be sent to the vessels to which they belonged, or to others of the same country. But if not sent back within three months from the day of their arrest, they shall be set at liberty and shall not be again arrested for the same cuse. However, if the deserter should be found to have committed any crime or offense, his surrender may be delayed until the tribunal before which his case shall be depending shall have pronounced his sentence and such sentence shall have been carried into effect.

Article XII.

The twelfth article of the Treaty of Amity and Commerce, concluded between the parties in 1785 and the articles from the thirteenth to the twenty-fourth, inclusive, of that which was concluded at Berlin in 1799, with the exception of the last paragraph in the nineteenth article, relating to treaties with Great Britain, are hereby revived with the same force and virtue as if they made part of the contex of the present treaty, it being, however, understood, that the stipulations contained in the articles thus revived shall be always considered as in no manner affecting the treaties or conventions concluded by either party with other powers during the interval between the expiration of the said Treaty of 1799 and commencement of the operation of the present treaty.

The parties still desirous, in conformity with their intention declared in the twelfth article of the said Treaty of 1799, to establish between themselves, or in concert with other maritime powers, further provisions, to insure just protection and freedom to neutral navigation and commerce, and which may, at the same time, advance the cause of civilization and humanity, engage to treat on this subject at some future and convenient period.

Article XIII.

Considering the remoteness of the respective countries of the two high contracting parties, and the uncertainty resulting therefrom, with respect to the various events which may take place, it is agreed that a merchant vessel belonging to either of them, which may be bound to a port supposed at the time of its departure to be blockaded, shall not, however, be captured or condemned for having attempted a first time to enter said port, unless it can be proved that said vessel could and ought to have learnt, during its voyage, that the blockade of the place in question still continued. But all vessels which, after having been warned off once shall, during the same voyage, attempt a second time to enter the same blockaded port during the continuance of the said blockade, shall them subject themselves to bedetained and condemned.

Article XIV.

The citizens or subjects of each party shall have power to dispose of their pedsonal goods within the jurisdiction of the other, by testament, donation, or otherwise; and their representatives, being citizens or subjects of the other party, shall succeed to their said personal goods, whether by testament or ab interstato, and may take possession thereof, either by themselves or by others acting for them, and dispose of the same at their will, paying such dues only as the inhabitants of the country wherein the said goods are shall be subject to pay in like cases. And in case of the absonce of the representative, such care shall be taken of the said goods as would be taken of the goods of a native, in like case, until the lawful owner may take measures for receiving them. And if question should arise among several clsimants to which of them said goods belong the same shall be decided finally by the laws and Judges of the land wherein the said goods are. And where, on the death of any person holding squal estate within the territories of the one party, such real estate would, by the laws of the land, descend on a citizen or subject of the other, were he not disqualified by alienage, such citizen or subject shall be allowed a reasonable time to sell the same, an dto withdraw the proceeds without molestation and exempt from all duties of detraction on the part of the Government of the respective States. But this article shall not derogate in any manner from the force of the laws already published, or hereafter to be published by his Majesty the King of Prussia, to prevent the emigration of his subjects.

Article XV.

The present treaty shall continue in force for twelve years, counting from the day of the exchange of the ratifications; and if twelve months before the expiration of that period, neither of the high contracting parties shall have announced, by an official notification to the other its intention to arrest the operation of said treaty, it shall remain binding for one year beyond that time, and so on, until the expiration of the twelve months which will follow a similar notification whatever the time at which ti may take place.

Article XVI.

This treaty shall be approved and ratified by the President of the United States of America, by, and ith the advice and consent of the Senate thereof and by his Majesty the King of Prussia, and the ratifications shall be exchanged in the City of Washington, within nine months from the date of the signature hereof, or sooner, if possible.

In faith whereof the respective plenipotentiaries have signed the above articles, both in the French and English languages; and they have thereto affixed their seals: Declaring, nevertheless, that the signature in both languages shall not be brought into precedent, nor in any way operate to the prejudice of either party.

Done in triplicate at the City of Washington, on the first day of May, in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-eight; and the fifty-second of the Independence of the United States of America.

WILSON TO SAIL EARLY FOR NEW YORK TO REST

After Hard Work on German Note President Seeks Recuperation at Sea.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—President Wilson decided today to leave tomorrow instead of on Saturday for New York, where he is due on Monday to review the Atlantic fleet. He will make the trip on board the yacht Mayflower, and will be away until next Wednesday night or Thursday morning unless present plans are changed.

Secretary Tumulty, Dr. Cary T. Grayson, naval aid, and several members of the President's family will accompany him.

The President has been tired out by his constant application for the last few days to the work of preparing America's note to Germany. His advisers think he needs a rest, and, while the Mayflower will be in constant touch with shore, no stenographer will be taken and only necessary work will be done.

During his visit to New York the President will review a land parade, speak briefly at a luncheon given by the Mayor's Committee, attend a dinner on the battleship Wyoming and review the fleet. He will leave for Washington late Tuesday.

In order that nothing may interfere with plans for the review the President has directed that power over traffic in New York Harbor, ordinarily vested in the Secretary of Commerce, be transferred to the Secretary of the Navy during the review period.

SENATORS SUPPORT WILSON.

Those Now in Hawaii Declare for a Firm Stand.

HONOLULU, May 13.—General expression of support of President Wilson and declarations that emphatic firmness is necessary were made today by members of the party of United States Senators and Congressmen now touring Hawaii.

Senators Cummins of Iowa, Saulsbury of Delaware, and Overman of North Carolina, expressed hope that American lives would be safeguarded and that a guarantee of their safety would be peaceably accomplished.

Senator Hardwick of Georgia, in an address at Hilo, declared "We should be ready to fight if necessary."

WOULDN'T FIGHT FOR HONOR.

Prof. Kirchwey Would Call World Council to Draft New War Rules.

Columbia's pacifists heard Professor George W. Kirchwey and Professor John W. Erskine plead against a rush to arms yesterday in Havemeyer Hall. The theme was the sinking of the Lusitania.

Professor Kirchwey was applauded when he declared he would never go to war for national honor. He said the questions arising out of the Lusitania were purely legal and he would have the President call a conference of all nations, whether neutral or at war, to draft a new code of war rules.

"I am frank to say, and you may call me any kind of pacifist you wish," said Professor Kirchwey, "that I would never go to war because the honor of the country was affronted any more than I would shoot a man who insulted me in the street. It might be that I might not kill him because I was restrained and forced to count one hundred. America even if her honor has been affronted has had time to count and has no reason for going to war now.

"My advice to the President would be: Don't be too fond or too stiff about the rights of neutrals. Don't take an attitude from which you can't withdraw without war. I would make the American people count until they get over this bellicose feeling.

"There is no doubt that there is no right to sink living persons on ships, but I think there is need of a new law forbidding neutrals from sailing on enemy ships carrying contraband. The need of this is caused by the new emergencies and new conditions found in present maritime warfare and the recklessness of all the nations at war."

Prof. Erskine said that this was undoubtedly a very good chance to enter the war, but he believed that there were better means of settling the difficulties than force.

"There are two arguments running through the present discussion in the newspapers," said Dr. Erskine. "The one is the appeal to honor and the other the necessity of war. Revenge is always the motive for war and honor is the simple disguise for this revenge.

"I wish we could apply Socrates's philosophy when he was kicked by an ass and ask, 'Why, when I am kicked by an ass do I need to kick back?'"

"COLD-BLOODED MURDER."

Churchman, Despite Horror Over Lusitania, Urges Faith in President.

The Churchman in this week's issue, speaking of the sinking of the Lusitania, says:

"At this moment we are not disposed to weigh the fact that warning of possible disaster was given before the ship sailed, nor are we concerned with the rules of naval blockade, the necessities of war, or any other consideration that may be advanced in defense of the act. Nor is the particular nationality of the victims of special moment. Our horror and condemnation would be no less had the Lusitania been a German boat, sailing under the German flag. We can see but the deliberate and wanton destruction of defenseless humanity—premeditated and cold-blooded murder of the most staggering sort. For it there can be no conceivable justification.

"However great the provocation, we, as a nation, are fortunate in being able to rely upon the righteous wisdom and cool judgment of the man whom the providence of God has set over the affairs of our country at this very critical time."

FORECAST OF OUR NOTE IMPRESSES ENGLAND

London Gets Summary and Regards It as Firm, Dignified, and Statesmanlike.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 13.—President Wilson's note to Germany, as summarized in a Reuter dispatch, created a profound impression here. In responsible quarters it was described as firm, dignified, and statesmanlike.

There is, of course, a comprehensible reluctance on the part of Englishmen of position to make any comment for publication in America, as it is fully recognized that foreigners have no title to a voice in the American chapter. It is, however, permissible to say that the attitude taken by the American Government satisfies all legitimate expectations of the most representative Englishmen.

What Germany's response to the American note will be is a matter of keen discussion. One suggestion made by a member of an imperial committee with personal experience of Germany and insight into German psychology predicted that the Kaiser's Government, while begging the whole question of legitimacy of such acts as the sinking of the Lusitania, would offer apology and reparation for the loss of American lives and would proffer for future guarantee that no attack would be made upon American ships flying the American flag. Whether such an answer would be considered satisfactory by the American Government was another matter.

In some other quarters, which are too important to be disregarded, the idea still persists that despite the recent German note to neutral nations, the Hohenzollern Government is desirous of forcing America into the war, and that the answer to President Wilson, while including the apology and an offer of reparation for the loss of American lives, will be more or less of an open rebuttal of President Wilson's arguments in relation to international law and a defense of German action on the ground that it was the outcome of the British food blockade, and similar pleas of military necessity.

AMERICANS IN INDIA SPEAK.

Residents in Calcutta Express Horror for Loss of Lusitania.

CALCUTTA, May 13. (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—The following resolution on the sinking of the Lusitania has been passed by American residents here:

"American residents in Calcutta, having met in public assembly, wish to place on record their opinion that the destruction of the Lusitania, without regard for the consequent loss of innocent lives, is an act to be considered with horror and indignation by every honorable person. They express the firm conviction and belief that the American Government will take prompt action for securing the safety of the lives of Americans and other neutrals on the high seas."

HATE US FOR OUR SHELLS.

Germans Admit Superiority of Ammunition They Cannot Import.

The changed attitude of the Germans toward the United States is referred to at length in a statement issued by the German Information Service yesterday. The statement is based on a letter written from Munich by Leslie D. Bissell, who is described as "an American resident of Munich."

"Since the United States has become the great arsenal for the Allies and is furnishing Russia, France, and England with immense quantities of cannon, powder, shrapnel, and all kinds of war supplies," Mr. Bissell writes, "the attitude of Germany toward the United States has changed.

"The German and European press has made many scornful remarks about the American conception of neutrality. The legal right of individuals to sell arms is admitted, but the great extent of the business makes it a national question, and as such it has become an expression of unfriendliness to Germany.

"In military circles all admit that the American powder is much more powerful and that the American shrapnel mangles in a terrible manner.

"Our country boasts of its altruism and of its high idealism. The friends of peace hope that America can be the intermediary in bringing the war to an end. But when America makes such a proposal to Germany it may be met with the taunt that America has been foremost in supplying her enemies with the means of continuing the war. We call this by the pleasant name 'neutrality.' Are we deceiving ourselves?"

SOUTHWEST AFRICA LOST TO GERMANY

General Botha Captures Windhoek, the Capital—No Resistance Offered.

MARTIAL LAW PROCLAIMED

Victorious Commander Recommends German Women and Children to the Care of His Army.

LONDON, May 13.—An official statement made public at Cape Town and received by the Reuter Telegram Company, says that Windhoek, capital of German Southwest Africa, was captured yesterday without resistance by Union of South Africa forces under General Botha. The population of the town consists of 3,000 Europeans and 12,000 natives.

General Botha's troops took a considerable quantity of railway rolling stock. Martial law has been proclaimed throughout the conquered territory.

General Botha, addressing his victorious troops, declared that the capture of the capital of German Southwest Africa was of the "utmost importance to the Empire and the Union of South Africa, as it means practically complete possession of German Southwest Africa."

Continuing, the General dwelt upon the responsibility of the army of occupation to care for German women and children in Windhoek, saying in this connection

"I rely on your honor to perform this responsible work well and faithfully."

Announcement was made on April 20 that the forces of the Union of South Africa had occupied Keetmanshoop, and three sons fighting at the front. The mob cheered him and departed without damaging his shop. The rioters, leaving a trail of fire behind them, now made for the docks to wreak vengeance on Spillman's dock warehouse. The police, however, managed to turn them back.

The Government has issued an official statement dealing with the anti-German movement in Johannesburg, Pretoria, and Cape Town. The statement intimates that a new situation has been created, necessitating new measures, concerning which the Government is now consulting the imperial authorities.

German Southwest Africa has an area of 322,450 square miles, and had a population of about 200,000 in 1901, of whom 3,639 are whites.

CAPE TOWN, (via London.) May 13.—General Botha has issued a proclamation which says that, as the commander of the German forces violated The Hague convention by poisoning wells, General Botha has reserved the right to exact such reprisals as he may deem fitting.

$1,000,000 FIRE LOSS IN JOHANNESBURG RIOTS

JOHANNESBURG, S. A., May 13.—There have been violent anti-German demonstrations in Johannesburg, which culminated yesterday in the wrecking of German and Austrian establishments. The police tried to quell the disturbance, but were powerless.

The rioting was resumed this morning, the crowd consigning to the flames the contents of the shops attacked, but looting was forcibly repressed. Many German jewelry shops were raided and their stocks were thrown upon the bonfires. From German dry goods warehouses thousands of rolls of cotton and woolen cloth also were taken and burned.

More than fifty buildings have been wrecked and their contents either burned or broken up. The establishments include ten warehouses, ten saloons, three hotels, and more than twenty shops.

The mob destroyed the Liederkranz Club and pillaged the offices of the General Mining Corporation, which has an international Board of Directors, including some Germans. The mob burned all the books, records, and accessible papers of the company.

The offices of Sir George Albus, near the Stock Exchange, were raided and a bonfire was made of the furniture. The crowd also fired the premises of Gundelfinger & Co., general merchants, doing damage of $250,000. The total losses from the rioting are placed at more than $1,000,000.

The wreckers worked methodically to the sound of whistles, and in accordance with a list prepared in advance. There was no looting, the crowds simply carrying out a policy of retaliation.

Amid cries of "The murders of Lusitania babies are avenged!" and "The murders of our prisoners of war are avenged!" the German Club in Johannesburg was set on fire. Portraits of Emperor William, Bismarck, and the Emperor of Austria were torn from the walls and thrown into the flames.

Breaking up into smaller bands, the wreckers set fire to German property in all directions. Johannesburg soon was brilliant with the fires, and in the suburbs blazing beacons could be seen in all directions.

SOLDIERS OUT AT CAPETOWN.

Anti German Rioters Do Much Damage and Overcome Police.

CAPE TOWN, via London, May 13.—Anti-German dioting began here tonight, and several prominent German business houses were wrecked, looted, or set on fire.

For a time the police were able to control the mobs, but they increased so rapidly that the military were called to patrol the streets.

The marauders were mainly negroes. They first attacked the German Club, which was strongly guarded by police and troops. On being informed that the building no longer was German property, but was occupied by the military authorities, the rioters turned their attention to the store of the German firm of Spilhaus. The mob first sang the British anthem and the police saluted and the people bared their heads. Then the rioters entered the building and partially burned it. Next Muller's large music warehouse was fired. Then came a raid on the harware store of Koch & Dixie, which also was fired.

John Muller, an optician, who is German born but a naturalized British subject, faced the mob, and said he had three sons fighting at the front. The mob cheered him and departed without damaging his shop. The rioters, leaving a trail of fire behind them, now made for the docks to wreak vengeance on Spillman's dock warehouse. The police, however, managed to turn them back.

The Government has issued an official statement dealing with the anti-German movement in Johannesburg, Pretoria, and Cape Town. The statement intimates that a new situation has been created, necessitating new measures, concerning which the Government is now consulting the imperial authorities.

HEEDED ELDER STATESMEN.

How Japan Averted War with China in Recent Crisis.

SHANGHAI, May 13.—News has reached here from Tokio that the peaceful adjustment of the diferences between Japan and China was reached through the efforts of the Elder Statesmen. They advocated strongly a policy of moderation, and their views prevailed. The demands of Japan were modified and China's acceptance followed.

The Elder Statesmen urged, instead of the presentation of an ultimatum to China, the sending of a special mission to President Yuan Shih-kai in an effort to persuade him to accede to Japan's wishes. This plan was abandoned, however, in view of the aroused state of public feeling.

The Cabinet held the view that public opinion demanded drastic action. The Elder Statesmen, however, felt that to send an ultimatum demanding acceptance of Japan's demands in full would involve a greater hazard than the Government was justified in assuming. Marquis Matsukata, ex-Premier, and Field Marshal Prince Yamagata, of the Military Council of the Empire, questioned the advisability of risking a war with China at a time when most of the world was in arms and Japan's finances were not in a condition to warrant a military adventure whose limits and outcome could not be foretold. The Elder Statesmen pointed out that Japan had reached a critical point in her development as a world power, and should consider the necessity of conservatism.

HALDANE HINTS AT DRAFT FOR TROOPS

"FIGHTING FOR OUR LIVES"

Not Facing Conscription Problem Yet —Lansdowne Voices Satisfaction Over 'Momentous Announcement.'

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 13.—Viscount Haldane, Lord High Chancellor, in the House of Lords today sounded a note of warning to the nation on the possibility of conscription. He said:

"We are fighting for our lives in perhaps the most tremendous war in history and, even though we may think that under ordinary conditions and in time of peace, the system of voluntary enlistment is one from which it would be most difficult to depart, yet we may find we shall have to reconsider that situation in the light of the tremendous necessities of the nation. We are fighting for a cause which becomes more and more a cause for which we ought to be prepared to lay down everything we possess in the world. I think conscription may come, but it is well to remember that our voluntary system has given us an army which for quality compares with anything that can be put in the field. One hesitates before one considers in a practical way whether it has failed on the question of quality.

"Lord Haldane's intimation created a sensation in political circles. Only a few weeks ago the Chancellor of the Exchequer, on behalf of the Prime Minister, stated in emphatic terms that there was nothing in the situation to lead the Government to contemplate compulsory service.

LONDON, May 13.—Viscount Haldane after announcing in the House of Lords today that the Government might yet deem it advisable to resort to some method of raising troops other than the enrollment of volunteers, added: "We are not face to face with that problem yet. At present the hands of the War Office are full with the men they possess.

Lord Lansdowne said the House heard with great satisfaction "the momentous announcement" that the Government was prepared to reconsider the whole situation in regard to recruiting, "in view of the tremendous necessities which confront us." Many members of the House had thought for a long time, he continued, that an announcement of the kind should be made, and they hoped it might be taken as an indication that this very grave problem was engaging the attention of the Government.

Lord Haldane's announcement appears to confirm the idea prevalent here that, while recruiting has been satisfactory, the very heavy fighting which has been taking place in Flanders, where the Germans have for almost a week been attacking with the greatest violence the British line, shows that many more men will eb required if victory is to be attained.

TAKES GARTER ORDER FROM ENEMY RULERS

LONDON, May 13.—"The King, as sovereign of the Order of the Garter," says an official announcement issued this evening, "has given directions that the following names forthwith be struck off the roll of the Knights of the order:

"The Emperor of Austria, the German Emperor, the King of Württemberg, the Grand Duke of Hesse, Prince Henry of Prussia, the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, and the Duke of Cumberland."

The Order of the Garter was instituted by King Edward III. about August, 1348. Since 1831 it has consisted of the British sovereign and twenty-five Knight companions who were lineal descendants of King George I. and of sovereigns and extra Knights who have been admitted by special statutes.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Friday, May 14.—The Daily Chronicle commends the King's order removing the names of the Kaiser and seven other enemy knights from the rolls of the Order of the Garter, saying:

"Across the bodies of all those women and children deliberately murdered by the Kaiser's order there can be no handshaking between the British and German Courts, and the King has shown his usual perception of national sentiment by giving formal and public expression to it."

HERRICK'S PLEA FOR FRANCE

Urges Americans to Support Our Ambulance Work There.

COLORADO SPRINGS, May 13.—Urging that America "maintain to the end of the war the world-wide reputation we have gained for generosity and efficiency," Myron T. Herrick, former Ambassador to France, in an address before the Winter Night Club here tonight, appealed to the nation to continue to support the relief work in Europe.

"The American Ambulance in France was created in the first days of the war," Mr. Herrick said. "Two large hospitals were added, one at Neuilly, a suburb of Paris, and another at Jouy, about thirty-five miles northwest of Paris. These accommodate about 750 patients and have treated 15,000 wounded. There are also eighty-six finely equipped motor ambulances with American drivers in the field.

"This organization belongs to America, and I direct your attention to the fact that subscriptions for this work are now slowing down. It is in funds for the next few months, but more money will soon be necessary."

CLAIMS FOR SEIZED CARGOES.

British Bulletin on Shipments Held Aboard German Vessels.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The State Department has received from the British Government an announcement of its attitude toward American cargoes on captured German ships now detained in British ports. It urges American shippers of these goods to put in their claims at once, supported by proof, in order to obtain reimbursement. The text of the announcement follows:

"Shippers of freight in German or Austro-Hungarian vessels which cleared from the United States before the war, and were captured or detained in British ports, are informed that, in case they have paid freight, in order to secure the release of their goods, they should at once make claim for its reimbursement. Claims of this character should be supported by proof of the payments in question and may be transmitted to the American Consul General at London who will submit them to the proper officer of the prize court, or they may be submitted through the solicitors originally employed to bring about the release."

GERMAN EDITORS HERE OPPOSE WILSON STAND

By Telegraph to the Editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CINCINNATI, May 13.—During our civil war the Government passed a law, and enforced it, that all persons, no matter if citizens or not, who sojourned during the war in parts of the country in possession of enemies were in danger of being treated as enemies. The Lusitania was considered an enemy by German submarines exactly in the sense of the law passed during our war by our Congress. All persons being on board the Lusitania, including American citizens, ought to have known they were in danger of being treated as enemies by the German submarines. A warning to this effect had been published.

As much as the terrible loss of life is to be regretted, the fact remains that if the passengers had heeded the warning they would in all likelihood be among the living today.

The German Government agreed to stop the submarine war if England would let foodstuffs for the civilian population in Germany pass through unmolested and not further try to starve them to death. England refused this humane arrangement. Our Government was aware of the proposition.

Washington should immediately stop the shipment of arms and ammunition on passenger ships during the war and refuse clearance paper to those acting contrary. Transporting war materials clearly endangers people on board. Everybody ought to know this without special warning.

The text of President Wilson's note to Germany regarding the Lusitania incident must be awaited before one can fairly judge what should be the attitude of the United States.

MAX BURGHEIM.
Editor Cincinnati Freie Presse.

By Telegraph to the Editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PHILADELPHIA, May 13.—The United States should do nothing regarding the Lusitania incident. It is a purely British affair and, as Secretary Bryan said, "the relations of two Governments with one another should never be made the subject of discussion with a third Government."

The fact that American citizens chose a belligerent and contraband-laden ship for their voyage gives the United States no legal right to interfere. This contention should eventually be submitted to an international court of arbitration.

Editor Philadelphia Tageblatt.

By Telegraph to the Editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CLEVELAND, May 13.—In our opinion the United States should take the same stand in regard to the Lusitania incident as they took when they accepted England's very polite but negative answer to the American protest note.

NEW STRAIT BOMBARDMENT.

Allied Squadron Shelled the Narrows Forts Wednesday Night.

PARIS, May 13.—A Havas dispatch from Athens says:

"An allied squadron re-entered the Dardanelles last night and bombarded the forts at Kilid Bahr, Chanak Kalessi and Nagara. The bombardment was interrupted at 8 o'clock, but was resumed three hours later and is being continued.

"Although the Turks have been strongly reinforced, the bombardment from the allied warships is causing them heavy losses, and they are steadily losing ground. Turkish trenches are filled with bodies."

LONDON, May 13.—Assertions that the towns of Chanak Kalessi, Maidos and Kilid Bahr now are nothing but smoking ruins are contained in a series of belated dispatches dated May 5, 8 and 9, received by The Times from Moudros, on the island of Lemnos. Their destruction is said to have been unavoidable, since they lay in the direct line of the fleet's fire.

The dispatches say that the forts on the strait are gradually being overcome, and it is believed that a general assault is in progress against the heights of Achi Baba, the capture of which is a necessary preliminary to a complete clearance of the strait. There are persistent reports at Moudros that these heights have been taken, and that the entire stretch of peninsula from Cape Helles to Kilid Bahr now is in the Allies' hands.

According to advices reaching here from Constantinople, the Turkish authorities are threatening to send into the war zone on the Gallipoli Peninsula all the British and French subjects in Turkey.

AUTO RUNS DRIVERLESS.

Follows Street Car After Men Who Stole It Jump Out.

Dr. William H. Stewart of 229 West Seventy-ninth Street left his five-passenger automobile in front of his house at 10:20 o'clock last night and then minutes later returned to find it missing. He telephoned to his garage and a little later received word that the machine had been found and was in front of the West Sixty-eighth Street Police Station.

The auto, according to witnesses found by Policeman Nazziatto, had been stolen by two men, evidently poor drivers or intoxicated, who ran the car into a lamppost at Seventy-ninth Street and Amsterdam Avenue and then jumped out. The motor, with no one at the wheel, recoiled from the lamppost and started to make a wide circle, when it plunged into the side of a south-bound Amsterdam Avenue surface car, breaking the glass of the side door.

The car kept on going and the automobile, righting itself after the shock, kept on in a straight line in the tracks behind the street car. Between Seventy-seventh and Seventy-eighth Streets, a chauffeur, seeing the riderless car, jumped on the running board, climbed over into the seat and stopped it. He turned it over to the policeman who took it back to the station.

FIGHTS POLICEMAN ON ROOF

Bluecoat Nearly Thrown Off Before Fugitive Was Subdued.

Policeman William McDonald, running up in answer to a woman's calls for help, saw a youth running away from Mrs. Ina Wantraner, of 67 East 127th Street, who stood in 121st Street between First and Second Avenues last night, shouting that the fugitive had snatched her handbag. McDonald chased him, and the fellow ran into a tenement near Third Avenue.

On the roof the policeman found him hiding behind a chimney. According to McDonald, the fellow sprang on him and tried to throw the policeman from the roof until a nightstick subdued him. At the East 126th Street Station the youth said he was William King, of 226 East 118th Street. He was locked up on Mrs. Wantraner's charge of robbery.

Unitarians Arrange Paterson Meeting.

Special to The New York Times.

HACKENSACK, N. J., May 13.—The Rev. Arthur G. Singsen of the Unitarian Church here, who has been preaching a series of sermons combating some of the most important and forceful arguments of the Rev. Billy Sunday, says the mass meeting of Unitarians in Paterson tomorrow night is not to be considered a counter-attractive to the Tabernacle meeting. The Rev. Mr. Singsen is to be one of the five speakers at the Unitarian meeting, and among other things he said today: "We have absolutely no desire to attack Mr. Sunday, and probably his name will not be mentioned. We want Paterson people to really know what Unitarians stand for, what Unitarians believe about Jesus Christ, what Unitarians believe about heaven and hell, and what we believe about Salvation." The other speakers will be Edgar Swan Wiers of Montclair, Aaron R. Shelander of Passaic, Walter R. Hunt of Orange, and Frank C. Doan of Summit.

ITALY'S CABINET OUT ON THE WAR ISSUE

It is asserted that the Cabinet is preparing a "Green Book" to be distributed in Parliament when that body resumes its sessions May 20, showing the policy followed by the Government in the late international events.

AUSTRIA READY ON BORDER.

Practical State of Siege Already in Territory Adjoining Italy.

UDINE, Italy, May 12, (via Paris, May 13.)—Every preparation has been made for the proclamation of a state of siege in all the Austrian territory which borders on Italy. The Government already is in the hands of the police and military.

Italians whose homes are in Austria already have fled for safety across the frontier in great numbers. It is estimated that 40,000 have left Trieste alone, while the total will aggregate 120,000. Large contingents of Austrian troops are constantly arriving at Trieste and points in Gorz and Gradisca. It is asserted in military circles here that Austria has been quietly gathering this new army for possible operations against Italy.

At some points on the frontier Austrian and Italian troops are in such close contact that they can see each other. The Austrians have occupied strongly fortified intrenchments. The bridge leading to Pontebba, just across the Italian frontier, has been mined, as have the bridges across the Isonzo River. Trains and automobiles which cross these bridges are compelled to travel at a snail's pace. Many German officers are with the Austrian troops camped near Gorz and Trieste.

GERMANS DISDAIN ITALY.

Say She Deserves Punishment, and Will Get It Anyhow, Without Mercy

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, May 13. (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—The latest impression brought by a responsible Dutch business man from Germany indicates that a new and if possible stronger wave of absolute confidence in Germany's final and complete victory is passing through Germany. German officials point with pride to the entire nation working harmoniously to keep the war machine running smoothly and also to forces amounting to 12,000,000.

The view is expressed there that it matters little whether Italy joins the entente powers or not. It is asserted that if she declares war Germans will be in Italy in a very few days. Orders have been sent out to every newspaper office in Germany to refrain from all hostile criticisms of Italy's whatever nation she hates. The opinion is held in Germany that Italy has already deserved punishment from Germany and that within a few years this will be administered without mercy.

AUSTRIA'S FINAL OFFER.

What She Was Willing to Cede and What Italy Demanded.

According to dispatches received in this city yesterday, the following is the last offer made by Austria to Italy. It arrived from Vienna at 12 o'clock noon, May 13, and was at once conveyed by Prince von Buelow, the German Ambassador, to the Italian Foreign Secretary, Baron Sonnino, who presented it to the Council of Ministers. Baron Sonnino is reported to have declared that not only were the concessions insufficient, but that they arrived too late—"Le offerte Austriache siano non solo insufficienti ma arrivate troppo tardi."

The note of the Austrian proposals was signed by Prince von Buelow and the Austrian Ambassador, Macchio, and read, after a brief introduction:

4. Italy will leave to Austria or to Serbia all the territory which extends from the River Narenta to the Albanian port of Durazzo, including the naval base of Cattaro. Serbia and Montenegro should concern themselves with a division of the zone between Ducigno and Antivari, the latter being already in the possession of Montenegro.

5. Italy is to remain in possession of the Bay of Vallona and the adjacent territory (in Albania) which she now occupies.

6. Italy will grant Austria special privileges in certain Adriatic ports and would, interest herself in having Serbia cede Croatia a certain part of the territory (in Dalmatia) whether Croatia remains a part of Austria or becomes an autonomous State.

The dispatches which conveyed the foregoing information added that Italy had been in accord with the Entente Powers since April 14, when Italy recognized Serbia's right to a strip of the Dalmatian coast, being an extension of Herzegovinia to the Adriatic north of Montenegro, but that Russia had since stipulated that Croatia, with the exception of the Fiume littoral, should be joined to the rest of Dalmatia, forming an autonomous State under Russo-Serbian protection, while Albania should continue to enjoy autonomy under the protection of Italy.

ROMANS CHEER D'ANNUNZIO.

Ovation to the Poet by Great Crowds That Clamor for War.

ROME, May 13.—Great crowds greeted Gabriele d'Annunzio, the poet, whose advocacy of war has won him popularity, when he arrived in Rome today. It was his first visit to this city since he left Italy several years ago on his self-imposed exile. The people welcomed him with cheers, crying: "Hurrah for war! Hurrah for Sanadra! Down with Austria!"

The crush around the railway station became so great that many windows were smashed. D'Annunzio was accompanied to his hotel by cheering crowds.

Popular demonstrations in favor of war continue with increasing frequency in all parts of the country, rendering it difficult for the authorities to protect the German and Austrian Embassies and Consulates.

STOPS ARMS FOR ALLIES.

Italy Said to Have Confiscated Consignments Intended for France.

Under the caption "Italy Confiscates Arms Intended for the Allies," the German Information Service issued last night the following statement:

"Italy has taken a decided stand in the matter of refusing to supply the armies of the British Allies with arms and ammunition, which the United States has so far refused to do because, it is alleged, it would be unneutral, according to the Munchener Neuste Nachrichten, which publishes the following report from the Milan Sera:

"'An investigation into the question of manufacture of parts of shells for foreign artillery in Italy has been instituted against numerous mechanical wrokshops in Milan, Brescia, Bergamo, Bologna, Turin, Ancona, Mantua, and in other cities. Turin repeatedly appeared as consignee, and the manufacturing firms consequently thought that they were supplying their own country.

"'As a matter of fact, they were supplying fuses for the 75-millimeter shrapnels of the French artillery. The finished parts were sent partly to Samperdana and partly to a ship's Captain in Trani, in Apulia.

"'The authorities have confiscated a great number of consignments.'"

Italy, since her own active preparations for war began, has not only prohibited exports of arms and ammunitions to any country, but of foodstuffs as well.

BARRED FROM ITALIAN SHIPS.

No Women or Children of Germanic Allies to be Taken from America.

Announcement was made yesterday by Hartfield, Solari & Co., agents of the Italian lines, at 1 State Street, that instructions had been received by them from Italy to refuse passage to women and children of German, Austrian, or Turkish birth.

After the outbreak of the war the Italian lines refused to carry males of German or Austrian nationality on their steamships, as they were liable to seizure at Gibraltar. The new order includes naturalized Americans who were formerly subjects of Germany, Austria, or Turkey.

Italy to Forgive Deserters.

Complete amnesty will be granted by the Italian Government to those of its subjects guilty of desertion or of nonfulfillment of their military service, provided they present themselves to the army authorities in Italy within one month, if living in Europe, or three months if living elsewhere, according to an announcement by Consul General G. Fara-Forni, published in the New York Italian newspapers yesterday.

MODEL CONSTRUCTION CAMP

U. S. Reclamation Service Sets Example in Sanitation.

The construction camp of the United States Reclamation Service at Elephant Butte, New Mexico, where the Government is building an irrigation plant, is an example of what may be done in the way of providing a model sanitary camp. The camp has 3,060 inhabitants, 1,200 of whom are employes of the Reclamation Service, and there are many families with children. Most of the laborers are single men, and live in cottages or barracks. These are screened, lighted with electricity, sewered, and provided with water. Septic tanks are provided for the disposal of sewage, both in the official and the other divisions of the town, which are separate.

A regular system of garbage and waste disposal is provided, wastes being burned and edible garbage being hauled from the city and fed to hogs, which are kept a long distance away. Flies in both the upper and lower towns are at a minimum, and fly traps are provided for those which do not appear. The commissary, where well-kept foods at reasonable prices are to be had, is under Government control. All markets are screened, and ice and cold storage are provided. Shower baths and lavatories are provided in men's quarters, and private cottages have modern conveniences.

There is a well equipped hospital containing two private rooms and wards to accommodate twelve beds, or more in an emergency. The personnel includes a physician, a nurse, an orderly, and a housekeeper. A consulting surgeon is available. Reports to the engineering department on the medical service, the sanitation of the camp, and the statistics of illness, absence from work, &c., are made each ten days, every month, and at the end of the year by the head of the sanitary division.

The business of the physician of the camp has become not so much to treat the sick as to create and maintain conditions which will prevent illness. Physical examination of applicants for work is carried out, vaccination for smallpox and typhoid are required, and it is said that typhoid vaccination has not caused any employe the loss of time from work. Amusements are systematically provided, and liquor is to the greatest extent kept out of the camp, so that it has not proved to be a nuisance.

The Journal of the American Medical Association concludes that the price of good sanitation in such a place is an eternal fight, but that anything tending to create a better moral and sanitary environment increases the efficiency and output of the employe.

ALLIES ORDER ARMS TO COST $203,000,000

Contracts for Rifles, Shrapnel, and Explosive Shells Split Up Among American Firms.

Senator Nathaniel Curry, President of the Canadian Car and Foundry Company, made public yesterday some details concerning the distribution by his firm of sub-contracts entailed in the manufacture of a large order for shells. The order amounted to $88,000,000, according to statements that have not been denied, and was placed by the Russian Government.

"There are about fifty companies in the United States," said Senator Curry, "and about ten companies in Canada engaged in the manufacture of different parts of shrapnel and explosive shells. These orders have been split up among companies in the Eastern and Middle Western States and throughout Eastern Canada."

This brief summary was not all that Mr. Curry intended at first to give out, it was learned. A full list of the concerns, with their allotments, was prepared, but some of the manufacturers objected to publicity, and at their request the announcement was changed.

Wall Street heard more particulars also of the contract taken by the American Locomotive Company a few weeks ago for shrapnel. The order, it was said, called for 5,000,000 shells at a cost of $18 each, making the total $65,000,000. Of this half is to be turned out by the locomotive plants, and the rest by the New York Air Brake and the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company. The Westinghouse Company is understood to have exercised its option to purchase the Stevens Arms and Tool Company and the Stevens-Duryea Automobile Company. In these plants 1,000,000 rifles will be turned out, with the possibility that a second contract for a like amount may be placed soon. The total value of these orders is put at some $55,000,000.

The purchase of these plants leaves the Westinghouse Company, with its established properties, free to continue the manufacture of electricial equipment. The Stevens working organization, which is skilled in the making of arms, will handle the rifle output.

GERMANS TAKE 143,000 RUSSIANS

Also Have Captured 60 Cannon and 255 Machine Guns, Berlin Announces.

ARMY NEARING PRZEMYSL

Czar's Forces North of the Vistula Retreat as Southern Pursuit Progresses.

CONTINUE DRIVE IN EAST

Austrians Driven Back in Disorder with Heavy Loss in Prisoners, Guns, and Ammunition.

LONDON, Friday, May 14.—While Berlin reports that the great rush of the Austro-German armies from Cracow, which has carried them almost to the gates of Przemysl, continues unchecked and that the Russian defense north of the Vistula is breaking under pressure of General von Mackensen's advance in the south, Petrograd reports that the intensity of the fighting on this front has decreased during the last two days.

In extreme Eastern Galicia, where the Russians have countered with a drive in great force against the Austro-Germans operating in that region, Petrograd reports that the Czar's forces are sweeping on and driving their foes headlong before them. The Russian General Staff also reports continued success in the Baltic provinces.

BERLIN, (via London,) May 13.—The German War Office announced today that in the recent fighting in Galicia and Russian Poland 143,500 Russians had been captured. It also stated that 69 cannon and 255 machine guns had been taken from the Russians, and that the victorious Austrian and German forces, continuing their advance eastward in Galicia, were approaching the fortress of Przemysl.

The statement follows:

The army under General von Mackensen in the course of its pursuit of the Russians reached yesterday the neighborhood of Subiecko, on the lower Wisloka, and Kolbuezowa, northeast of Debica. Under the pressure of this advance the Russians also retreated from their positions north of the Vistula. In this section the troops under General von Woyrech, closely following the enemy, penetrated as far as the region northwest of Kielce.

Storm Carpathian Hills.

In the Carpathians Austro-Hungarian and German troops under General von Linsingen conquered the hills east of the upper Stryi and took 3,650 men prisoners, as well as capturing six machine guns.

At the present moment, while the armies under General von Mackensen are approaching the Przemysl fortress and the lower San, it is possible to form an approximate idea of the booty taken. In the battles of Tarnow and Gorlice, and in the battles during the pursuit of these armies we have so far taken 103,500 Russian prisoners, 69 cannon, and 255 machine guns. In these figures the booty taken by the allied troops fighting in the Carpathians and north of the Vistula is not included. This amounts to a further 40,000 prisoners.

TARNOW, Galicia, May 11, (by Courier to Cracow and via London, May 13.)—The struggle in the region north of the Vistula River and on the borders of Galicia, which well-informed persons here expect and hope will bring a final decision in the battle against the Russian armies, appears to be approaching a conclusive phase.

Terrific engagements were fought today at positions twenty-two miles to the east of Tarnow, in the vicinity of Debica and Mielec, where the Austrian army, under Archduke Francis Joseph, came into fierce conflict with Russian forces which were retreating eastward from the Dunajec River and Tarnow.

Airmen who flew over the battlefield today reported that the entire front was marked by burning villages, most of which had been bombarded. They say it looks exactly like a gigantic prairie fire.

To the north of the Vistula River the Austrian corps commanded by Count Kirchbach has forced the Nida line, according to information reaching here.

Today and yesterday the wind brought with it as far as Tarnow the incessant roar of gunfire, indicating that Count Kirchbach's forces were trying to advance hand-in-hand with the troops of Archduke Joseph Ferdinand and General von Mackensen.

Along the Carpathian front also the Austrian armies have made a forward move, bringing the Third Russian Army and the remainder of the Eighth Russian Army in imminent danger of being surrounded and destroyed.

Russian Victories in the East.

PETRODRAD, May 13.—The following official statement regarding the operations in Galicia was issued by General Headquarters tonight:

In Western Galicia the intensity of the fighting decreased on a considerable of the front during Tuesday and Wednesday.

Our offensive on the right bank of the Dniester is meeting with continued success. The enemy on Tuesday made several fruitless counter-attacks to relieve his centre, which was retiring in disorder on the Dniester toward the Obertyn-Horolenka line. (These towns are in the extreme east of Galicia. Obertyn is almost north, and Horodenka is northeast of Kolomea.)

In this operation the Austrian units which led the offensive were repulsed near Chocimierz, northwest of Obertyn, with heavy losses. Our artillery annihilated two entire battalions, and a third suffered severely.

Near Horodenka the enemy gave way about 11 o'clock in the evening of the same day and began a disorderly retreat. We captured several thousand additional prisoners, a number of guns, and about fifty ammunition caissons.

GERMANS ATTACK IN NORTH.

Repulsed Five Times Near Shevli and Lose Prisoners and Guns.

PETROGRAD, May 13.—The following official statement from General Headquarters was issued tonight:

On Tuesday night the enemy began an offensive with large forces in the region of Shavli, (Courland,) in an attempt to retain this road centre. During the night we repulsed successfully five attacks, and the following morning, by an energetic stroke, we defeated a German outflanking column, capturing several hundred prisoners and five guns. The fighting continues.

On the Dubissa River, on the same day, we captured a hostile position near Kovno, (or Jairagola,) thirty miles northwest of Kovno.

On the left bank of the Neimen there has been no change.

On the right bank of the Orzyo our trench mortars bombarded the enemy's trenches with great success.

KAISER SLIGHTED HIS ALLIES.

Said to Have Told Troops Germany Virtually Was Fighting Alone.

PETROGRAD, May 13.—A dispatch from Kiev to the Bourse Gazette says:

"German officers captured at Jaslo, Galicia, assert that Emperor William visited the Noists front for the purpose of encouraging newly-arrived German reservisits. He made an address in which he told them, notwithstanding the presence of Austrian officers, that Germany was fighting her three powerful enemies virtually single handed.

"Her allies, Austria and Turkey, the Emperor is quited as having said, had not fulfilled his expectations and the whole burden of the war was on the soldiers of the German army. Therefore German officers ought to take over command of the remnants of the Austrian army, or, at any rate, Austrian officers should be subordinate to them. Under such conditions alone would victory be achieved."

Russia Using Archangel Port.

PETROGRAD, May 13.—Although the ice in Archangel Harbor has broken up and access to this port from the sea is now possible, no private cargoes will be handled there in the immediate future. The Minister of Commerce announced today that all the facilities of the port would be required for Government purposes and that until further notice no other traffic could be accommodated.

USE NONCOMBATANTS AS SHIELD FOR TURKS

Our Ambassador Vainly Protests on Behalf of French and British.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Friday, May 14.—The British Foreign Office publishes a striking correspondence, transmitted through American diplomatic channels, on the subject of Turkey's threat to remove British and French noncombatants from Constantinople to the danger zone in Dardanelles. Here follows material parts of the correspondence:

From the American Ambassador in Constantinople:

The Minister of War today (May 2) told me that the fleet and aeroplanes of the Allies are bombarding and killing noncombatants at Gallipoli and other unfortified places on that peninsula. He has therefore decided to send to those places French and British subjects from Constantinople, exposing them to the same danger; but will delay taking this action until May 6, so as to give time for the receipt of assurances that orders to discontinue such bombardment will be given.

From Sir Edward Grey to the American Ambassador in London:

I have the honor to request that Mr. Morgenthau, United States Ambassador in Constantinople, may be so good as to inorm the Ottoman Government that if British or French noncombatants are transported to those places which, owing to the presence o the Ottoman Army, fall within the zone of the present military operations, his Majesty's Government will hold Enver Pasha, his highness Said Halim Pasha, and the members of the present Ottoman Ministry, as well as the military authorities commanding the Turkish troops, personally responsible for the life of any British subject or French citizen so transported, and for any hurt, damage or wounds which such nationals may receive:

From the American Ambassador in Constantinople:

May 4, 10 P. M.—I again called on the Minister of War and did my very best to dissuade him from his determination to send into the war zone British and French noncombatants, and further endeavored to persuade him to take no action at all until I could receive the answers of the British and French Governments. He said that, having given the order and issued it to the military authorities, he could not now countermand it without serious injury to army discipline. In consequence of my insistent arguments he resolved to send only men between 20 and 40 years of age, to limit their number to fifty, and to select the youngest. These men may remain on board the steamer until I hear from London and Paris, and, according to the nature of the replies so received, they are to be landed at Gallipoli or brought back to Constantinople.

From the American Ambassador in Constantinople:

May 6, P. M.—Twenty-six British and twenty-four French subjects were this morning shipped on transports bound for Gallipoli. The only British born in England are William Wickram and Henry Hoar. The only Frenchmen born in France are Marcel Arjol and Paul Bacognano. The average age of the British subjects is 23, and of the French 25½. Ruhl, representing Collier's Weekly, and Suydam, representing The Brooklyn Eagle, were allowed to accompany the ship.

ALLIES' SUCCESSES DISQUIETING TO BERLIN

Major Moraht Admits the Possibility of German Loss of Territory.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROTTERDAM, May 13, (Dispatch to The London Daily News.)—That there is evident uneasiness in Berlin military circles over the Allies' advance is shown by a significant article by Major Moraht, who, writing in the Berliner Tageblatt, candidly admits that the Germans must now be on the defensive, and may be forced to surrender some territory.

"Between Arras and Armentières," he says, "thingse are very lively. It is the offensive of an enemy with strong forces, and therefore the beginning of the war in May announced by Kitchener. That announcement was not unwelcome to our army command. That Kitchener keeps his word is due more, perhaps, to the peculiarities of a coalition war than to the completion of his advertised army of many millions of white and colored Englishmen. For two weeks transports have without doubt brought notable new forces into France, but in any case not millions. What France has brought into the field for this offensive it is difficult to say. It may be the great army of defense from Paris, which does not feel itself threatened at the moment but it may be the newly trained young reserves,, or troops rested after the fighting in Champagne and between the Meuse and the Moselle.

"Although we have strong confidence that this offensive will not lead to driving us out of Flanders and the north of France, as the enemy hopes, still, an attack with great numerical superiority may bring about a backward and forward battle which may continue a long time without resulting in any decision. In such circumstances the giving up of individual points on the front is no catastrophe, and if the French have wrested from su the trenches between Carency and Neuville, they have had to win their successes at the cost of bloody losses and without the certainty of keeping us out permanently.

"The situation in the west is such that development toward a decision will lie in the question whether we are stronger in defense or the enemy stronger in attack."

ASKED TO DIE IN ALSACE.

Lieut. de Cassagnac, Mortally Hurt, Refused to Leave the Front.

PARIS, May 13.—Guy de Cassagnac, director of L'Autorité, who was a Second Lieutenant of reserves, is mentioned in the army orders for showing "great bravery and real contempt of death."

Although wounded in battle, he continued to lead his men until he was struck by a second bullet. At that time he was in command of his company, and so long as his strength held out he encouraged his men and led them onward. Feeling at length that he was at the point of death, he declined to be carried to the rear, saying that he desired to die in Alsace. His last wish was fulfilled.

PREDICTS ALLIANCE AGAINST RUSSIA

Count Apponyi Believes Britain and Germany Will Be Friendly After the War.

SAYS ENTENTE CANNOT WIN

Galicia, He Thinks, Will Be Restored to Austria—Poland Made a Barrier Against Muscovites.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, April 26, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—Count Albert Apponyi, the veteran Hungarian Opposition party leader, former Minister and President of Parliament, who is personally widely known in the United States because of his lecture tour of four years ago, has received the correspondent of The Associated Press and discussed frankly not only present war conditions in his country, but what the European struggle may bring forth. He is a thorough optimist.

"I see no reason why after this war some understanding of the western European powers shouldn't come," he said.

"We in Austria and Hungary have no serious points of conflict with England and France. France after 1870 had to make an effort to regain her lost provinces from Germany, but she must now see that the attempt is hopeless. She has had the assistance of the strongest possible coalition which could be arranged to help her gain her desire, and is further than ever from success. It would be possible, I think, after the war to reconcile her to the loss by some concessions regarding the autonomy of Alsace-Lorraine and enable her to enter the new coalition. England, too, would have to give up her aspirations to absolute naval superiority over all the rest of the world—to a dominance which would enable her to dictate the affairs of the world—and content herself with the position of the first naval power."

"Real Cause" of the War.

Count Apponyi spoke at great length on the causes of the war, expressing regret that Americans were inclined to attribute it to an attack by Austria on Serbia and ignore Russia's real object of gaining egress from the Black Sea to the Mediterranean and establish a Slav protectorate on the shores of the Adriatic. In asserting that the war was due to a premeditated attack by Russia, which had been in preparation since the Russo-Japanese war, Count Apponyi said:

"We Hungarians feel that the struggle for us is one of very existence. There can never be any security for western Europe so long as Russia is allowed to play a rôle in European affairs. Her whole history is one of conquest to expand the territory under her control. What must come to meet this danger to Europe is a coalition of the western European powers against Russia."

The Hungarian leader voiced a thought to which many high-placed men of Germany and Austro-Hungary are giving utterance—that the next thing on the cards after the war would be some form of understanding between the two protagonists in the present struggle—England and Germany.

The war, Count Apponyi believes, will produce comparatively little change in the present map of Europe, assuming that Austro-Hungary and Germany are successful. There will be no need, he said, to roll up the map of Europe and draft a new set of boundaries, certainly not in the west. In the east he looks for some settlement of the Polish problem, under which Poland will belong to the west, as a barrier against Russia.

In discussing the present situation the Opposition leader made his only criticism of the Government now in power. People's spirits, he said, are naturally affected by the fall of Przemysl—an event which was inexcusable. The fortress itself was impregnable to assault. The military authorities, he said, must have known at the opening of the war that it would be impossible to hold Galicia against the Russian masses and that it would be necessary to fall back slowly through Galicia to the natural defensive frontier—the Carpathians. Przemysl should have been provisioned for at least a year. Why it was not, said Count Apponyi, would be a subject for inquiry after the war.

Underestimated Russia's Strength.

Another mistake attributed by the Count to the military authorities was underestimating the force which the Russians could throw into the field against Austro-Hungary at the beginning of the war. It had been thought that several months would pass before Russia could complete her mobilization to full strength and a large Austro-Hungarian army was detached for operations against Serbia on this assumption. Russia was found, however, to be already virtually on a war footing and ready to pour her armies into Galicia from the very first.

In view of this condition, said the Count, the Austro-Hungarian leaders should have in the beginning followed the policy now adopted of leaving on the Serbian frontier a force only strong enough to protect the border against invasion, and throwing against the Russians the whole strength of the army. In this case the Russians, with their 100 divisions, would not have been able to fall so overwhelmingly on the forty or so divisions of the Austro-Hungarian Army.

Count Apponyi said he did not admit that Galicia had been lost to the dual monarchy. "We have already driven the Russians from Bukowina," he said, "Why not from Galicia? But even taking the extreme case of the pessimists and granting that our armies are not able to drive the Russians back on Russian soil, I would point out that the armies of Germany and Austro-Hungary are already in possession of several thousand square miles of Russian Poland. The area of this, it is true, may not be quite as large as that of the parts of Galicia occupied by the Russians, but the population is greater. In riches, too, the parts of Russian Poland occupied by us exceed Galicia. In addition, Germany holds virtually all of Belgium and Northern France, so there is no doubt that if the war should cease under present conditions, we should get back Galicia."

The aims for which Germany and Austro-Hungary are fighting, the Count thought, were already attained, for it would be many long years before any power or group of powers would venture to attack them again.

Talking of the sale of American munitions of war to the enemies of the Teutonic allies, the Count said:

"Sentiment in Austro-Hungary is not so intensely anti-American on this account as in Germany, but we feel that the war would soon be over if the United States would stop supplying artillery and ammunition to Russia. At the beginning of the war Russia had an immense superiority in artillery and great supplies of ammunition for it. Now she has lost so many cannon and has fired away so much ammunition that she is barely able to hold her own, and we feel that without help from America this would be impossible for her. We realize that formal right may be on the side of the United States in this question, but it is hard to talk of formal right to some one whose son, father, or brother has been killed by an American bullet."

PARIS APPEAL TO WILSON.

Chamber of Commerce Urges Strong Demands Upon Germany.

PARIS, May 13.—The American Chamber of Commerce in Paris has adopted a set of resolutions calling upon President Wilson to exact reparation from Germany for the loss of American lives by the torpedoing of the Cunard liner Lusitania.

TEMPS SUPPORTS WILSON.

Says He Has Harkened to His Conscience and the People's Voice.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 13.—The Temps, which has refrained from the criticisms of President Wilson expressed by the British section of the Paris press, today comments favorably on the reported firmness of the American note to Germany. The writer accepts the view that the Philadelphia speech was intended to test public opinion which Mr. Wilson, as a Chief Executive elected by the people, has found to be irresistibly demanding strong measures.

"The present note," says the Temps, "shows that the President appreciates the public attitude and intends to satisfy the nation's wishes.

"The Temps considers that it is America's ambition to justify her position as a great power, and that this sentiment probably caused Mr. Wilson to desire to be the world's arbitrator by resorting to peace.

"But," concludes the editorial, "the President cannot still think it possible for the war to end by a compromise. No bargaining conclusion of the death struggle between civilization and inhuman barbarism is imaginable. President Wilson has listened unequivocally to his own conscience and the people's voice. Not mediation will end the conflict, but the defeat of those who began it."

BAPTISTS FIRM FOR WILSON.

HOUSTON, Texas, May 13. — The Southern Baptist Convention today unanimously adopted resolutions approving the stand taken by President Wilson in the international relations of the United States. Prayer then was offered for divine guidance for the President. The resolutions, which were ordered telegraphed to the President, read:

"The Southern Baptist Convention, representing 2,500,000 Baptists, desires to place on record its high appreciation of the great service to the nation and the world now being rendered by the President of the United States, Woodrow Wilson, in the firm stand he has taken for the ideals of peace and at the same time in his vigorous assertion of the principles of justice and the requirements of international law.

"We rejoice in the restraint, the discrimination, the judicial fairness and the courage with which he is steering the ship of State in a time of extraordinary difficulty and danger.

"We desire to express our unwavering confidence in him, as the exponent of our national ideals and of the ideals of higher civilization of the world, and also to assure him of our profound sympathy and prayers for a solution of the grave problems and the performance of the arduous tasks in which he is now engaged."

800 STUDENTS FOR PEACE.

Pennsylvania Undergraduates Indorse Wilson's Neutrality.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 13.—Eight hundred University of Pennsylvania students signed a petition which was sent to President Wilson today urging him to preserve the neutrality of this country in spite of the Lusitania disaster. Similar petitions are being prepared at Princeton, Yale, Harvard, and Columbia Universities.

The Pennsylvania students' petition was circulated by members of the University Peace Society, acting without Faculty suggestion. Undergraduates responded quickly to the request for signatures. It is said at the university that few students favor any move by the Government which may tend toward war.

The text of the paper follows:

To the President of the United States of America:

We, the students of the University of Pennsylvania, do hereby express our confidence in the sagacity and patience of our President, and do declare that we firmly believe that the United States should continue the policy of neutrality as respects European affairs that it has pursued in the past.

We believe that occurrences such as the sinking of the Lusitania, grave as that is, should neither tempt nor force us into war, and that we should pursue peaceful means of settlement rather than attempt warlike reprisals.

In full trust of the high-mindedness of our Executive, we wish to commend our attitude to his attention.

METHODISTS PRAISE WILSON.

Bishops of Southern Church Send an Encouraging Message.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 13.—The College of Bishops of the Southern Methodist Church sent this telegram to President Wilson today:

"The College of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, thanks God that our President, on whom rests at this time such great and unusual burdens, is a man of prayer, discretion, courage, patriotism, and ability.

"As chief pastors of some millions of our American people the college assures the President of its sympathy and prayers in his efforts to preserve the peace of our beloved country and to protect the rights and honor of our citizens. At this hour and in all things may the hand of our God and the God of our fathers guide you and all who are associated with you in directing the destiny of Americans."

McCREARY BACKS WILSON.

LEXINGTON, Ky., May 13.—Governor James McCreary of Kentucky today expressed complete satisfaction with the course that President Wilson is pursuing in regard to foreign relations, and especially in connection with the sinking of the Lusitania.

The Governor said: "I was on the Foreign Relations Committee in the Senate for six years and twelve years in the House, and during that time I made a close study of international law and therefore have taken much interest in the attitude of the President. I have every confidence that his good judgment is equal to the situation. I have no public opinion to express upon the course the President or Congress should pursue, feeling that they should not be embarrassed by advice from those not in a position of responsibility in the Government."

SOUTHERN GOVERNOR'S VIEW.

Brewer of Mississippi Thinks We Have No Ground for Quarrel.

JACKSON, Miss., May 13.—Governor Brewer of Mississippi in a statement here today declared that as Americans had been warned not to take passage on the British steamship Lusitania he could not understand why the United States should quarrel with Germany because Americans lost their lives as a result of the torpedoing of the vessel.

"Americans were given fair warning to stay off," he said. "The passengers knew what to expect and took the risk."

Governor Brewer declared, however, that any action taken by President Wilson would meet with the unanimous approval of the people of Mississippi.

ROCHESTER GERMANS LOYAL.

They Resolve Not to Antagonize the President's Policy.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 13.—At the conclusion of a meeting of the German-American Alliance held here last night, President William Otto issued the following statement:

"Although the organization did not take definite action, the sentiment was in favor of unqualified support of President Wilson in whatever action he takes. The German-Americans of this city are neutral in every respect, and none of their societies will take action antagonistic to the policy of the Administration."

by the Government between naturalized and non-naturalized aliens. Premier Asquith and Mr. Bonar Law both insisted that naturalization, which confers British citizenship, is a fact not to be ignored. There are 8,000 such persons, and in their case no action is to be taken unless they happen to fall under suspicion. A naturalized alien from an enemy country "is to be regarded as innocent until proved guilty." Premier Asquith specifically mentioned cases in which such subjects of the King had given soldiers to the British armies at the front and were mourning the loss of sons who died for England.

Of aliens of enemy countries not naturalized there are 40,000—24,000 men and 16,000 women—of whom 19,000 are interned; all are registered. All such males of military age—17 to 55—are to be interned. All males outside these age limits and all women and children will be repatriated—deported, presumably, to some neutral country like Holland. No fresh legislation will be required.

"In the interests of justice and humanity"—words that evoked a sympathetic cheer—a special court will be constituted, which will allow exceptional treatment in particular cases. During the debate members expressed the hope that the president of this tribunal would be a judge of a high court and said that in view of the large number of appeals likely to be heard several tribunals should sit simultaneously and that alien enemies at present interned should share the right of appeal. Men of military age will be interned without delay, but Lord Robert Cecil suggested that in the case of persons liable to deportation whose appeals are pending some kind of bail might be allowed.

One feature of the discussion was the outspoken censure by the leaders of both parties on the recent mob outrages.

"They are utterly contrary to our instincts," said Mr. Bonar Law, "and I deplore them."

Must Be No Neutrals in England.

At the same time he maintained in a phrase that undoubtedly will be frequently quoted that there must be "no neutrals in Great Britain; everyone who is not for us is against us." This was loudly cheered, as was the declaration that hostile-minded alien enemies are a greater danger "the higher the position they occupy."

Mr. Lough drew from the Prime Minister a promise that the cases of British women married to alien enemies would be separately considered. Mr. Holt pointed out that internment would cost the country some millions of pounds sterling a year, to say nothing of the loss of much productive labor. Sir A. B. Markham gave an illustration of this, the fact that, despite the present shortage of labor, a number of British workmen actually went on strike rather than work side by side with an alien twenty years in this country, who had three sons fighting at the front for Great Britain. This incident drew from the Prime Minister a very warm rejoinder. Indeed, the whole of his second speech, which was energetic in both delivery and sentiment, was an emphatic denunciation of the recent outrages. That provocation existed, he admitted, but this, he said, did not excuse the perpetrators of the riots.

"The newspapers put them up to it," cried Will Thorne.

"I hold no brief for the press," retorted the Prime Minister, adding a pointed allusion to the folly of the "vendetta." Mr. Asquith spoke of alien enemies who had given sons for Britain or who in some cases were employed on technical tasks where their labor would be most difficult to replace. He pointed out that there must be elasticity in the new arrangement, which had been adopted with reluctance.

Task of Internment Great.

The task of completing the internment of male enemy aliens of military age will not be light, according to the figures mentioned in the House. It would appear that the measures to be taken will involve almost doubling the number of German and Austrian civilians now under restraint. While 19,000 aliens are now confined in internment camps, of the 40,000 still at liberty presumably 15,000 or 20,000 are of military age, and a large extension of the accommodations now available will be required.

Sir Edward Grey, in reply to a supplementary question, was unable to state the proportion of Germans and Austrians, respectively, represented in the figures quoted; but inquiry in well-informed quarters indicates that not fewer than four-fifths are Germans. No public statement has yet been made as to the arrangements for internment, but it is probable that a considerable addition will be made to the prisoners on the Isle of Man, where fresh accommodations already are in course of construction. It is likely also that some huts vacated by soldiers drafted to the Continent may be occupied by interned prisoners.

The course taken by the Government is generally approved by the representatives of societies which since the beginning of the war have been relieving distress among enemy aliens. Many of the Germans, it is stated, will genuinely welcome internment, particularly in view of the occurrences of the last few days, in which many of them lost both their property and their means of subsistence.

Beresford Attacks High Germans.

"We have had enough of kid-glove and featherbed fighting. Now let us take the gloves off and intern a lot of our enemies," said Lord Charles Beresford at a women's meeting in support of the movement for the internment of alien enemies, held in the Mansion House this afternoon. The most dangerous enemies in England, he declared, are wealthy naturalized Germans of a high social position. In the past they have had an immense influence in British affairs. "All these people," continued Lord Charles, "have their appointed place and duty in case we are invaded."

Prince Louis of Battenburg had the good taste to resign, and Lord Charles wanted to know what German Privy Councillors were doing in this country. He did not know why they were made Privy Councillors, but they ought to follow Prince Louis's example and throw up their positions. Naturalization did not change the nature of men, he said; they came over here Germans and they remained Germans.

Lord Charles's special reference was understood to be to Sir Edgar Speyer, who was mentioned by name in a Morning Post editorial.

Sir Edwin Cornwall, M. P., said Germans dined with Admirals, Generals, and even Prime Ministers, and there was a regular system of espionage.

Sir Henry Dalziel, M. P., said the Chairman of the Building Acts Committee of the London County Council had reported that to the north, south, east and west alien enemies possessed positions with concrete foundations of strategic value with regard to London.

Other speakers included Lady Glanusk, who said she had received a letter from a survivor of the Lusitania asking her to try to imagine his feelings on recovering consciousness to find himself in a hotel owned by a German.

City Men Threaten "Revolution."

Thousands of city men, undeterred by rain, held a mass meeting today on Tower Hill to urge the Government to take immediate and drastic action against all enemy aliens. They were to have marched to Tower Hill from the Royal Exchange, but the procession was abandoned at the request of the city police.

"Unless the Government do their part," said one of the speakers, "we will take things in hand. You have heard of the French Revolution; we don't want one here."

A striking incident occurred during the meeting. A large contingent of soldiers passed in the cheeriest of moods; they said they were on their way to the front. A cheer was instantly raised and someone called out: "Hats off, gentlemen!" Instantly the city men raised their hats and stood bareheaded while the soldiers passed, singing on their way.

The meeting adopted this resolution:

"Thousands of citizens of London, gathered together at a mass meeting, unanimously protest against any kith and kin of German mutilators, poisoners, and murderers of men, women, and children being any longer allowed to be at large in the British Islands, and, fearing riots, fires, the spread of disease germs, and poisoned water, hereby unanimously demand that the Government take immediate steps to intern or deport all alien enemies, male or female, whatever their nationality, naturalized or otherwise."

This resolution immediately was telegraphed to Premier Asquith.

LONDON RIOTERS HEAVILY SENTENCED

Four Months at Hard Labor for Some—Looting Now Confined to Boys and Women.

LONDON, May 13.—Such anti-German rioting as took place today and tonight was carried on largely by mobs of boys, girls, and women, who were out for fun or bent on looting German shops, while men stood by laughing or encouraging their youthful imitators. The police, strongly reinforced by special constables, were better able to handle the situation today.

At Gravesend this evening a mob visited premises occupied by Germans, or persons bearing German names, wrecking the shops, and throwing their contents into the streets.

Following the wild scenes of yesterday, about 500 active participants in attacks on German shops appeared in the police courts of London today. The Magistrates read severe lectures and imposed heavy penalties in most cases. Some of the more culpable were sentenced to jail terms at hard labor, the sentences ranging from a month to four months. tOhers, chiefly women, were fined.

When men of military age appeared before the Magistrates there were told sharply that the best way to get revenge on the Germans was to enlist. In this connection The Westminster Gazette said today:

"People who hunt aliens and assault their persons and loot their shops are not the people who are going to help us right our wrongs. They are loafers and shirkers who are not going to war and whose violence has no patriotic motive."

No Complaints of Hurts.

It is notable that no complaints have been received of aliens suffering from personal injury. Of the many hundreds who appeared at the American Embassy and Consulate today seeking protection none showed signs of having been engaged in an encounter. They desired compensation for the damage done to their property and assurances that there would be no repetition of the attacks. Under English law the taxpayers of localities where the shops were wrecked and goods destroyed must pay compensation for the damage done in the riots, so that in many cases the very people who took part in the demonstrations will have to pay their share.

At Southend the authorities took a particularly serious view of the case. Many of the men arrested were prominent citizens, who were angered by the recent Zeeppelin raid. They were remanded for a week and heavy bail was demanded.

Naturalized Germans, Austrians, and Turks were busy today signing declarations repeating their oaths of allegiance to Great Britain. One memorial from men of this class in the City of London has been sent direct to King George. Other memorials have been handed to the Mayors of various cities. In all the memorials the men, besides reaffirming their oath of allegiance, express abhorrence of the German methods of warfare.

In the poor quarters of London and Liverpool, as well as in Manchester, Birkenhead, Glasgow, Southend, and other places that were centres of rioting yesterday, Germans today remained in seclusion; their shops were shuttered, with police on guard.

American Concern Joins Boycott.

The representatives of the large American meat establishment at Smithfield today joined their British confrères in displaying a notice that no business would be transacted with Germans. Some friction had been threatened because the Americans delayed putting out the notice until they had received instructions from headquarters.

Anti-German feeling in the Goldthorpe mining district in Yorkshire led to violent scenes last night. Revolvers were fired and four men sustained injuries. The police charged the crowd and had great difficulty to keep the infuriated miners in check.

Rioting in the vicinity of the Custom House grew violent as the day progressed. The mob, mostly boys, women and girls, got out of hand and wrecked and looted property on all sides on the least suspicion that it was owned by Germans. In many cases the women wore, especially made aprons capable of carrying their booty, while the boys trundled wheelbarrows, loading them with loot as they progressed. Whole sides of bacon were favorite trophies.

Streams of Germans poured into the American Consulate all day. The Consul General, Robert P. Skinner, was unable to do anything for them except to make an appeal in their behalf to Scotland Yard, which promised to do its utmost to protect them.

Mr. Skinner is taking statements from the Germans a sto the extent of damage sustained in the riots. These statements show heavy losses among shopkepers, one of whom states that he suffered property damage to the extent of $10,000.

More than a score of Germans, among whom were a number of weeping women and children, called at the American Embassy. They were advised to apply to the German branch of the American Embassy at Carlton House Terrace, the former location of the German Embassy. These persons, however, evidently feared to go to this address, for E. G. Lowry of the Embassy Staff, who is in charge of this branch of the work, reported that he had received no complaints.

VICE CONSUL INTERNED.

Austrian Who Served at Vancouver Sent to Detention Camp.

VANCOUVER, B. C., May 13.—E. von Ulrich, Vice Consul for Austria-Hungary in Vancouver at the time of the outbreak of war, has been arrested and sent to the internment camp at Nanaimo, where he will be detained until the end of the struggle.

NEW TYPES OF WARSHIPS.

British Vessels Expected to Prove Decisive Factors in Near Future.

GLASGOW, May 6.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.) That the shipyards on the Clyde are turning out several fighting ships of entirely new types which are expected to prove decisive factors both in the North Sea and in the Dardanelles, was revealed in an address made to a meeting of business men here by Captain J. J. Barttelot of the Admiralty Office. In urging the necessity of recruiting several thousand skilled workmen for the shipbuilding works, he said:

"Our main concern up here and on the Clyde is the fleet. These yards are building ships of new types, and great issues depend on their arriving at their stations.

"To get these ships ready there are wanted many more men, especially iron workers. In order to beat the enemy we shall have to pool the whole of our resources of skilled labor and put them on Government work. This will mean a very considerable displacement of labor, but I feel confident, by the readiness with which the representatives of the employers and men have come together, that the efforts will be successful.

"Many firms have already most willingly met my request to divert men from their works to other firms engaged on Government work, and the representatives of the boiler makers and other trades have also given me assistance. But the transference must be done on a larger scale. Transfer of men naturally involved financial loss through inability of firms to carry on contracts, but the Government will arrange suitable compensation in these cases."

part of the village. The number of cannon and howitzers of large calibre taken was seventeen.

In the Argonne, at Bagatelle, we repulsed two German attacks—one at night, the other in the day. The latter was very violent.

French Masters of La Pretre.

The success reported this morning in the forest of La Pretre has made us masters of the last German organization which had still resisted in that wood. The entire position is now in our hands.

(Afternoon Report)—We won brilliant successes Wednesday evening and Wednesday night to the north of Arras.

At Nôtre Dame de Lorette we are masters of the fort, as well as of the chapel.

In the vast quadrilateral of trenches the earthworks which is to the south of the chapel of Nôtre Dame de Lorette we have been subjected to a very violent counter-attack. A ferocious combat which lasted all night long, developed in this quadrilateral. In the morning we were complete masters of the situation, having inflicted very heavy losses on the enemy.

During Wednesday night we also took by assault all of the village of Carency, as well as the forest to the north of it, Hill 125. The German garrison stationed in this village and in this wood was composed of one battalion of the 109th Regiment of infantry, one battalion of the 136th Regiment of infantry, one battalion of Bavarian chasseurs, and six companies of Pioneers, 300 men to a company. These forces had made of Carency and of Hill 125 in the forest a position of great strength. In spite of the fact that their numbers had been very much reduced by their losses in killed, wounded, and prisoners on previous days, these forces during the entire night put up a desperate resistance to our attack delivered against a maze of trenches, blockhouses, and narrow passages.

Bayoneted Hundreds of Germans.

We broke down this resistance of the enemy, and at break of day we were in complete mastery of the situation. Our troops killed hundreds of Germans at the point of the bayonet. We made 1,050 prisoners, of whom about thirty are officers. Among these latter are a Colonel and the commandant of the battalion of chasseurs.

At the southern exit of Souchez our positions were subjected yesterday to violent attacks on the part of the enemy. Nevertheless, we retained them.

At Neuville our attacks on the village itself and to the north of the village made perceptible progress. To the north of Neuville we took possession of trenches several hundred yards long, and we occupied the road called the Highway des Carrières, which runs from Neuville to Givenchy. In the village itself we occupied yesterday morning only the southern portion, the enemy still holding the centre and the northern part. An attack delivered late in the afternoon resulted in our occupying house by house all the central portion of this village. The Germans were driven back to the extreme northern part, where we are outflanking them. Our troops in this fighting gave admirable evidence of courage and tenacity.

In the forest of Le Prêtre we occupied yesterday a new line of German trenches.

British Withstand Ypres Assaults.

Following is the British official communication:

The fighting east of Ypres still continues. The Germans today have again subjected our line north of the Menin road to a violent artillery bombardment, which in places destroyed some of our trenches, causing temporary readjustments in the line. The line, however, has since been completely reestablished.

On the remainder of the front there is nothing to report.

Germans Ecacuate Two Villages.

It is perhaps to the British admissions in the foregoing report that the German official communication refers in announcing the capture of "another point of vantage" near Ypres. Berlin's account of the day's operations is as follows:

East of Ypres we took another point of vantage from the enemy. In the afternoon strong French attacks on our front from Ablain to Neuville were repulsed with very heavy losses to the enemy. The village of Carency and the western part of Ablain, which are for the greater part included in the territory held by the French as a result of their occupation of our foremost trenches between Neuville and Carency, were, however, evacuated last night. Unfortunately on this occasion a number of our brave men and much material again were lost.

French attempts to recapture a section of their trenches which we took from them northwest of Berry-au-Bac, in the woods south of Nil-aux-Bois, were without success.

After strong artillery preparations the enemy attacked our positions between the Meuse and the Moselle last night. At Croix des Carmes they succeeded in penetrating a section of our foremost trenches stretching over a width from 150 to 200 metres. After bitter hand-to-hand fighting our positions were again cleared of all Frenchmen. A number of prisoners remained in our hands.

Two French blockhouses on the western slope of Hartmannsweilerkopf were destroyed by our fire.

GIVE PITTANCE TO WORKERS.

Shocking Conditions in Workshops for French Soldiers' Wives.

PARIS, May 13.—Conditions which prevail in workrooms opened to enable the wives of soldiers to earn a living, the Petit Parisien says, are deplorable. There are now 600 of these establishments in Paris, half of them subventioned. Many of those which are operated under private auspices are said to be no better than sweatshops. Even in the best managed of those in the subventioned class, women are able to earn an average of only 36 cents a day for eight and one-half hours' work.

In some of the workrooms conducted by sub-contractors for army shirts and other military supplies, the Petit Parisien asserts, women get only 10 cents a day, while many operatives exchange their services for board and lodging.

The National Council of French Women has taken up the question of affording relief.

PRAISE FOR ARRAS VICTORY.

Minister Millerand Congratulates Joffre and His Troops.

PARIS, May 15.—The French Minister of War, Alexandre Millerand, today sent a telegram to the French Commander in Chief, General Joffre, congratulating him on the success of the operations of the French troops in the region of Arras. The Minister said:

"The results already obtained by our action demonstrate the excellence of preparation and the value of its execution. Your armies and you once more have merited the admiration and the recognition of the country."

Mine Unionists Object to War.

ST. LOUIS, May 13.—The Executive Board of District 12, United Mine Workers of America, today adopted a resolution protesting against any action that would involve this country in the European war and pledging support to the President "in his determination to prevent our nation from being swayed from its position of strict neutrality."

MODESTY

We have been in business about fifteen years—we have erected more than two hundred million dollars' worth of buildings—we have of late years been privileged to build practically every structure of magnitude in the East—and we have so utilized our opportunities and our experience, that we have gradually but surely brought the efficiency of our organization to a point where we are justified in telling you, with all due modesty, that no building organization on earth can do more for its clients than we can, and we know of none other that can do so much.

MAYOR'S PLEA TO PEOPLE

"If Germans Are Molested in Word or Deed, Hostages Will Be Put to Death."

On account o the charges brought about by a few weeks of war in the peaceful French city of Comines is told, through the medium of the posters on the public bulletin board, by Dr. Hans Poehlmann, a German field chaplain whose regiment was stationed there last winter. The article, originally printed in the Sueddeutsche Monatshefte, was translated by Guilo Bruno and published in his magazine, Greenwich Village, in the issue for April 28. Dr. Poehlmann's article follows:

"German soldiers in all streets and at the market place, at hard work to care for the sick and wounded. With heavy steps a regiment returns from the firing line; with serious looks but high spirits, a battalion crosses the market place, passes the Café de la Prix, called to the front. In the front of the town hall the German watch are doing routine duty as they would at home in their barracks. The town itself, the Mairie, is the seat of the German commander. A Bavarian major rules here over the city and population of Comines.

The beautiful old Gothic church is transformed into a field hospital. Rhododendron and magnolias are in bloom in the Jardin Public. In the midst of a fine old lawn is a heap of refuse. Cattle were being killed there and had been since the German occupation.

It is a little city of 9,000 to 10,000 inhabitants. It has lived through an exciting period the last few weeks. The torn and damaged sheets on the bulletin board of the Town Hall tell its short but grave story of suffering; from happiness to sorrow, from life to death. Here they are inviting its population to festivals, vibrating with the terrors of war and finally silenced by the almighty order of the German General.

Knight of the Legion of Honor.

July 28, 1914.

To the Nation of France:

Notwithstanding the endeavors of our diplomatic corps the political situation in Europe is very grave. At present most of the Governments have their armies mobilized. Even countries neutral, and therefore not immediately affected, are preparing to defend their borders if necessary.

France, who always demonstrated her peacefulness and always advised previously in critical days like these to be moderate and to abstain from the horrors of war, is also prepared for things unforeseen but which might happen. It must now take steps similar to those taken by other Governments.

Comines, Sept. 15, 1914.

To pacify the families who have sons or fathers with our armies, I beg to declare that I have not received, up to date, letters, notes, or communications containing authentic reports about possible casualties of our fellow-citizens. I don't know more than what I read in newspapers. I complained on several occasions about the unforgivable negligence with which our mails seem to be handled, but I was not able to change the situation.

My dear fellow-citizens, be courageous, have patience! The same second I receive communications of or about your beloved ones, immediately I shall communicate them to you.

THE MAYOOR.

OFFICIAL TELEGRAM.
Bordeaux, Oct. 7, 1914.

Nothing new has happened of special interest. A very violent battle raged near Roye and we finally were victorious. The general outlook is very satisfactory.

THE MAYOR.

Comines, Oct. 15, 1914.

My dear Fellow-citizens:

I implore you, do not act against the orders of the German commanders. Do all you can to satisfy them. The smallest misdemeanor on your part would mean distruction to the city and to the population. Upon your attitude depends the life of til the inhabitants and the fate of Comines.

In case of a battle, keep to your cellars and close doors and windows. My dear fellow-citizens, do not be afraid. Be calm! Count on us as we are counting on you.

YOUR MAYOR.

Oct. 22, 1914.

The Mayor of the city of Comines implores all his fellow-citizens to return to their homes and to keep quiet in case German troops should march through our city. Women and children are prohibited from gathering in the streets. The inciter of false alarms will be arrested and transported to Lille.

THE MAYOR.

Nov. 2, 1914.

The Mayor, the priest and six of the most prominent citizens of Comines are prisoners in the Town Hall. In case the German troops are molested in word or action all of us will be shot dead.

City of Comines, Nov. 18, 1914.

Order of the Commanding General to the citizens of Comines:

1. All healthy men between the ages of 16 to 50 will assemble this morning at 9:30 in front of the Town Hall ready to be used for general work by the Commanding General.
2. All who do not obey this order are exposing the city and its population to the severest measures.
3. Every act of hostility and every attempt to communicate with the hostile army will be punished by immediate death.
4. All traffic in the entire city has to stop, especially at the banks of the Lys.

This is the simple little story told by the bulletin board in front of the Town Hall of Comines, the French border city.

THOUSANDS JOIN LEGION FOR AMERICAN DEFENSE

Membership More Than Doubled Since Lusitania Was Sunk—None But Trained Men.

The membership of the American Legion has more than doubled since the Lusitania disaster. This was the announcement made at the League headquarters, 10 Bridge Street, yesterday.

The membership is for the most part made up of men who have served in the Navy, Army, Marine Corps, or National Guard, and others who by profession or training are specially fitted for the Government service in the event of a national crisis.

"The office of the Legion," it was said by an officer of the organization," has been flooded for the last few days with letters and telegrams from all parts of the United States. The Legion has reached the point where it would make a formidable corps in the service of any army, a corps of trained, efficient and seasoned men whose patriotism and valor is unquestionable.

"We have received several telegrams from chambers of commerce and boards of trade in cities of the West and South asking authority to appoint sub-committees for the enrollment of members in their parts of the country."

The membership of the Legion is now nearing the 70,000 mark and there are thousands of applications still to be considered.

FIVE SUBMARINES SENT TO SINK LUSITANIA?

Belief in Holland that Germany Took This Precaution Against Failure.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, May 13, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—It is generally believed that there were five submarines told off to sink the Lusitania in order to make absolutely sure, and thus give the impression that Germany's blockade threats could be executed at will.

TRANSYLVANIA'S TRACK CUTS SUBMARINE ZONE

Course Lies Near Southwest Irish Coast—Due in Liverpool on Sunday.

The agents of the Anchor Line, 32 State Street, said yesterday that the Transylvania, which sailed at 6 P. M. last Friday for Liverpool and Glasgow with 879 passengers, is expected to reach her first port late on Sunday.

The Transylvania steams about 15 knots and will probably pass 29 to 25 miles south of the Irish coast, which is considered the submarine danger zone.

Of her 117 first cabin passengers only seven are citizens of the United States.

Vessels sailing today for the war zone are the SS. Cymric, British, Liverpool, and the SS. Tropea, British, London.

STILL SEARCH GERMAN SHIPS

Inspectors to Examine Liners in Brooklyn Today for Explosives.

The neutrality squad, consisting of 70 Customs Inspectors with four Acting-Deputy Surveyors under the command of Acting-Deputy Surveyor Edward Norwood, went to Hoboken again yesterday to continue their search for explosives on the German steamships.

A number of the inspectors wore overalls for climbing into coal bunkers, bilges and ballast tanks. It is understood that the examination of the German and Austrian steamships laying at the piers in South Brooklyn will commence this morning.

The German steamships anchored off Staten Island will also be inspected.

ONLY MAURETANIA HELD UP.

Cunard Co. Says Sailing Was Cancelled for Lack of Business.

LONDON, May 13.—The Cunard Line announces that the only sailing date they have canceled is that of the Mauretania.

This was canceled, it is added, because there was not a sufficient demand for passenger accommodations to warrant running her.

Seeks J. M. Forman's Will.

Surrogate Cohalan yesterday signed an order authorizing the Fifth Avenue Bank to permit Edgar G. Barratt of East Orange, N. J., to open the safe deposit box of Justus Miles Forman, the novelist lost on the Lusitania, in an effort to find the author's will. Mr. Barratt, husband of Katharine Forman Barratt, a niece of the author, recites that he is confident he was named by Mr. Forman as an executor in the will. Mr. Barratt also relates that he has made inquiries through Norman Hapgood at Queenstown and received word that Mr. Forman is not among the survivors.

9 BODIES OF WOMEN AND CHILDREN FOUND

Brought Into Queenstown, but a Rough Sea Interrupts the Search.

REWARDS ARE OFFERED

Frohman's Body to be Taken to Liverpool—Vanderbilt Secretary Continues His Efforts.

QUEENSTOWN, May 13.—A tug arrived here at 6:30 o'clock this evening with the bodies of six women, two small boys, and one infant, victims of the Lusitania disaster.

The sea was so rough this afternoon that boats engaged in searching for the dead were forced to seek harbor. It is feared that the stormy weather will result in scattering the bodies.

The hope of recovering many more of the dead was shaken today by the statement of the Cunard Company that there was no foundation for the report that hundreds of bodies had been sighted by a tug.

The Cunard Company today offered a reward of $5 each for the recovery of bodies of Lusitania victims, and the American Consulate supplemented this offer by another of an equal sum for the body of each American found.

Driven by an easterly wind, the bodies today are sweeping around the southern tip of Ireland.

The rewards offered should greatly stimulate the efforts of fishermen who either through superstition or unwillingness to interrupt their fishing have, up to the present, rendered little service.

C. Haddon Chambers, the playwright, arrived in Queenstown today to take to Liverpool the body of Charles Frohman. Thence it will be shipped to the United States on Saturday aboard the steamship New York.

Webb Ware, secretary of Alfred G. Vanderbilt, will remain at Cork so long as there appears to be any hope of recovering Mr. Vanderbilt's body.

All southern Ireland is greatly excited over the outcome of the voyage of the Anchor line steamer Transylvania, now nearing the war zone.

DESCRIPTIONS ARE ASKED.

Should Be Sent to American Consul at Cork at Once.

LONDON, May 13.—Wesley Frost, the American Consul at Cork, has appealed to the embassy here to send out a notice to request the relatives and friends of persons still missing from the Lusitania disaster to cable immediately to the American Consulate at Cork descriptions of these individuals, in order that the work of identification may be expedited.

The list of Americans on the Lusitania as posted at the American Embassy gives Lindon W. Bates, Jr., and Herman A. Myers of New York as missing, and not as survivors, as erroneously published in the United States.

Investigation of the cablegram sent on Wednesday from the American Embassy in London, saying that Lindon W. Bates, Jr., and Herman A. Myers had been saved from the Lusitania proved that the mistake was due to the wording of the message, it was said.

Another mistake, rectified by a cable message to the Cunard office was the addition of the name of Miss Winifred Kellaway, a third-class passenger of Pittsburgh, who is now placed on the list of those in the hospital at Queenstown.

The Cunard offices were closed between 12 and 1 o'clock out of respect for the memorial services for the victims of the Lusitania disaster being held in Liverpool at that hour, English time.

LAUDS BATES AND VANDERBILT

"Died Like Heroes and Americans," Says Congressman Chandler.

A meeting in memory of Lindon W. Bates, Jr., who is reported missing in the lists of victims of the sinking of the Lusitania, was held last night by the Claremont Progressive Club at the clubhouse, 550 West 113th Street. Mr. Bates was County Chairman of the Progressive Committee and a member of the club.

Speaking at the meeting, Congressman Walter M. Chandler said that "Bates and Alfred Vanderbilt died like heroes and Americans." Park Commissioner Cabot Ward and Senator William M. Bennett also spoke.

AMERICAN LINE SAILORS DEMAND $20 WAR BONUS

Crew of the St. Louis Refuses to Sign Unless Pay Is Increased.

When the members of the crew of the engine room and deck departments of the American liner St. Louis gathered at the office on the pier at the foot of West Twenty-second Street at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, they notified Howard Hinsley the ship's purser and the United States Shipping Commissioner, that they would not sign articles unless they received $20 extra for the war risk. Men serving on the American and British liners in the New York and Liverpool trade, have been receiving $5 a round trip as a bonus from Captains down to cabin boys.

The management of the American Line decided that the men were using the sinking of the Lusitania as an excuse for extortionate demands and refused to pay the $20. The quartermasters and seamen finally signed articles but twenty oilers, seventy-five stokers and fifty coal passers stood out for the $20. The present rate of pay for these men, not including the $5 bonus, is $42.50, $40.50 and $30 a month.

At the American Line office it was said that the strikers had been told to be at the pier at nine o'clock this morning and it is expected that they will agree to accept the company's wages and sign articles. If not other men will be obtained through the shipping agents to supply their places. The American liners have not carried any contraband since the war started, the agents assert and the risk of their being torpedoed by German submarines is very small.

The St. Louis has booked 300 cabin and 400 third-class passengers for this trip. The agents said that a number of persons were booked yesterday for the Philadelphia, which sails on June 5 from New York and which will inaugurate the restoration of first-class accommodations on the American Line.

At the offices of the International Mercantile Marine yesterday it was said that the sinking of the Lusitania had not had any marked effect in canceling bookings on the steamships departing this week. The White Star steamship Cymric will sail this afternoon for Liverpool with 120 cabin and 300 third-class passengers.

PANAMA FORTS COMPLETED.

Army Officer Says One 16-Inch Gun Remains to be Mounted.

That the fortifications on the Canal Zone have been practically completed at a cost of $13,000,000 was the report brought to New York yesterday by Lieutenant A. A. Acher of the United States Coast Artillery, who arrived on the United Fruit steamship Almirante on leave of absence after being away two and a half years.

"Everything is finished on the fortifications," he said, "except the mounting of the sixteen-inch gun at Balboa to protect the western entrance to the Panama Canal. There is a force of 900 artillerymen on the Zone, which could be easily increased from New Orleans in case of war.

When asked if it was impracticable for the fleet of warships to pass through the canal this Summer, Lieutenant Acher replied that he did not believe there would be any difficulty in getting them through to the Pacific Coast if it was necessary.

The Lieutenant was accompanied by his wife and baby daughter, and will stay with his father-in-law, Major Gen. F. H. Hodges, U. S. A., at Fort Totten.

DR. WHITE FOR READINESS.

Americans Should Promote Peace, but Prepare for War, He Says.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., May 13.—Declaring that the best thing for the young men of Cornell University is military training, Dr. Andrew D. White, first President of Cornell and ex-Ambassador to Germany went on record at a banquet of the Cornell Cadet Corps today in favor of continuing the present policy of military training at Cornell and other universities. He declared that the passage of the Morrill Land Grant act of 1862, which permitted sixty colleges to adopt military training, was a "noble episode."

Dr. White, who was President of the American delegation to the first Hague Conference, said that he was still a promoter of peace and that, in spite of the fact that international law was being trampled upon by the powers, he hoped and believed that "men will look back upon this present European war with horror and disgust that will make them hate war and desire only peace in the future.

"Nevertheless," he said, "I would have a nation of men who are peaceable, but who are ready for war. We are plunged into relations not only with Europe, but with the Pacific world, and we must be in a position so that we can have peace even if we must fight for it."

To Nurse Russian Wounded.

The Scandinavian-American liner Hellig Olav sailed at 2 P. M. yesterday for Copenhagen with 37 first, 40 second, and 350 third class passengers. Among them was Miss Flora Ribboul of Martinez, Cal., who is going to work as a Red Cross nurse in Russia. Christian Helweg Harsen, Governor of the Danish West Indies, was a passenger with his wife on his way to Denmark for a vacation.

HITS DOUBLE SKIN OF THE LUSITANIA

TESTIFIES IN TITANIC CASE

Captain Turner of Torpedoed Liner Blamed Commander of Titanic for Speeding Through Ice.

A deposition made by Captain William T. Turner of the Lusitania the day before he sailed on the last trip was placed in evidence yesterday in the Federal District Court before Judge Mayer in connection with the application by the Oceanic Steam Navigation Company, known as the White Star Line, to limit its liability for damage arising from the Titanic disaster. The date of trial of the suit has not been fixed, and the proceedings yesterday consisted, in addition to the filing of Captain Turner's testimony, in the examination along technical lines of Edward Wilding, a Managing Director of Harland & Wolff, shipbuilders, of Belfast, Ireland.

Mr. Wilding was called here as a witness for the White Star Line, and, as he wanted to return to Ireland and the trial had to be postponed on account of the summonses to the interested parties in England having been lost with the Lusitania, his testimony was taken before trial by the consent of all parties.

Captain Turner was examined, as an expert, in the offices of Hunt, Hill & Betts on April 30. He told at length of the bulkheads of the Lusitania, and brought out the fact that the transverse bulkheads extended from 17 to 34 feet above the water line. In addition, there were longitudinal bulkheads and a double skin. He said the decks were watertight, so that they would act as a kind of lid to the compartments formed by the bulkheads and prevent water getting in from above.

Mr. Wilding was inclined to cosider that the distance between the inner and outer skin of the Lusitania might have been the reason for her rapid sinking. The distance was three feet, and he thought that as the water collected between the skins as the liner heeled over it made the list still greater. A double skin he held to be dangerous, unless divide by transverse bulkheads.

When the Olympic was reconstructed after the Titanic disaster the space between the inner and outer skins was made only seven inches, and when the Vaterland was rebuilt, about seventeen inches. Questioned about the bulkheads of the Titanic, Mr. Wilding admitted that they did not reach far above the water-line, but he held that no bulkheads would have saved her if six compartments had been filled. Cross-examined on this point, he expressed the opinion that the Olympic, which has its bulkheads carried higher up, would not sink even if six of its compartments did let in water.

Much of Captain Turner's testimony dealt with the navigation of liners through ice-fields.

"In your opinion," he was asked, "was it prudent to steam at twenty knots when ice was reported ahead?"

"Certainly not." Captain Turner replied, "if the ice was anywhere near. It would be foolish to do so."

C. C. Burlingham, counsel for the White Star Line, tried to examine Captain Turner on the construction of liners, but the witness replied that he knew nothing about such work.

"I don't bother about their construction," he said, "as long as they float. If they sink I get out."

Mr. Burlingham suggested that much had been learned concerning ice since the Titanic disaster.

"I don't know where," said the Captain.

"Have you learned nothing by the accident?" persisted the counsel.

"Not the slightest. It will happen again."

The regular hearing of the Titanic suit is expected to begin next month.

GERMAN-AMERICANS PLEDGED TO OLD GLORY

Herman Ridder Says They Can Never Fight Under Any Flag But Stars and Stripes.

In this morning's Staatz-Zeitung, Herman Ridder, in a signed article, after accusing unnamed newspapers of seeking to influence President Wilson by printing news and opinions that may tend toward war, says:

"The German-Americans must suffer in any conflict between the United States and Germany pains of which their fellow-citizens can never know anything. It is rather a time for showing them the greatest degree of consideration. They have fought to uphold the flag in the past and they will do so again, against any enemy whatsoever. They deserve the fruits of past loyalty, until they have forfeited the right to claim them. There has never been but one flag under which the German-American has fought. There never can be but one flag under which he will ever fight. And the flag is the Stars and Stripes."

No War Goods on Carpathia.

The agents of the Cunard Line announced yesterday that there was no truth in the printed report that the Carpathia had loaded war munitions before sailing last Saturday night for Montreal. She was chartered by the British Admiralty, presumably to carry Canadian troops to England, and left this port in ballast.

MISS ADDAMS FOR PEACE.

Thinks President Wilson Can Keep Us Out of the Conflict.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 13.—Jane Addams, who is here after the Woman's Peace Conference at The Hague, in an interview with a NEW YORK TIMES correspondent tonight, while expressing horror over the sinking of the Lusitania, said she hoped America would find a way of honorably avoiding war. Miss Addams did not hesitate to say she thought America ought to keep out of the fight of nations.

"The thought of the Lusitania is too awful to dwell upon," said Miss Addams. "It strikes too near the heart. But when it comes to saying that America ought to go to war on the Lusitania episode, I don't agree. America ought to be the one great nation to keep clear of the war. When this terrible conflict is over all Europe, indeed, all the world, will look to America to act as the balance in the readjustment of the relations of the nations.

"President Wilson, I believe, by stern, sheer diplomacy, unyielding yet dignified, will be able to avoid a crisis. President Wilson showed what he was able to do in keeping America out of war with Mexico, and I believe America appreciates it. In view of the horrors witnessed in this European war, as an American I want to see my country always adopt an attitude that will make her stand out among the nations as an exemplar of right and justice. At the same time I want to see her true to her own convictions.

"I believe all this can be accomplished if we stay out of the war, while maintaining an unflinching attitude against barbarity. I am a great admirer of Mr. Roosevelt, but I am unable to agree with him that the United States should take sides with the Allies. Colonel Roosevelt would take the bit in his teeth and go in for war. I think we will be able to accomplish infinitely more by staying out. If America is embroiled what nation after the war will advance the work of healing the scars of battle? America certainly could not hope to do it if she stained her own hands in the bloody conflict."

Miss Addams thought for America to enter the war would have the effect of rending asunder the peoples of different nationalities among the 100,000,000 whose sympathies are now divided.

"It would be much like a civil war without the nation's actually being in arms against itself. It will be a sad day for America if it ever happened."

"NEW AID TO ENGLAND."

Cologne Gazette Says We Would Protect Ships by Being on Them.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, May 13. — The London Times prints the following from the Cologne Gazette:

"By means of the press England is now calling for the help of the big brother across the ocean. America has not only been guilty of shameful violations of neutrality by the one-sided deliveries of goods to the Allies, but now they want to claim that their very presence on British ships constitutes a shield against German undertakings against British shipping.

"Here again they are taking sides. England has since the beginning of the war brought German shipping to a standstill. Germany is now trying to make reprisals with those means that are at her disposal.

"Now come the Americans and want to insist that shipping shall go on undisturbed just to please them, such claims deceive nobody in Germany."

AUTO KILLS LITTLE GIRL.

Driver Carries Mother with Dying Child to the Hospital.

Special to The New York Times.

PASSAIC, N. J., May 13.—Lillian Minsky, 5 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Minsky of 79 Second Street, Passaic, was injured by an automobile in front of her home tonight and died in the General Hospital a few hours later. She was returning home with her mother when she saw several playmates on the opposite side of the street and ran from the sidewalk to join them, getting in front of the car of Edgar Switok, an undertaker, of 31 Parker Avenue. As Switok swerved his motor toward the sidewalk to avoid her Lillian ran back toward her mother. She was knocked down and a wheel of the auto passed over her chest.

Switok stopped his auto, and, picking up the girl, ran with her to the office of Dr. Charles Machlin at 82 Second Street. There she became unconscious. With Mrs. Minsky holding her daughter in her arms Switok took them both in his motor to the hospital. The child died without regaining consciousness. Switok went to the police station, where he was held without bail on the technical charge of homicide.

NAVY PRIEST WARNS NATION TO BE READY

Father Gleason Says Our Sailors Will Do Their Duty, Though Never So Weak in Armament.

NEVER SUCH A 'SULTRY' TIME

Chaplain Appeals for Support for Our Forces at High Mass for the Fleet.

"Whenever the men of the American Navy have been called upon to serve their country they have always brought back home with them peace with honor. I hope this will always be the case," said the Rev. Father Matthem T. Gleason, a Navy Chaplain, in the course of a sermon he delivered to the officers and men of the Atlantic Fleet in St. Patrick's Cathedral yesterday morning.

The occasion was a solemn high mass for the men of the fleet. In the absence of Mgr. Lavelle, the rector of the cathedral, who was in Buffalo attending the funeral of Bishop Colton, the Rev. Father, Martin welcomed the fleet's big Catholic delegation.

The Rev. Father Eugene E. McDonald, U. S. N., Chaplain of the superdreadnought New York, was the celebrant, and was assisted by the Rev. Father Brady, U. S. N., of the superdreadnought Arkansas. The Rev. Father John J. Byrne was Master of Ceremonies and Mgr. Hayes was in the sanctuary. The music was supplied by the cathedral choir.

"We celebrate today," said Father Gleason in his sermon, "the ascension of our Lord into heaven. It is the last act of the great drama of redemption. One fact stands out in this work of redemption, and that is the fact of the courage and loyalty Christ brought to the duty which He took upon Himself. He did His duty to the end.

"We have an important duty to perform to God and to our country. Unless we fulfill our duty to God there will be no lacking in our duty to our country. The real Christian sailor realizes that he is placed here to serve his own soul first and that in doing this he will increase the value of his services as a citizen.

"Whenever the men of our navy have been called upon to serve their country they have brought back peace with honor. I hope this will always be the case. We expect from our fellow-citizens the support which is our due. I regret to say that there are many citizens who dream that we are constantly active to get the country into trouble, to seek a reputation even in the cannon's mouth. There never was a greater misrepresentation. During the twelve years I have been connected with the navy I have never met an officer or a man who wanted to go to war or who was afraid to go to war in a just cause. It is our duty to serve the country as the representatives of the people in Washington may direct.

"I regret to see so many people in the United States who beguile themselves with the thought that the age of war is over. There never was such a sultry time. There never were times in which the balance between peace and war was so delicately adjusted and we so weak in armament and defense. However, if we are sent out in the performance of our duty, the officers and men of our fleet will give a good account of themselves, and let the people afterward count the cost of their own foolishness."

Father Gleason concluded with the admonition that wherever the men of the fleet may go they must remember their duty to God and that if they remember that duty the blessing of God will go with them.

LONE SINGER ANNOYS HOTEL

McAlpin Detective Subdues Stranger Who Warbled "Killarney."

The sound of a raucous voice caroling out "Killarney" floated over the mezzanine balcony at the McAlpin yesterday morning about 9 o'clock, and caused people in the lobby to put their hands over their ears. House Detective Allyn, who heard the sound, immediately detected that a lot of h's were missing from the words, while a lot of others had been thrown in promiscuously. He went up at once.

At the piano in the drawing room sat a thick-set man, wearing a dark coat, gray trousers, low shoes, and a cap, bawling out the song at the top of his voice.

"Just 'avin' a bit of fun," explained the musician. "They robbed me on the bowt of £1,800, and Hi am just about to go down to the Hinternational Bank and draw a thousand more."

"You'd better go back to your hotel and have a little sleep," suggested the detective.

"Blime me 'otel! Hi've got a suite of rooms over there, and Hi've got my wife and a valet, Hi 'ave. And what do you think 'appened last night? They told me Hi was unconventional because Hi didn't 'ave me evening clothes on. Stopped me from going on the floor to dance, by Jove! Yet my valet, who 'appened to 'ave on his claw'ammer, 'e was dancing like a lord."

Helpless otherwise to break off the conversation, which had proceeded to musical accompaniment, the detective called in five housemen and told them to "move the piano out of the building."

"Blime me, is my voice as bad as that?" demanded the visitor. "Hi was out singing for the sailors on the fleet last night, and am now a little 'oarse. But, I say," he said, as the detective led him gently in the direction of the elevator, "don't you mistake me for a Henglishman. Hi'm, Hirish, Hi am."

LONDON, Friday, May 14.—The cold from which King Constantine has been suffering for the past week has turned into pleurisy, says Reuter's Athens correspondent. The King, consequently, will be unable to attend to State business for some time.
